If your family room is slated for a new floor, slate it with Armstrong vinyl.

The Coronelle® Collection, by Armstrong.

The handsome slate floor you see in this family room isn't slate at all. It's sheet vinyl—Armstrong Vinyl Corlon®. It's one of an exciting, new collection of patterned floors that look like the real thing—The Coronelle Collection.

Each Coronelle Vinyl Corlon floor is beautifully textured and colored like the original—Spanish tile, brick, slate, or a brick-and-wood combination. So you get all the beauty of the real thing along with all the advantages of vinyl.

The new Armstrong Time Payme Plan makes it easier than ever to o an Armstrong floor. Ask your Armstro retailer for details. He's listed in the Y low Pages under "Floors." And to ma sure you're getting an Armstrong flo look for the Armstrong name.

itzgerald Kennedy . . . As We Remember Him was ed at $14.95. From a standpoint of price alone, sion in the generous introductory offer above is sual. But the lasting value of this remarkable es far beyond price.

g like it has ever been attempted before. It was by 53 of the people who were closest to Presinedy throughout his lifetime. Through tran- of actual conversations with his family, nd intimate associates, through unpublished hotographs and speech drafts from family files, ume relates his life as remembered and shared who knew him best.

the books about Kennedy, this is the one you rn to and cherish for years to come.

y joining the Literary Guild at this time, you ou wish) include it as one of your choices of introductory books...all four for one dollar, ping and handling. Because of the limited supis volume, you are urged to act promptly.

nembers were informed about this book before blished – and those who ordered it received it at the special members' price of $6.95 instead of the publisher's price of $14.95. This is typical of the guaranteed savings Guild members enjoy on important new books: at least 40%, often as much as 60%, from the prices of the publishers' editions.

In recent months, for example, Guild members were offered new best-sellers such as Washington, D.C. for $3.50 instead of $6.95 in the publisher's edition, Rosemary's Baby for $2.95 instead of $4.95, The Arrangement for $3.50 instead of $6.95.

These books were described before publication in the Guild's free monthly Preview. Members who wanted them received them immediately upon publication.

Your only membership obligation is to accept four Guild selections or alternates during the coming year, from among the 20 or more which will be offered each month. And for every four you buy, you may choose a free bonus book.

Look over this rich and varied selection of books. There has never been a better time to try membership in the Guild. To join, send no money; just fill out and mail the coupon today.

Note: Guild editions are sometimes reduced in size, but texts are full-length — not a word is cut!

Please enroll me as a trial member of the Literary Guild and send me the FOUR books or sets whose numbers I have printed in the four boxes below. Bill me only $1 plus shipping and handling for all four. If not delighted, I may return them in 10 days and this membership will be canceled.

I do not need to accept a book every month — only as few as four a year — and may resign any time after purchasing four books. All selections and alternates will be described to me in advance in the Guild's free monthly "Preview," and a convenient form will always be provided for my use if I do not wish to receive a forthcoming selection. You will bill me the special Guild price for each book I take. This will always be at least 40%, often as much as 60%, below the price of the publisher's edition. (A modest charge is added for shipping and handling.) For each four monthly selections or alternates I accept, I may choose a free bonus book from the special bonus catalog.

"I have not yet, indeed, thought of a remedy for luxury..." BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

Original wood engraving by Bernard Brussel-Smith

"I am not sure that in a great state it is capable of a remedy; nor that the evil is in itself always so great as it is represented.

"Suppose we include in the definition of luxury all unnecessary expense, and then let us consider whether laws to prevent such expense are possible to be executed in a great country, and whether, if they could be executed, our people generally would be happier, or even richer.

"Is not the hope of being one day able to purchase and enjoy luxuries, a great spur to labour and industry?

"May not luxury, therefore, produce more than it consumes, if, without such a spur, people would be, as they are naturally enough inclined to be, lazy and indolent? To this purpose I remember a circumstance.

> "The skipper of a shallop, employed between Cape May and Philadelphia, had done us some small service, for which he refused to be paid. My wife, understanding that he had a daughter, sent her a present of a new-fashioned cap.
> "Three years after, this skipper being at my house with an old farmer of Cape May, his passenger, he mentioned the cap, and how much his daughter had been pleased with it.
> " 'But' (said he) 'it proved a dear cap to our congregation.'
> "How so?"
> " 'When my daughter appeared with it at meeting, it was so much admired, that all the girls resolved to get such caps from Philadelphia, and my wife and I computed that the whole could not have cost less than a hundred pounds.'
> " 'True', (said the farmer) 'but you do not tell all the story. I think the cap was nevertheless an advantage to us; for it was the first thing that put our girls upon knitting worsted mittens for sale at Philadelphia, that they might have wherewithal to buy caps and ribbons there; and you know that the industry has continued, and is likely to continue and increase to a much greater value, and answer better purposes.'
> "Upon the whole, I was more reconciled to this little piece of luxury, since not only the girls were made happier by having fine caps, but the Philadelphians by the supply of warm mittens."

"Poor Richard" put his finger on this simple key to an expanding economy over 200 years ago. So, isn't it strange to find people—well-meaning people—in this country today who still frown on the luxuries most of us work to enjoy? They want the government to restrict the broad range of products and services in the marketplace. And to cut back on advertising because it makes people want things they don't need.

Don't need? Well, of course, no little girl needs a bow in her hair. Yet, Mary Murphy will forever top off the apple of her eye with a ribbon. And where would the ribbon factories be without her? And the ribbon clerks?

It is just this very human desire to add the little frills to our living that has created our jobs and our prosperity . . . the ribbon factories and automobile factories and television factories . . . and the most dynamic economy in man's history. Shouldn't we be careful about how we tinker with the forces that have created all this? Because the simple, troubling truth is, nobody knows for sure how far you can regulate our economy without damaging it.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

Mrs. Creighton, in another era, would probably wear stiff black silk, carry a dowager's gold-knobbed cane, and rule the roost like the old lady in the Jalna books. Her short Pucci, buckled flats, and little-girl figure cannot conceal the fact that she thinks of herself as a manager of men and of women.

"I'd have sworn," she said to me as she entered her granddaughter's living room, "that I just heard you telling Nathalie to carpet the swimming pool."

Nathalie Benson, indebted to Grandma for her old carriage house with all its charm and attendant headaches, including pool, ailing filter system, and blue cement sidewalks that drink up marine paint like sponges, just looked at me.

"No, Mrs. Creighton," I said, "but we plan to carpet the pool aprons in a lovely green."

"Oh," said the grand dame sniffily, "in this day of affluence, I should have thought you might use a few old Sarouks."

Nathalie remained calm. "Grandma," she said, "we're talking about a new kind of carpet, made of a new kind of fiber, called—what is it again?"

"It can be polypropylene," I answered rather grandly, "in the olefin family of chemicals. Or it can be of Saran, which is polyvinyl chloride, or of good old vinyl, or acrylic, as in Orlon. So far as the swimming pool is concerned, it's a bonanza from the heavens, whatever it is. It's tough as nails but lightweight, impervious to moisture and mildew, quick drying, capable of being permeated with all sorts of non-fade colors, and most stains can be easily removed from it."

"It's also abrasion-resistant," added Nathalie, presumably thinking of her little boys and their skate boards, "and if more than seven manufacturers have latched onto these new materials and are making carpets of them, that's good enough for me. Imagine how nice it will be around the pool. We won't scorch ourselves on that hot cement, and the green will look as if the lawn goes right to the pool's edge. They say you can lay it with double-faced adhesive tape, and leave it out all winter."

"Have you two chemical technicians found out how it comes—by the yard or by the bale?" asked Mrs. Creighton, with a flicker of interest.

"It can come in broadloom widths," we answered simultaneously. I added, "Three, six, nine, and twelve feet wide. But . . ."

Mrs. Creighton broke in. "It seems to me, if it's all that great, that you could use it in all sorts of other places too. What about a porch, what about a walkway to the house—a red carpet!"

"Precisely," I said. "It's naturally great for kitchens and playrooms and nurseries—wherever there's rough goings-on underfoot and the chance of staining. Some of it comes with a cushy foam-rubber backing for use indoors—the rubber doesn't last in the sun and weather—and it's just as easy to install."

"In fact," said Nathalie, "some of the soft-surface rubber-back stuff now comes in twelve-inch-square tiles, and we're planning this pink-and-blue harlequin pattern for the baby's room."

Mrs. Creighton's eyes narrowed. "You do get carried away, my dear. What'll it all cost?"

"Oh, Grandma! You know I'm as big a penny-pincher as you are. The outdoor stuff costs about six to seven dollars a yard, foam back broadloom is a few cents more, rubber-back tiles are less than a dollar apiece. It will cost less than anything else I could use to cover these chippy old softwood floors."

"I suppose your floors would have to be level to start with," commented Mrs. Creighton.

"Surely," I said. "If they're not level, you level them off with plywood. But all you need is a smooth, strong base that is dry when you install the carpet."

"Do you think I could find an avocado green?" asked Mrs. Creighton. "I'd like to try some of this on the billiard room. But I'd use it as a wallcovering. If it's as miraculous as you say it is, it ought to deaden sound."

"It does that, too," I answered.

"Well," said she, "what will they think of next?"—M.G.

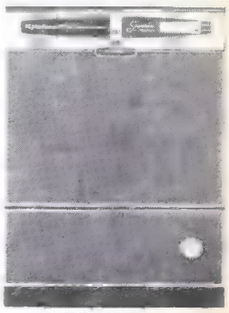
Does your kitchen get that stuffy feeling after a big meal?

You can solve the problem fast with a KitchenAid dishwasher.

Just put all this stuff in a KitchenAid and suddenly your kitchen's not stuffy anymore.



A KitchenAid will hold all of it. At once.

Yes, everything from the big roaster to the ¼-teaspoon measuring spoon.

For when it comes to capacity, a KitchenAid is a giant among dishwashers. There's no wasted space inside. No empty corners. No notches cut out of racks.

There's a place for everything. Even special places like the Small Items Basket for your little things. And a roomy Silverware Basket.

What's more, a KitchenAid is easy to load. And unload. You can pull both racks all the way out. Even adjust the upper rack if you need a little more room. And complicated loading patterns? We don't have any.

So if you've had your fill of a stuffy kitchen, or a cramped dishwasher, get a dependable KitchenAid dishwasher. The more you put in it, the more satisfaction you'll get out of it.

See your KitchenAid dealer (check the Yellow Pages.) Or write KitchenAid Dishwashers, Dept. 7DB-7, The Hobart Manufacturing Company, Troy, Ohio 45373.

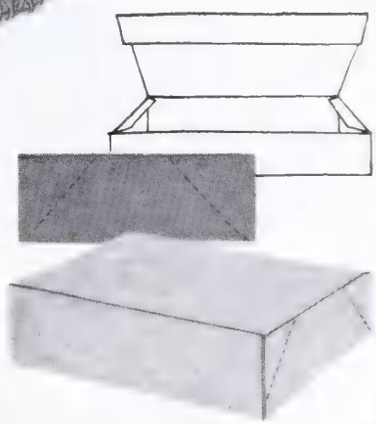
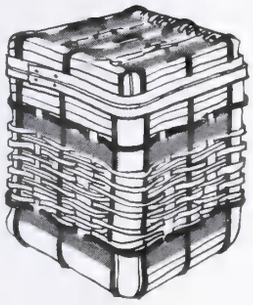
Rust is expensive...

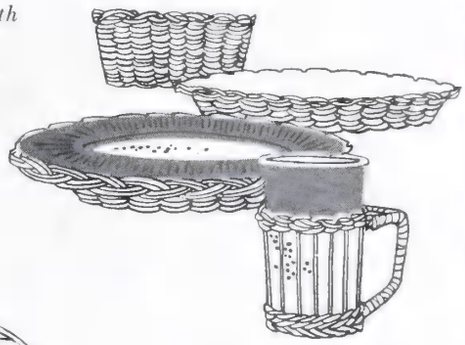


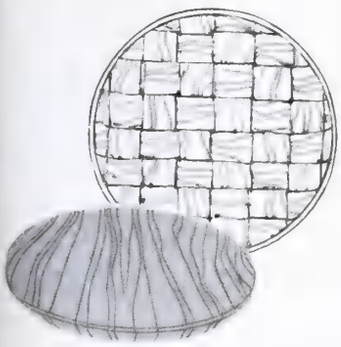
3-IN-ONE isn't.

Rust can ruin tools overnight . . . and it doesn't have to happen! Spray on a little 3-IN-ONE Oil regularly, and you can keep rust from getting started. Or help clean it off, if it's already there. And 3-IN-ONE cuts down wear on moving parts . . . things last longer. When you spend good money on a power drill, garden tools, sewing machine, bike, etc. . . . shouldn't you spend a few cents to protect them? Regular. Electric motor oil. Or this handy new spray can. 3-IN-ONE . . . it's wise insurance.



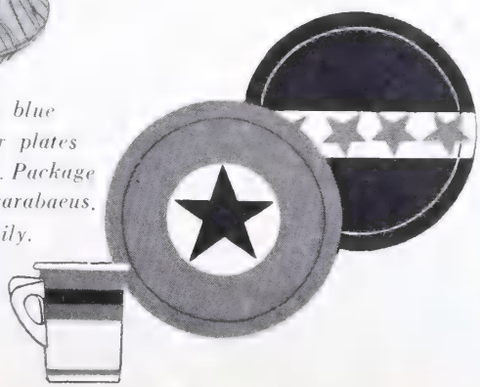
Two baskets from Sweden: top one, 14" round, is woven of split wood, lined with gingham. $24. Georg Jensen. Double-lid willow basket. $15. Bonniers.





For packing lunches, colorful East House paper boxes in assorted sizes. Package of six, $2. From Azuma.

Carryalls of colored woven bamboo with hinged covers. Nest of two, one 7" and one 6". $4.50. From Scarabaeus.



Tiny wicker baskets with matching holders for paper plates and cups are attractive accessories for picnics. From 35¢ to 45¢ each. Joel Morton Company.

Walnut-stained "Weavewood" plates are dishwasher-safe. $3.50. From Hammacher Schlemmer. Plates, natural pine, from Sweden. 86. Bonniers.

Red, white, and blue star-theme paper plates by Smith-Lee Co. Package of 20, $1. From Scarabaeus. Paper cups by Lily.

Be sure the quality and construction are "top drawer." Look inside the top drawer.

You can tell a lot about furniture quality by simply opening the top drawer. If you see the manufacturer's name there—a name you recognize—you can be sure of all this:

That the furniture is built to last. So you're not just making a buy for today, but a sound investment for the future. You can be sure the style and design are authentic, too. And you'll know you're getting good, honest value for your money.

A brand name means quality and integrity. It's the manufacturer's way of telling you that he stands behind his product 100%. With furniture though, you have to snoop to find the brand name. It may be tucked inside a drawer. Or on the underside of a table. Or hidden beneath the cushions of a sofa. Or on the end of a mattress.

That way, the brand name never detracts from the furniture's appearance. But it does add greatly to your confidence and satisfaction.

GREEN EGGS AND HAM
by Dr. Seuss

Using only simple words, Dr. Seuss shows how even something as unfamiliar as green eggs and ham is worth trying—it may turn out to be delightful!

Bennett Cerf's ANIMAL RIDDLES

"When is it bad luck to have a black cat follow you? . . . When you are a mouse!" Of course! Mr. Cerf's irresistible riddles combined with Roy McKie's lovable illustrations are sure to captivate your child.

Illustrations with * © 1960 by Dr. Seuss

Once, most children's books were too hard for beginners, or so dull they took the edge off a child's desire to read. Then DR. SEUSS created "The Cat in the Hat"—a hilarious tale written in easy words a beginner can read on his own. Children, parents and educators loved it. Now the idea has been expanded by Dr. Seuss and other gifted writers and artists into a planned program of irresistible BEGINNER BOOKS.

A whole parade of sunny, funny books in words young children know or can easily learn!

The value of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM goes far beyond the glorious illustrations and fascinating stories. Each book makes reading more fun and easier than ever, because it is written in simple, basic words your child has already learned or can quickly pick up. The stories tell about such wonders as dogs who can ski, a polka-dot animal who wants to get into a zoo, and a bird who thinks an airplane is his mother. No wonder TV and comic books soon step aside.

Four isn't too early for BEGINNER BOOKS. Read them aloud to pre-schoolers and they become even more eager to start reading on their own. At five, six and seven, the books help a child discover how much fun reading is when he can do it by herself. Eight isn't too late. That's when reading problems can arise and create other tensions about school. BEGINNER BOOKS restore the relaxed attitude and confidence so important to progress.

BEGINNER BOOKS are durably designed to grow with a small child. They are in at least eight colors and large readable type. As a member of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK every month and you will be billed only $1.49 plus a small mailing charge, instead of the publisher's catalog price of $1.95. After four monthly selections, you may cancel any time.

Our Introductory Trial Offer

Prove the benefits of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM by accepting the three books shown here—a $5.85 value at the publisher's catalog price—for $1.49. Even this small investment in your child's reading and school progress carries no risk. Ten days' trial must convince you the program will stimulate your child's appetite for reading, or you may return the three introductory books and owe nothing. If we prove our point, have you ever seen a greater bargain? Fill out and mail the attached card (or coupon below) today!

Please enroll my child in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM and send at once the three BEGINNER BOOKS pictured here (a $5.85 value at the combined publisher's catalog price) for which you will bill me only $1.49 plus a small mailing charge. If not delighted, I may return these books within 10 days and owe nothing. Otherwise, each month thereafter, you will send my child another BEGINNER BOOK for which I will pay only $1.49 plus a small mailing charge (instead of the publisher's catalog price of $1.95). I may cancel enrollment any time after purchasing four monthly selections.

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU THESE THINGS

By HELEN McCULLY

What is Pascal celery? A variety of beautiful green celery, which now constitutes the bulk of the celery sold in this country, in contrast to a few years ago when all available celery was bleached. The joy of a good bunch of celery is that every part of it is usable. The leaves may be added to the stock pot (don't let the market man cut them off, as they are prone to do when you're not looking), the big outer ribs cooked, and the hearts served fresh, stuffed, or plain. Refrigerated, covered in a polyethylene bag, fresh celery keeps extremely well. Available throughout the year. As a change from the ubiquitous parsley, occasionally use a bouquet of celery leaves as a garnish.

Is a stalk of celery the same thing as a rib? No. A rib is one part of a stalk. A stalk and a bunch are one and the same. When a recipe calls for a "stalk of celery," it really means a rib.

How do you judge the freshness of celery? Like beans, a rib should snap easily; all the heads should be fresh, crisp, clean. Soft, pliable branches indicate pithiness; very hard branches, that it may be stringy or woody. If you're suspicious about the interior, separate the branches and look inside.

Why does chicken, meat, or fish broth sometimes turn sour almost the minute your back is turned? Because it's allowed to cool too slowly in too warm a temperature. The faster you can cool off broth (stock or bouillon), soups, sauces, gravies, etc., the less danger there is of bacteria multiplying. The cooling process starts from the outside and works toward the center. If there is a large quantity, such as broth or soup, in a large kettle, the center remains hot a long while, and it takes a good long time for cold to penetrate to the center. Ideally, chilling should be done immediately and, if possible, in small quantities, giving the liquid an occasional stir to speed things up. Setting the pan of liquid in a large pan filled with ice and water (the way you chill Champagne) does the trick quickly and effectively. The treacherous holding zone—and it is treacherous—is from 45° to 120°, when bacteria thrive. A warm kitchen would probably register anywhere from 70° up, obviously within the danger zone. Broth that has been refrigerated, or even frozen, should always be brought to a hard rolling boil and allowed to boil several minutes before being used—again, to inhibit any lurking bacteria.

What is wheat germ? It is the germinating part of the wheat seed which, because it contains wheat germ oil, is discarded in milling white flour. A rich source of the B vitamins, vitamin E, iron, phosphorus, potassium, and other essential nutrients, it is used as a breakfast cereal, but it is also used in cooking.

Regular readers of these informative notes, who may have clipped them over the years, will be happy to know that Helen McCully has collected them into a handsome book that has the same title as this column. The 308-page book has well over 1,000 entries and has just been published (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $6.95).

Motorized INSECT TRAP

Plus $2.00 PP. & Hdlg.

THE SUREST, SAFEST INSECT TRAP MADE! COMPLETELY UL-APPROVED...NO OPEN WIRES

NO WORK—NO OFFENSIVE ODORS
NO HARMFUL INSECTICIDES

This new, completely automatic insect trap attracts and kills scores of species of night-flying insects—including mosquitoes and other annoying pests. No harmful sprays or powders—nothing to harm children, pets, birds. Penetray, one of America's great corporations, has perfected this NEW and IMPROVED insect trap. Effectively lures pesky night-flying insects with its miracle "black light." Draws them into its powerful fan chamber and deposits them into a handy, ESCAPE-PROOF, disposable bag. Completely safe for children, pets, birds. Protects you—can not harm others. Unit weighs only 4½ lbs. But its powerful cyclonic action has amazing capacity. Can destroy thousands of bugs a night. No odors, no danger, no fuss. Use it for summer comfort on lawns, patio or pool-side. Inconspicuous unit is a compact 11" high, 9" diameter. Hangs on pole, side of house, anywhere. Has 2" hanging ring for easy attaching. Lifetime sealed-in motor uses less current than a 40-watt bulb. Comes with 8 ft. weatherproof cord and season's supply of disposable plastic bags.

GUARANTEED BY PENETRAY CORP. AND BY US!

There is a way to hit long, straight balls AUTOMATICALLY every time

NEW TRU-DRIVE TEES

THIS IS IT!

This new tee design gives you almost unbelievable results. Long straight drives every time!
It's simple—because the tee is based on aero-dynamic principles that prevent the lateral spin which causes hooks or slicing.
The tee cups your ball (see illustration). When the club hits the tee all the power behind it goes into getting the ball away—and no matter where the club connects, the power goes behind the ball—gets it away faster, straighter. You may hit a few yards to right or left, BUT YOU WON'T HOOK OR SLICE.
Saves you money on balls, too! You don't mark them up, you don't cut or mar them. You don't lose them so easily—and it speeds up your game.
Order at our risk. If you are not completely satisfied—if you are not absolutely delighted with what it does for your game—return for a full refund.
Tru-Drive Golf Tees are only $1.98 for pkg. of 5. (They last for years if you don't lose them). But get enough for your partners and friends. Special offer for 3 sets—$5.75 postpaid. Order now—impress your golf partners next week-end!

UNBREAKABLE LONG NAILS!

in only 3 minutes!

Now you can "build on" long nails — to lengthen short, broken, split or bitten nails. Long Nail is a marvelous new liquid with a plastic base that takes only minutes to apply over your own nails—sets in an instant. Not a temporary paste-on nail. Long Nails are stronger than your own. Can be trimmed, filed and beautifully polished with little effort. And they strengthen weak, thin nails too. Only $1.95 postpaid.

COURTING CANDLE HOLDER

According to legend, this charming black wrought iron candle holder held a special significance for romantic youths. When a lad came calling on his lady fair, his time with her was measured by a candle's length. If the parents liked the boy, they lit the 6" candle; if not, a teardrop candle was lit. When the candle died, so did the boy's hopes. An enchanting gift for friends with daughters, and you'll want one too. 8½" high.

BOGUS DIAMONDS

Diamond prices are ridiculous. What we're offering is a new stone that sparkles like a diamond and is almost as hard as a diamond.

These bogus diamonds are called Caribbean Gems, and they sell for a fraction of what real diamonds cost. $40 per carat as opposed to over $1000 per carat for diamonds.

The nice thing about Caribbean Gems is that only a trained jeweler can tell these bogus diamonds from the real thing.

Caribbean Gems are so hard and so long lasting that we can offer this special guarantee. Anytime you'd like to trade up to a larger size, just send back your old Caribbean Gem for a full trade-in. No money lost.

Send for our free catolog.

All of our bogus diamonds come in 14 Karat gold settings. And we'd like to show you what they look like.

A WINE PRIMER

By CREIGHTON CHURCHILL

Wine, the fermented juice of the grape, has been a source of pleasure for man since Biblical times. Today, with such an endless variety of wines available, the beginner can hardly be blamed for being perplexed. New to the world of wines, hesitant to plunge into a sea of confusing labels and inhibited perhaps by the "wine snobs" nesting, like jealous setting hens, on their sophistication, he may feel it is all too much for him– and never begin.

Yet there are in the world of wines a few easily learned guideposts, which are charted below. One thing is sure, even for a beginner: The wine you like is the wine you should drink, regardless of what others may say. And, of course, you should experiment continuously. Eventually your taste will broaden to include many different ones; but the primary purpose of wine is enjoyment, and this should never be forgotten.

Serving wines

One of the potential wine lover's principal inhibitions involves the serving of wine, especially when entertaining at home. But actually there are only a few rules:

1. Wine is better served in a tumbler than in a thimble. Evaporation over a broad surface enhances a wine's flavor and bouquet. There is no need to buy a special type of wineglass for every type of wine. All-purpose wineglasses —suitable for red, white, rosé, and sparkling wines—are not expensive. Preferably, they should be of clear glass, tulip-shaped, about two inches wide, and hold six to eight ounces. In serving wine, the glass should never be much more than half filled. This concentrates the bouquet and brings it to the nostrils.

2. Bottles bought for serving on a specific occasion should, if feasible, be allowed to stand upright in a cool place for a few days. Wines are harassed by journeys, however short. A little quiet rest brings back their self-confidence.

3. Red wines are better if aired (uncorked) about an hour before the meal. Very old red wines should be decanted: Pour the wine slowly and carefully into a decanter. Stop when the wine starts to show cloudy signs of dregs.

4. If one serves two or more wines, a white is more effective and tasteful before a red; similarly, a younger or "lesser" wine before an older.

5. White and rosé wines should be cooled (but not heavily chilled); red wine is best at slightly below room temperature. (Beaujolais may be served cooler.) Champagne is usually best when well chilled.

Selecting and storing wines

In selecting wines, rely initially on the advice of a well-recommended dealer, or better yet, several dealers—the best and quickest way to learn the names of reliable producers or importers. (One dealer is limited in the number of producers he carries.) Familiarity with the names of importers will be invaluable. The good ones rarely buy wines of poor years.

In storing wines, lay the bottles on their sides, preferably in a relatively dry storage area with a temperature of about 55 to 60 degrees, without bright light and free from vibration. White wines mature faster than reds and should be closer to the floor (coolest).

In the following sections on wines of various areas and countries, we have listed the best vintage years—where vintage years have meaning. Vintage charts have their uses, especially for the wines of France and Germany, but there are exceptions. Some wines of poor years from good producers may be excellent bargains. Heed your dealers' advice in this regard.

In general, white wines are drinkable between the ages of two and six years; red wines between four and ten (the very finest of Bordeaux, Spain, Portugal, Italy, and California often profit by more age). Beaujolais should be drunk young (one to three years). Rosés and sparkling wines are ready to drink when bottled.

Only a few still white wines improve appreciably in the bottle. These notable exceptions are French whites, such as the dry Montrachets, Corton-Charlemagne, and white Hermitages; liquorous French Sauternes and Barsacs; and sweet German Beerenauslesen and Trockenbeerenauslesen.

Foods (and drinks) with wines

The maxim that red wine goes with red meat, white wine with white meat is a sound rule – but not infallible. Chicken and veal, for example, taste good with both; pork and ham are better with sparkling wines. In fact, rosés or sparkling wines are often most practical, harmonizing with almost all dishes.

Beware of highly seasoned foods with wines: Overdoses of Tabasco, pepper, curry, pickles, and even vinegar do not mix with wine.

The best drinks before a meal with wine are light apéritifs such as dry Sherries or dry white Ports or vermouths (on or off the rocks)—or Champagne. Cocktails or drinks containing sugar or fruit juices kill the palate.

Wines of France

General

For more than a millennium, France has been the Queen of all the wine-making lands. Only her whites are challenged (in quality) by German whites—and by a comparatively scant few of these. In the field of reds, France has no true peers.

French wine labels, unfortunately, are not distinguished for either their clarity or consistency. Two invaluable rules of thumb: (1) look for the words Appellation Contrôlée or the initials V.D.Q.S. on a label—both are a guarantee of an authentic wine; (2) remember that the simpler and less ornate the label (and/or the bottle), the better the quality of the wine is apt to be. An honest French wine needs only to be described on its label in terms of four elements: the name of the vineyard or locality, the official appellation, the year, and the vintner's name and address. Any additional superfluous information may mean trouble; likewise, excessively flamboyant or unnecessary forms of packaging.

French vintages vary from very poor to very great as a result of quirks of weather. The recent best years for France, as a whole, were 1952, 1953, 1955, 1959, 1961, 1962, and 1964. Vintages of various localities sometimes vary slightly from these (see sections below).

Wines of Bordeaux

Bordeaux, the largest wine-producing part of France, is in the southwestern corner of the country. Its best wines are fragrant, dry reds, and very sweet whites. Bordeaux reds, for eight centuries, have been colloquially called "clarets."

Under the Appellation Contrôlée terminology, Bordeaux wines are classified in three general classes, in this rising order of excellence: (1) Bordeaux, a wine (or blend of wines) from any part of the whole area; (2) regional or subregional wines, usually blends. The best have the appellations of Médoc or Haut-Médoc (red), St.-Émilion (red), Sauternes (white), Barsac (white), Graves (red and white) and Pomerol (red); and (3) château (or Cru Classé) wines, from officially recognized, classified vineyards—labeled with a château name in addition to the geographical (Class 2 above) appellation.

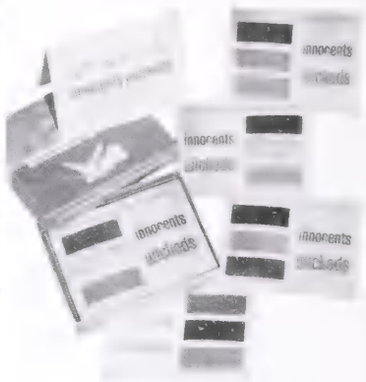
Of the reds, the Médocs are the aristocracy; the Graves are heavier and coarser; St.-Émilions and Pomerols are smoother on the palate, more flowery in bouquet, and shorter-lived. Graves whites are dry and slightly watery; the classic Sauternes and Barsacs are sweet wines with a nutty flavor, best with desserts.

Bordeaux reds, especially in the château (top) class, improve for many years in the bottle. The best recent years are 1949, 1952, 1953, 1955, 1957, 1959, 1961, 1962, and 1964. Often the regional wines (Class 2), which mature sooner, are better wines (and buys) in off-years.

Wines of Burgundy

Burgundy, a comparatively small wine district in central France, produces fragrant reds and dry whites qualitative equals of Bordeaux. Reds from the northernmost towns, or communes (Gevrey-Chambertin, Chambolle-Musigny, Vougeot, etc.) are traditionally the finest; but excellent, less expensive ones come from Nuits-St.-Georges, Beaune, Pommard, Volnay, Chassagne-Montrachet, and Santenay. The best whites stem from the southernmost communes of Meursault, Puligny-Montrachet, Chassagne-Montrachet, and the northern Chablis district.



Since most Burgundy vineyards are divided among many owners of varying ability and integrity, the name of a reliable producer on a label is of paramount importance. Personal experimentation (patronizing several dealers) will soon lead you to recognize the names of reliable producers.

Red Burgundies mature faster than red Bordeaux. Recent good years are 1959, 1961, 1962, and 1964. Appellation Contrôlée terms for those of good quality should include the words Grand Cru or Premier Cru, or a vineyard name.

The best known wines of southern Burgundy are white Pouilly-Fuissé, white Mâcon Blanc, lusty red Beaujolais, and two smooth reds called Mercurey and Givry—all less expensive than Burgundies proper. Here the words Grand Cru and Premier Cru are not authorized by law, and are therefore meaningless.

Wines of the Rhône

The "classic growths" of the Rhône are not as high-priced as wines of Bordeaux and Burgundy. They are predominantly red: Côte Rôtie, Hermitage, Châteauneuf-du-Pape, and St.-Joseph. Sturdy, dark-colored, they need at least three to five years of age. White Hermitage and white Châteauneuf-du-Pape are the outstanding exported whites.

Vineyard names on Rhône wines are rare, but indicate quality. Vintage years are of little importance, although 1955 and 1961 were exceptional. The terms Grand Cru, Premier Cru, etc., again are not authorized and only reflect on the integrity of a vintner.

Traditionally the finest pink (rosé) wines of France come from the communes of Tavel and Lirac, near Avignon on the lower Rhône. But pleasant reds, whites, and less "winy" rosés are made in Provence (or the Var) to the south. These wines usually bear the initials V.D.S.O., with the best vineyards entitled to the term Cru Classé.

Wines of the Loire

The most popular dry, "flinty" whites of the upper Loire are Pouilly-Fumé (not to be confused with Pouilly-Fuissé from southern Burgundy) and Sancerre. They are good substitutes for the more expensive white Burgundies.

Vouvray, made farther down the river, is a still wine, medium dry—also made as fine sparkling (mousseux). Other white Loire wines are Savennières (dry) and sweet Anjous, such as Quarts-de-Chaume. Anjou rosés are medium-dry and inexpensive. Muscadet is a dry white with a lemony tang, one to be drunk young. Loire reds (Chinon, St.-Nicholas-de-Bourgeuil, etc.) are inexpensive and extremely good. Recent best years for the Loire are 1959, 1961, 1962, and 1964.

Wines of Alsace

Alsatian wines, from France's easternmost province in the Rhine watershed, are all white, and usually dry. Noted for their individualistic fragrances, the best are named varietally for the grapes from which they are made (in this case, Germanic ones): Gewürztraminer, Traminer, Riesling, Sylvaner. The better wines, though sweeter, are usually labeled Réserve or Grand Réserve. Vintage years correspond with the Loire.

Wines of Germany

By comparison to France, German produces one-tenth as much wine—all the best of it white. The German themselves consider their sweetes wines the finest, and price them ac cordingly: Spätlese (from late-picke grapes); Auslese (picked even later) Trockenbeerenauslese (the sweetest Beerenauslese (definitely sweet) Cabinet or Kabinett means a wine o which the producer is especiall proud.

The finest German wines, mad from the Riesling grape, come fro the Rhine (labeled Rheingau) an the Moselle (Mosel). The forme have more body and character; th latter are more delicate and aromati Good Rheingau villages include J hannisberg, Erbach, Hattenheim, an Hallgarten; for Mosels, look fo wines from Bernkastel, Piesport Graach, and Zeltingen.

Other lesser German regions ar the Rheinpfalz, the Rheinhess (wines from Nierstein especially rec ommended), the Nahe, and Franken the latter shipped in flagonlike bo tles called Bocksbeutels. Liebfrau milch, Moselblümchen, Schwaze Kat (Mosel), and Frankenwein are com mon regional blends, usually ove priced, though the first three ar favorites with beginners.

Once one gets the hang of them German wine labels are the most e plicit on earth. One learns the nam of the region, the village, the vine yard (if any), the producer, the yea often the grape and sometimes eve the cellar cask number. Two valuabl guides to quality: an insignia of black eagle surrounded by the initia V.D.N.V.; and the term Staatsweing güter—meaning state-controlled.

Most German wines are not shippe until ready to drink, though man expensive sweet ones improve in th bottle. Recent good years are 195 1959, 1961, 1962, 1964, and 1965. B ware of wines from intervening year

Wines of Italy

Nine-tenths of Italy's vinous ou put (larger than France's) is r wines. Confusingly, some Itali wines are named after the grap others for places or vineyards—th latter always better. A good rule thumb: Remember that the followi five (all red) are grape names—Ba bera, Nebbiolo, Dolcetto, Freisa, an Grignolino—and assume that others are place or vineyard name

An exception is the case of Chian —the name of a small area often boo legged by a vaster, inferior ou Legitimate Chiantis are label Classico and bear a small seal sho ing a black cockerel. The very fine (slightly more expensive, but wor every extra penny), made by a han ful of traditional Florentine vintne are usually shipped in standard B deaux bottles. A superior Chian needs age: Ten years is not too lon di Jesi. Two nice rosés are Lagrein Rosato and Chiaretto.

Vintage years on an Italian red wine usually mean the producer hopes one will have the patience to allow it sufficient age. Whites do not profit with age.

Wines of Spain and Portugal

Iberian wines are made from indigenous grapes and by old-fashioned methods. The reds require much aging to come into their own. One and all, their low cost is probably their greatest merit (except for Portuguese rosés, which are outstanding).

The best reds of both countries are usually labeled Reserva. Other terms, meaning "very old" or "selected," generally indicative of quality, are: Garrafeira (Portuguese) and Escogida (Spanish).

Portugal excels in rosés and white Vinho Verdes, the latter tart and refreshing. Dão reds are passable, everyday "table wines"—harsh when young, but softer with age.

Indisputably the best wines of Spain (even so, easy on the pocketbook) are from the northern Rioja region. The finest bear the trade names of traditional houses (bodegas). Beware of inferior Riojas labeled with quasi-French names: "Spanish Claret," "Chablis," etc. They may or may not be bargains.

Vintage years for both countries are not guideposts to quality—only the year of a Reserva is meaningful.

Wines of South America

South American countries make (and drink) tremendous quantities of wines, but the only country that exports them in any quantity (or quality) is Chile. Chilean reds (named varietally) include Pinot Noir (Burgundy) and Cabernet (Bordeaux); but Chile really excels in clean, dry whites and rosés. Good producers are Undurraga, Carmen, Conchalí, Concho y Toro, Tocornal, and Santa Rita. White Pinot Chardonnay, Sylvaner, and Riesling are all excellent bargains. Chilean qualitative label terms include Reservado, Especial, and Gran Vino—the highest.

Except for bottles labeled "Rhin" (Rhine), Chilean generic types (tipos) are to be avoided.

Wines of California

California produces almost 90 percent of all U.S. wines. They are classified as generics (carrying European names such as "Burgundy" and "Chablis") or as varietals ("Pinot Noir," "Riesling"). Under California law a varietal may be so labeled if it contains as little as 51 percent of the juice of the grape concerned—but the best producers tend to make them as a pure product.

Especially if made in the Napa, Sonoma, or Livermore Valleys, or in regions surrounding San Francisco Bay, the varietals are much in demand, and many of the finest are never found outside the state. While not identical to their European counterparts, certain of them compare quite favorably: Cabernet Sauvignon (with age, comparable to a fair Bordeaux); Semillon and Sauvignon (Bordeaux whites); Chenin Blanc (Vouvray); Gewürztraminer (Alsace). Other excellent ones, more individualistically Californian, are Pinot Noir, Gamay, and Zinfandel (red); and Johannisberg Riesling, Pinot Chardonnay, and Sylvaner (white). Good rosés are made from the Grenache and Gamay grapes, though often labeled simply as Vin Rosé. Among the more notable producers of California wines, both varietals and good generics, are Beaulieu, Inglenook, Charles Krug, Souverain (all in the Napa Valley); Buena Vista (Sonoma); Wente, Concannon (Livermore); Almadén, Paul Masson (Santa Clara-San Benito). California varietal producers usually put years only on bottles of which they are proudest.

Wines of New York and Ohio

Like California wines, wines from New York and Ohio are also labeled both as generics ("Burgundy," "Chablis") and as varietals. The most successful varietals (made from non-European grapes) are Niagara (white), Delaware (red and white), Isabella (red), and Catawba and Diana (both white). In the last decade, spectacular developments have been made in New York in growing European wine grapes—though as yet the wines from these grapes are still in very limited production. The six outstanding producers in the East are: Gold Seal, Widmer, Taylor, Great Western and Konstantin Frank—all in the Finger Lakes district of New York—and Meier in Ohio.

Sparkling wines

Most French Champagnes are fermented white juices of both red and white grapes, usually containing wines of two or more years. To gain their sparkle, they are refermented in the bottle (méthode champenoise) and blended by secret formulas of the individual producers. Vintage Champagnes—those with a year—are considered the best, also the most expensive. They are made only in the infrequently very good years.

Champagnes and the other European sparkling wines are graded in order of dryness: Brut (the driest); Extra Sec (dry); Sec (sweetish); Demi-Sec, Demi-Doux (sweet). Other meaningful terms are Blanc de Blancs (very dry, made exclusively from white grapes); Première Cuvée (from the first and best pressing of grapes); English Cuvée or English Market (producer's best quality).

Other sparkling wines—French (mousseux), Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish—may be good, less expensive substitutes for Champagne. The best are Lacryma Christi and Asti Spumante (Italian); Raposeira (Portuguese); Castellblanch (Spanish).

California and New York State Champagnes often compete in quality with many imported sparklings. Among the better ones are Kornell, Almadén, Korbel, and Paul Masson (California); Great Western, Taylor, and Gold Seal (New York). As a rule American Champagnes are made only in two grades: Brut (dry) and Extra Dry (sweeter). ■

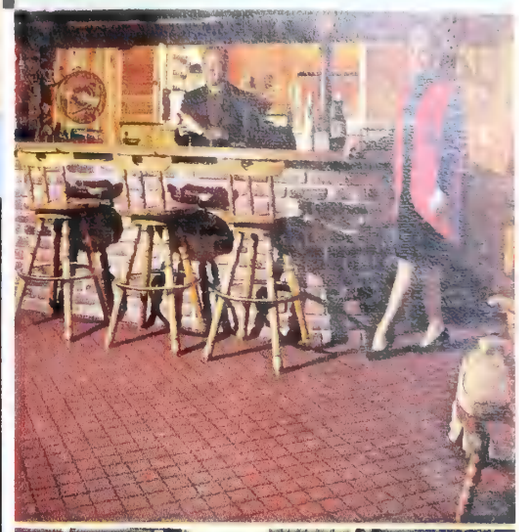
About camping vacations—the refreshing adventure of living close to morning mists and starry nights in America's great outdoors

Camping brings out the best in you, according to America's dedicated fraternity of regular campers, said to number more than 16 million a year. They claim that all sorts of untapped virtues spring to life once you've pitched your tent by a sunset lake. People are kindlier, families grow closer, children wax healthier, and Father's status is supposed to acquire unimaginable gloss when it is shown that he can lash down a tarpaulin and make a fire burn.

Be that as it may, to dwell for a while close to the enduring wonders of nature can be a reassuring refreshment when the world of bricks, mortar, and tensions seems too much with you. Whether your preference is for ferny forest, purple desert, alpine meadows, or lonely seashore, there are 20 million acres of National Parks waiting to work their therapy, 14 million acres of true wilderness under the aegis of the Forest Service, and uncounted thousands more in state parks and private camping grounds in virtually every state in the union. The beauty is there for the taking, fees for the use of developed campgrounds rarely exceed $3 a night, and in many cases there is no charge at all. Developed grounds can offer such cushy comforts as hot showers, restaurants, commissaries, laundries, and concrete foundations for pitching tents, to say nothing of whole areas for trailer camping. Most government-controlled campgrounds are available on the basis of first come first served, but privately run sites must be reserved in advance.

The camping gamut ranges from the primitive to the downright sybaritic. Back-packers are those die-hard, rugged, hiking ones who carry their gear on their backs and settle down wherever the view or their fancy invites them. The sybaritic coterie travels by land yacht, owned or rented, a conveyance that is at once car and thoroughly equipped living quarters, which lets you cruise and stop where you will, running water, ice cubes, cooking utilities, and cushioned sofas all laid on and sometimes commodious enough to accommodate six or seven adults.



Most campers ply a middle ground, and with great diversity of accommodation and equipment. Regard the sometimes confusing wealth of camping equipment on the market, and you'll get an inkling of the many modes you can choose from. The mind boggles at the variety in tents alone, from the puppiest pup tents to Jordan-almond-colored masterpieces, regal enough to suggest Camelot or the scalloped pavilions of the Field of the Cloth of Gold. (Continued on page 124)

WHAT'S REALLY HAPPENING IN CHINA?

(China may never be the same. A new Generation has come of age)

When Niels Refsgaard designed his new china for Dansk® we named it "Generation" because we thought it might start something.

Among the things it has already started is a pleasant little debate on how to use it. Some say Generation is at its best when taking the pretentiousness out of a dinner of pheasant and wild rice. Others think it's just the thing to add a casual elegance to cold cuts.

We only know that it seems at home with people who seem at home. No matter what they serve. With the silver candlesticks or the cast-iron candlesticks. At champagne suppers or beer buffets.

Generation is made in a workshop (not a factory) like all hand-thrown china. Each piece is hand-glazed. And no pieces can ever be identical. No two will even sound alike, though all when flicked with a fingernail, sound the clear ping of fine bone china or porcelain.

The speckles that mark Generation are random, too. They show where minerals have been burned away in the kiln.

To see all the shapes Dansk's Generation comes in — from place settings to casseroles to serving pieces — you should have the new Dansk catalog. It also shows 493 other designs; everything for the smart tabletop. Just send 25¢ to Dansk Designs Ltd., Dept. CF, Mt. Kisco, N. Y. 10549.

THE YOUNG EXCITEMENT

Report to you on the Design Revolt: London. Art upheaval: U.S.A. New houses by young architects for very young families with few visible roots from the generation behind. New musical prowess. A view of what the new generation chooses to buy, which shows it to be another kind of generation. (There will be one hundred million of the "under 25's" in three years.) Articulate. Educated. Worldly. Independent. Mobile. Inventive. Questing. Intense. Dedicated. Often affluent. With an acute sense of value. Of comfort. Fun. Taste. Nowness. Along with the high winds of change, we venture to show you some idyllic picnics, a glimpse of new Toy-Furniture, new backyard Happening equipment for the generation which before long will be calling this Young Generation . . . the Older One. Fair enough?

Special Report from London:

YOUNG DESIGN REVOLUTION

Not since the ebullient days of the 18th Century has British home-furnishing design so vigorously burst the seams of convention with such assertive inventiveness. Youth has taken over the home scene in a design revolution every bit as forceful as the fashion upheaval on Carnaby Street, and perhaps even more far-reaching. A covey of young designers—none is over 40—are having done with staidness, oatmeal color, and the worship of the antique for tradition's sake. With bold, heady color, rollicking op patterns, with chrome, plastics, plywood, paper, and forms that solve perennial problems with materials of our own time, they are filling the homes of contemporaries and young-in-heart elders with liveliness and experiment.

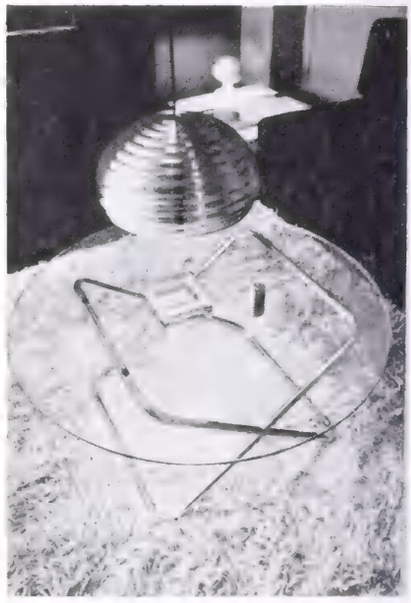
Astonishingly, public awareness of this New Wave dates back little more than three years to the opening of Designer Terence Conran's first Habitat shop in Chelsea. Its refreshing innovations—bare brick walls, dashing pop fabrics, surprising furniture in bleached and painted woods—made it an instant success. Most significant—manufacturers and retailers, used to dismissing the designs of the young as impractical nonsense, took this as their cue to seek out and try the young designers who could bring such vitality to the furnishings market. Now, vigorously on the scene are these young names to remember, the work of several already imported here: William Plunkett, Julie Hodgess, Keith Albarn, Peter and Juliet Glyn-Smith, Peter Murdoch, Willy Landels, George and Godfrey Grima, Robin More-Ede, Nicholas Frewing, Noel Fleury, and the ten blithe design spirits whose talents we report on the next five pages.

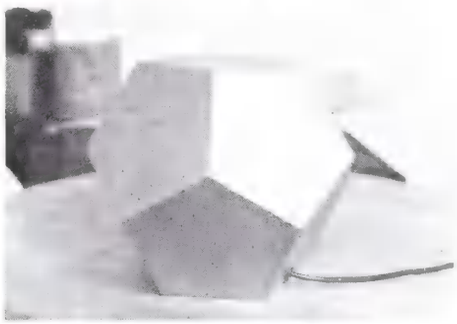
ALL PHOTOGRAPHS ON THIS POSITIVELY BY MICHAEL BUTLER

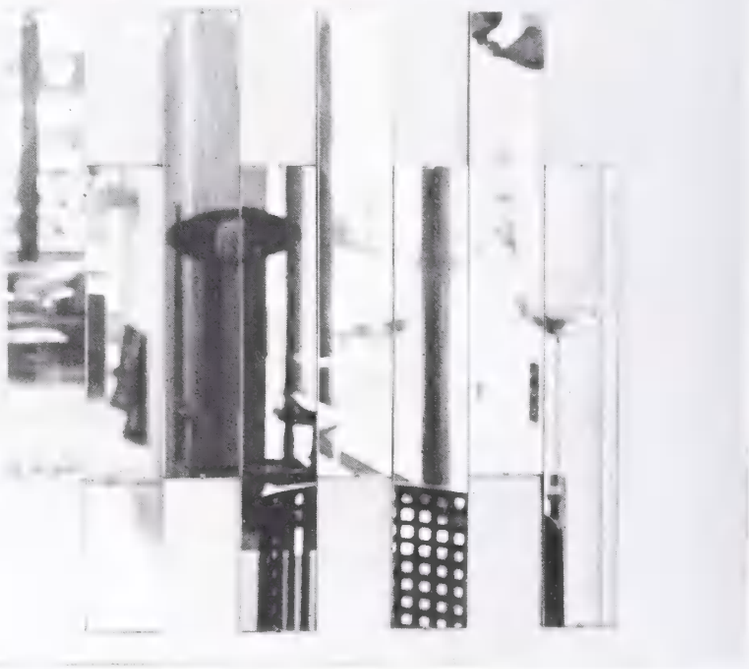
Max Clendinning, Associate, Royal Institute of British Architects, 33, a prime crester of the New Wave, designed his first knockdown, snap-together plywood pieces because he could find no such practical, movable furniture for his own Belfast pied-à-terre (far right). London's Liberty's took at once to his ingenious, sculptural stuff, which he painted in bright colors and upholstered in off-white velvet and brilliant tweeds. It was a smash hit.

PROTOTYPE OF THE VERY NEW

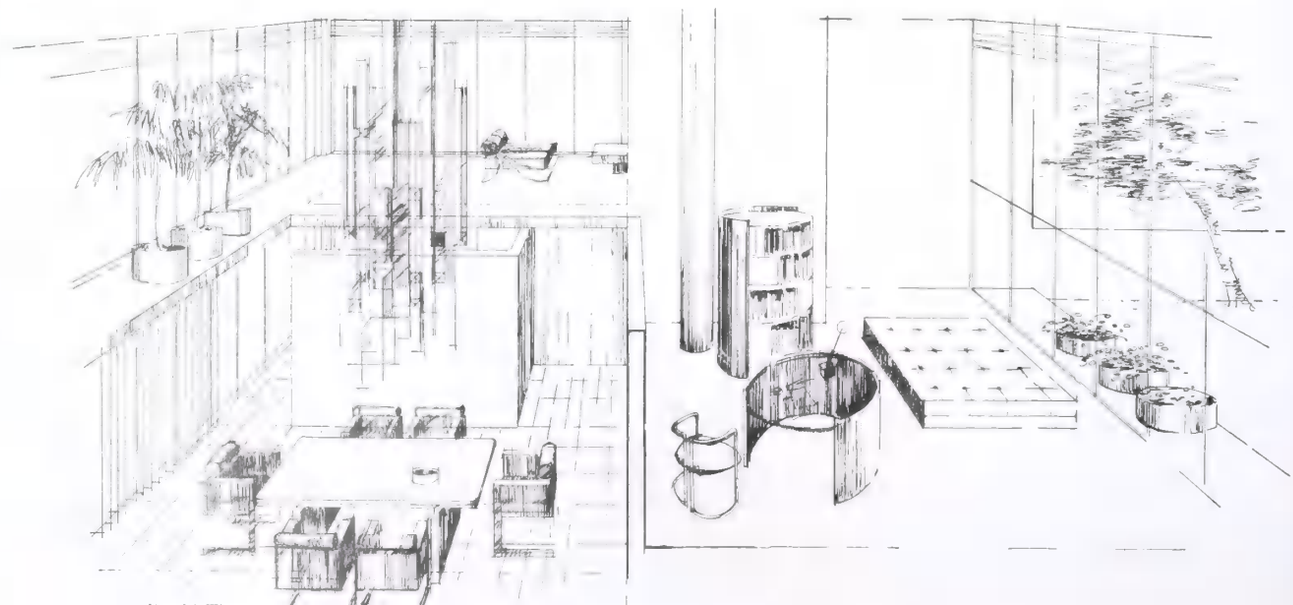
Clendinning's latest (above and below), is Maximus—plump, loose cushioning of polyester foam wrapped in Dacron, covered in tweed, set on a trampoline base. Molded frames of rosewood, ash, or African cherry plywood come knocked-down, joined with chrome pegs. Two-, three-, or four-seated sofas are simply made by bolting chairs together. Right, Clendinning designs in a London model house, decorated by Mary Gilliatt. Furniture is by Race.







SCULPTURAL, LIGHT AND SEE-THROUGH



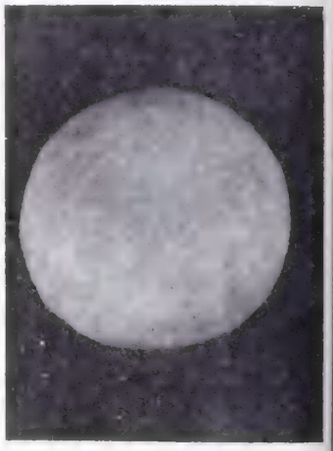
Jean Schofield and John Wright, a young design duo, who first fueled the new movement with sculptural plywood furniture lacquered in primary colors, have now moved into metal, glass, and leather. Preoccupied with optics, they've made lamps of steel polyhedrons which can pile up, creating op sculpture, below, and a wall mirror of irregular strips to break up reflections entertainingly, so that a room reflected is its own decoration. They work with a young architect, Derek Walker, in the simultaneous design of interiors and architecture, as in the total-look Serenson house, shown in aerial perspective, below.

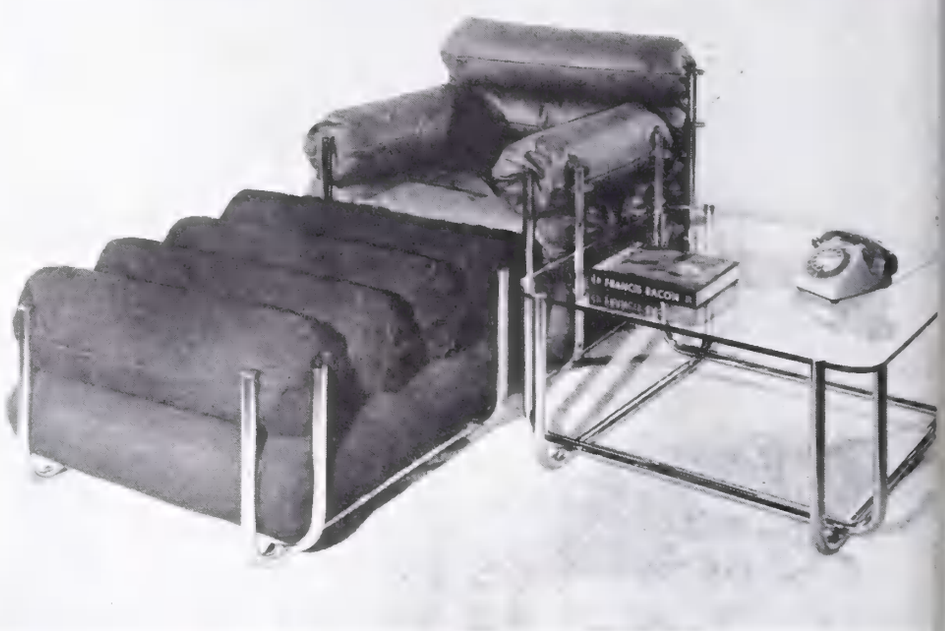
PLASTIC/PLYWOOD LEATHER/WOOD

John Monk, 26, designs for London's new Datum shop, whose three young owners take realistic notice of all budgets in search of exciting design. They supply the with-it group with Monk's painted, plastic-top coffee table and plastic-cushioned tub-stools (which can also be end tables) at $24 and $18 respectively. At a richer price tag, they purvey his squashy glove leather and upholstered elegance, reminiscent of the thirties, as much new design is. Monk works also in chrome, but approaches all materials with the eye of an engineer.

INSTANT SUCCESS: PAPER CHAIRS

David Bartlett, 26, specialized in glass and graphics at the Royal College of Art, but found challenge in paper, conquered it in highly original kraftboard and fiberboard laminations which bend and slot together, forming these amusing and comfortable tub chairs. The cardboardlike material is covered in a skin of polyethylene, in red, yellow, or white, or patterned in Liberty prints. Hailed by England's Council of Industrial Design as a significant step forward in the new look, it is lightweight, inexpensive, easy to live with, a good candidate for peregrinating households. Lord & Taylor has it in New York.



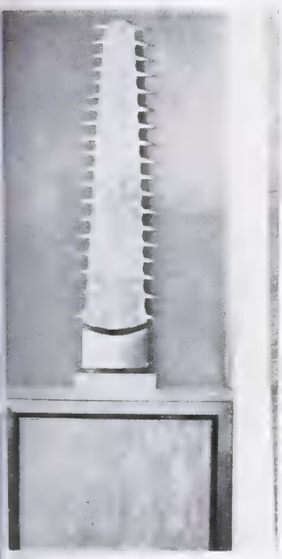


FANTASY IN POLYURETHANE

Roger Dean, at 22 in his second year at the Royal College and engrossed in visions of future environment, gave fancy its head, came up with a thoroughly original solution to seating—this marvelously cushy, spineless "Sea Urchin" chair that fits the sitter however he sits in it. Dean, like most of these young English designers, is fascinated by the wondrous materials of this era, and so he made his chair of twelve polyurethane foam sections, like the segments of a tangerine, joined together with contact adhesive, covered, for the sheer fun of it, in orange Acrilan acrylic fake fur.

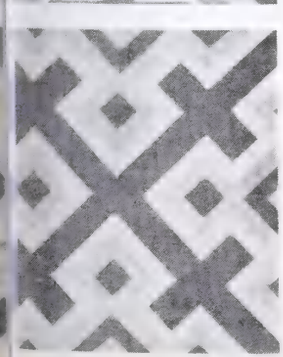
GAMUT: CHIPBOARD TO DOWN CUSHIONS

Bernard Holdaway, 30, husband of fabric designer Shirley Craven and father of two small boys, developed his first furniture in chipboard, to withstand the onslaughts of the very young, lower right. Lacquered in red, white, blue, green, purple, or yellow, with contrasting or matching vinyl cushions, it comes with a pot of enamel for touching up the inevitable chips. In contrast, Holdaway's latest is the "Trawden" group, above, a magnificent exercise in opulent materials, elegantly economical in design. Cushions of chair and ottoman are supple leather, down-filled, set into the simplest bracketing of chrome tubing. Glass-top table, like the other pieces, is 26" square, a module that assures grace no matter which way the group is placed.



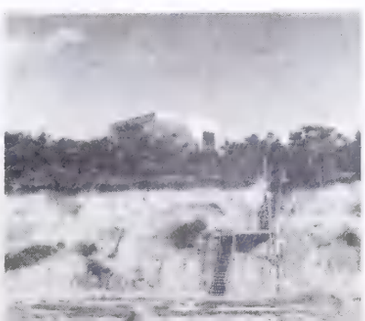
JIGSAW CHAIR, WALL SCULPTURE

Carol Russell, 29, a lady of versatile talents, designs jewelry as well as furniture and teams with young Julie Hodgess in the design of interiors. Her fanciful and more than practical knockdown chair is a system of vividly painted wood slabs shaped so that they interlock and form a curvaceous armchair with flat arms as serviceable as end tables. Taken apart, the jigsaw pieces could hang on the wall like bright wood sculpture, ready to be put together again whenever an extra chair is needed. This youthful extravaganza, by no means art nouveau, still has a hint of it.



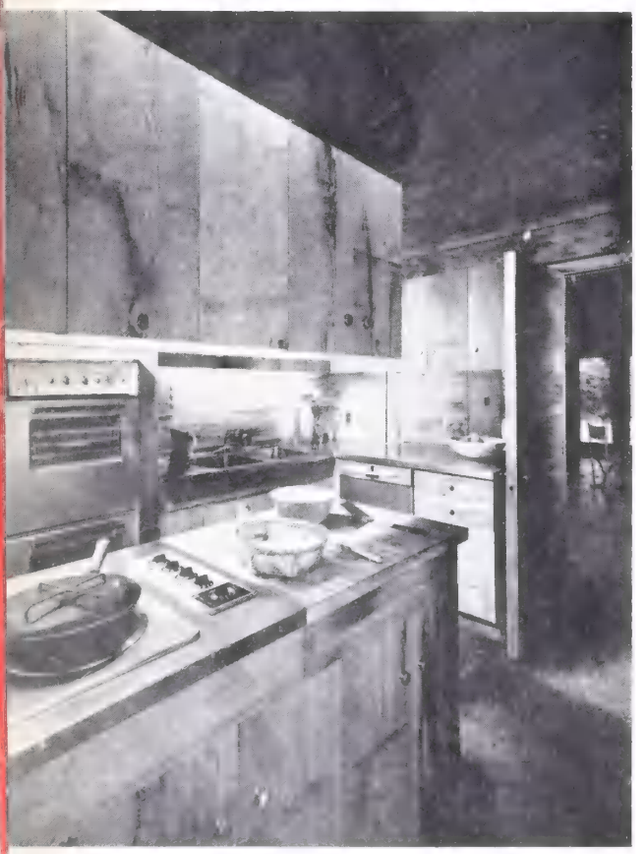
FORESHADOWS— AND SUBSTANCE

Billy McCarty, 29, an American architect who studied with Louis Kahn, was attracted to England by the vitality of its design explosion. He works like an 18th-century designer-architect, treating every detail of a commission—furniture, furnishings, woodwork, moldings. His insistence on quality and substance is already legendary, like his predilection for rare and lasting materials. Top left, "swordfish" sculpture in aluminum and ebony is an urbane heat register. Above and left, his distinguished carpet designs, worked in wool. The stool on which he sits combines leather, nickel, and ebony, and his contemporary way with perdurable elegancies like marble, porphyry, and exotic wood suggests he may be creating antiques of the future.



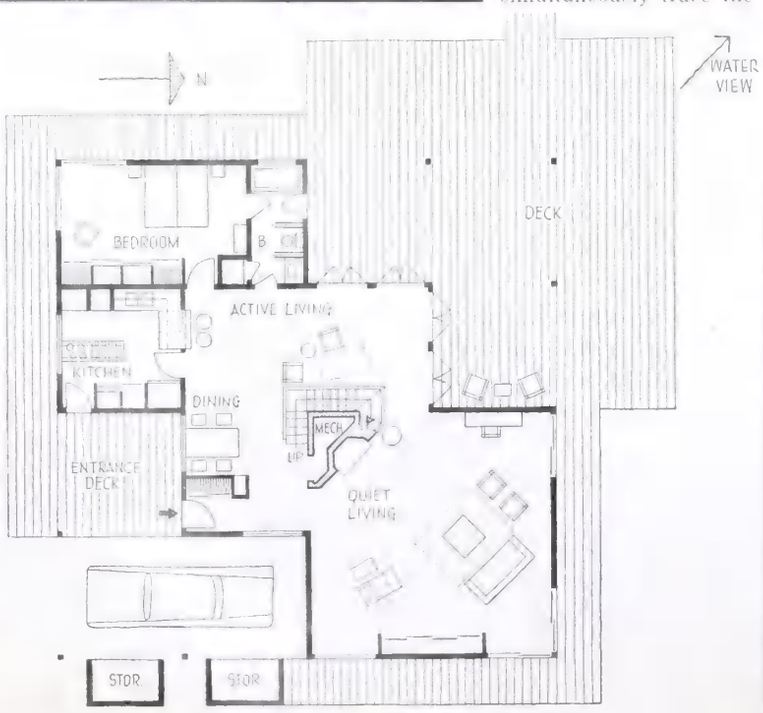
High on a Long Island bluff

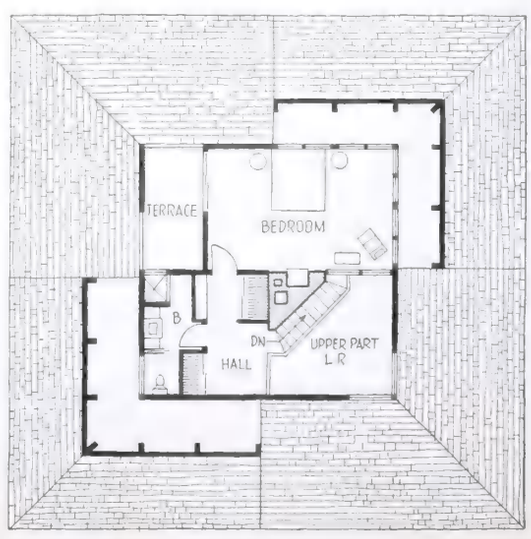
SHINGLE SHELTER



Strong architectural lines carve out a lively, summer-cool and winter-warm environment within the cedar-shingled framework of this vacation house. There is no waste motion in its composition. The big roof canopy shelters the glassed-in, sitting-dining area pictured below. This hoodlike roof keeps out much of the summer sun's heat and wards off driving rain and snow. Yet it leaves wide open a magnificent bluff-top view of Gardiners Bay off the eastern end of Long Island—a panorama that is almost directly behind the camera in the scene opposite. The square tower rising above the roof encloses the second-floor master bedroom, bath, and outdoor deck. This deck is seen again above, from within. Exposed to the sky as well, it makes a most private sunning terrace and observation post. Glass doors from the bedroom lead to it. In all, this is a wonderfully imaginative solution for a youthful client by a young architect, 35-year-old Alfred De Vido of New York. Some of the initial stipulations were extra room for weekend guests; minimum maintenance; comfort; protection from occasional high winds and storms. Delivered as ordered—with a sense of excitement. More

Built of spruce planks, deck is spaced for drainage. Walk, foreground, leads to private beach. Below: The house, perched atop a 30-foot bluff, as seen from the bay. Right: Looking out to the deck from one section of the great informal space that is the first floor. At right, the stairs start up, hugging the central chimney mass. Bedroom floor is above two-story ceiling. Fireplace is one of three.





Above: From the dining table, view through the windows is south to woods. It's cool and shaded—a pleasant atmosphere for summer meals. In winter, the table is often moved before the small fireplace behind the stairs (see previous page). Both locations are convenient to kitchen.

Left: Space is no problem in this trim kitchen, as you see in the plan below. All cabinets and drawers are built with rough-cut cypress boards, as are the walls and doors throughout the house. Equipment and counters are sheathed in stainless steel, and the chopping block is of maple.

Opposite: A massive masonry core and huge Douglas fir roof beams combine to make the central room in this house as magnificent as the great hall of a European castle. In summer, the space is remarkably cool; in winter, reassuringly secure. Within the brick are three chimney flues and a utility room. Curled around the masonry are steps to the second-level bedroom. Triangular clerestory windows capture daylight from beneath the roof hoods, and simultaneously trace the outlines of the two roof slopes.

PARADISE FOUND... ON A 50-FOOT PLOT

By JAMES DELONG

In his immortal paean to the glory of England (". . . this sceptred isle . . . This other Eden . . . this little world. . . . This blessed plot . . .") in King Richard II, Shakespeare suggests that great virtues can abound within the limitations of little spaces. A small space indeed was the slender, densely wooded plot that Architect George F. Reed found shouldered between two existing neighbors in suburban Coconut Grove, Florida. Low in funds and just starting a family, he accepted his modest property's legion of limitations and set out to pluck the virtues from them, proving along the way that Shakespeare was right, as usual. What he achieved is a unique, subtropical microcosm of high-walled open courts and roofed pavilions—complete with total privacy and a free-living control of the native environment—all for a cost of less than $20,000.

The lush old grove of oak, pine, palmetto, and cabbage palms was a leading factor in establishing environmental control. The trees made building more difficult, but Reed removed only those few that stood in the way of structure—the rest were put to work as parasols to temper the heat of the sun and cast infinite shadow patterns on the weathered concrete block walls that were woven among them. The airy, graveled courts are covered with canopies of fiber-glass screening to thwart insects and falling leaves. These shimmery, outdoor ceilings create a soft filtering of aqueous light throughout the compound, and allow even the gentlest breezes to wash the interior space with balms of cooling air. The continuous banks of glass doors, protected by wide overhangs, need be closed only during wind-driven tropical rainstorms. More photographs on next two pages

SIGMAN-WARD

Above: Site plan indicates the simple system of high masonry walls that provide privacy from street and from close neighboring houses. The shaded areas show how three screened open court areas link the three separately roofed pavilions to form a free-flowing continuum of insectless, air-bathed indoor and outdoor living spaces. All trees shown here were part of the original grove of tropical flora.

Left: Seen from the street, the unpainted walls of natural concrete patinaed with lichen and mottled with the stains of varying exposure, merge imperceptibly with the rich growth of native foliage.

Right: The entry garden court swings an inviting hammock. The top courses of ornamental masonry form a novel, reinforced tie beam to resist hurricane forces in compliance with local building codes.

Below: By combining the living and dining areas into one continuous space, a room of nearly 40 feet in length is attained to create the illusion of a much larger house. The roof beams are sawn from city utility poles of 30-year vintage.

EZRA STOLLER

Left: The screen-enclosed play court more than doubles the space of the children's pavilion. The roof structure and screening were built around an existing oak tree.

Below: Even the pool becomes a highly decorative element in the simple scheme of things. By day, its surface throws dancing reflections on walls and ceilings, and by night an underwater light transforms it into a glowing, turquoise lamp. But its principal function is therapeutic rather than esthetic. It is a plunge—a miniature tropical lagoon—where a quick dip at the end of the day, as any native of equatorial clime knows, helps the body to lose absorbed heat.

Right: The lavatory countertop in the master bedroom pavilion is made of laminated teakwood. Reflected in the mirror at the right is the sleeping area with its window wall of redwood jalousies for privacy and control of light and windflow. Seen through the doorway at left: the terrazzo tub and the open well of the shower court.
Below: The warm tones of cypress siding on the walls and of rough-sawn Southern pine boards on the ceilings welcome and unify a random collection of interior furnishings. Included are an Oriental rug, contemporary furniture designed by George Nakashima, and a Tiffany lampshade over dining table.

YOUNG PLACE— FULL OF SUN

To build a house, a small house but with a spacious feeling and full of light, to combine the charm of almost rustic simplicity with that of complete urbanity, to use a color palette in changing sequence, to have comfortable efficiency throughout —not so easy. Yet that is precisely what one young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ray Offenhauser, have accomplished in Pasadena, as proved here and on the next four pages. Theirs is a home-team product. The plan is by Mr. Offenhauser, who also designed some of the furniture, with the interiors showing his wife's skill as a decorator. Vital to their success: High ceilings; long vistas; skylights and glass doors as well as windows; room-to-room shifts in the light, bright, and dark of ceilings, walls, floors, with only the garden room all pale; the placing of the patios and cutting garden—nearby, for visual enjoyment. An arrangement many young parents might envy: The split-purpose garage, half playroom for the Offenhausers' children, Madison and Karen, and the adjoining walled play yard. More

The eye travels across the sheen and matte of the Venetian mosaic tile steps, straight through the living room and the main patio, a stretch of over 100 feet. The long view and the 20-foot height of the entry ceiling give an instant sense of expansiveness. The high-hung Venetian chandelier, wood, with touches of color and time-dimmed gilt. Left: Views of the living room. Height, an eye-lifting 14 feet. Above: The main patio behind the living room, on an axis with the front door, sets up the long sight-line seen on the previous page. The three openings here are outlined by raised stucco frames.
Left: The house makes the most of its triangular plot, with each of the outdoor areas put to use. A case in point, the motor court-play area, easily reached from the playroom section of the garage. Plumbing has been stubbed into this room to simplify its eventual conversion into an additional bedroom and bath.

Right and below: Two glimpses of the garden room, all peace and quiet, sun and greenery. White-on-white: the walls of rough-face Douglas fir, white-washed; the floor, terra-cotta tile, white-glazed, set on the bias for a diamond effect. Emphatic against the prevailing whiteness, the spreading silhouettes of the plants, the upright black of an 18th-century Spanish armoire, the airy dark of an old metal chandelier from San Simeon, Spanish, too, where a pair of little gilded wood Cupids are at play. Picking up the blacks and greens, the cushions on the big sofa, designed by Mr. Offenhauser and covered in snowy vinyl. Adjoining the living room and the breakfast room, this garden room can serve as an alternate to either. Near a window, the buffet table, its white cloth patterned in black grosgrain.

Right: Master bedroom, where a striped mohair rug from Turkey, a pale hemp rug from Holland, French chairs, and a Chinese scroll over the fireplace contribute to a warm and tranquil effect. As permanent sunshine, the wallpaper-covered screens flanking the fireplace, curtains of linen-and-taffeta, terra-cotta lined, at the bay window. The beamed ceiling, a slant of fir, sandblasted for a mellow look.

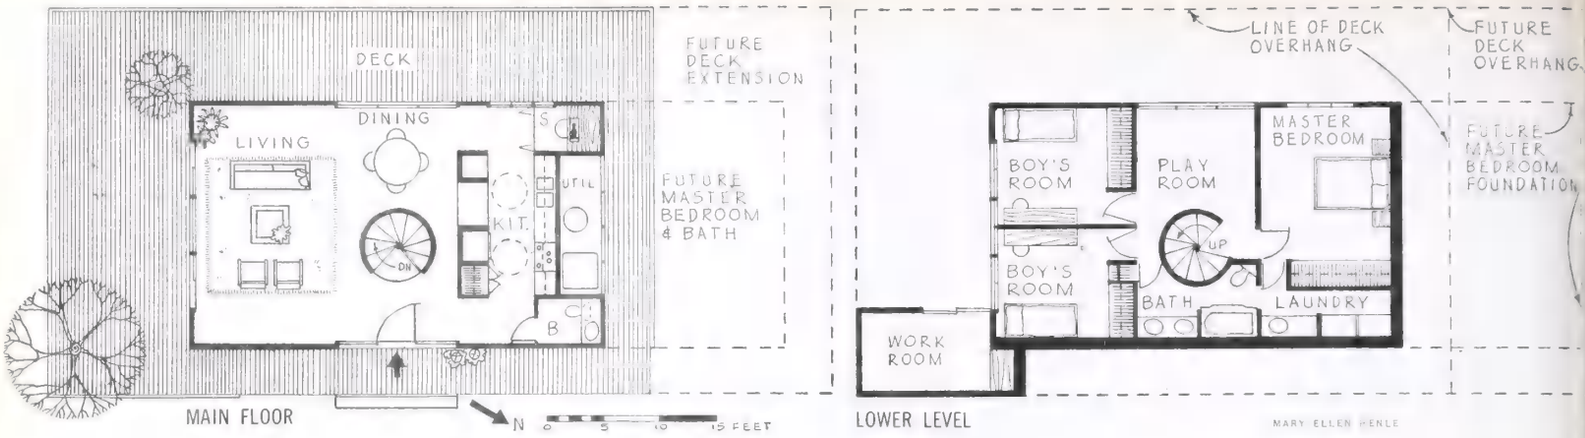
Above: From the garden room, a view into the kitchen and beyond to the breakfast room. Over the sink, sliding panels concealing additional cupboard space are covered with laminated gift-wrap paper.
Above, right: Looking across the breakfast room toward the terrace. White-and-black wallpaper of the same pattern as the print curtains sheathes the sliding doors between the kitchen and breakfast room. When the doors are drawn shut, presto! a papered solid wall, by the look of it. Then who knows what's cooking?
Right: The playroom section of the garage is chiefly equipped with orange-crate furniture painted in primary colors. On most days, the garage door is left open so the two children can run—or wheel—out into the play yard. With the door down against a rain, their part of the garage is a snuggery for fun and games.
Opposite: Madison's room, no banal small-boy blues. Instead, for a solemn, very adult five-year-old, a very grown-up Stuart tartan, even on the bureau, to which it was beautifully fitted and glued by Mrs. Offenhauser. Other adult reflections: glowing rug and chandelier from Spain; wicker chairs from the East Indies and—engaging enough to appeal to any age—horse and tiger puppet figures above the wardrobe, from Indonesia.

Below and opposite page: From the deck, a view of the main floor living-dining area and the closed side of the cylindrical oak stairwell. Background white: the walls, the Greek sheepskin rug. Bright: the felt banner by Robert Indiana behind the plants, the red linen seat and orange bolsters of the wicker sofa, which can double as a guest bed. Cocktail table, teak and black plastic. Chairs, tan leather, black pads, on black and chrome frames.

FUTURE-MINDED HILLSIDE HOUSE



Favorable stars perhaps played in with perseverance when Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Gainer went scouting with their architect, Hugh Newell Jacobsen, for a house site in Arlington, Virginia. They found two lots, just what they had hoped for. One they sold to the County—to be used as a park; on the other now stands their hillside house, one story high or two, depending on how you look at it. Snuggled down in the midst of trees, it might be a timeless far-from-town pavilion. In happy fact it is a highly contemporary house, with future expansion part of its planning, and it is only 12 minutes from where Mr. Gainer works, as a lawyer, in the Justice Department. The better to blend in with its sylvan setting, the house is made mostly of wood. Cypress for the exterior walls, decks, railings. Cappin[illegible] the flat roof, the plastic dome of the central cypress cylinder encasing the spiral stairway. (Continued overleaf)

Far left: Separating the dining area from the kitchen, a freestanding divider with a serving counter and a pass-through that can be covered up by hinged doors. Strong notes against the natural oak surroundings, the white Saarinen table, black Thonet chairs. Left: The cylindrical core of oak enclosing the circular stairway that curls down to the lower level directly into the playroom. The stair rail and balusters, steel, painted red-orange.

Above: The living room's sliding doors open onto a partly walled section of the main deck, itself an alfresco living room invitingly set up with airy white metal chairs, small tables, potted flowers.

On the outside, slim strokes of contrast to the prevailing wood: black steel for the deck balusters; black anodized aluminum framing the eight-foot-high windows and sliding glass doors. On the inside, natural oak, whiteness, flashes of brilliant color, furnishings directed almost entirely to today and tomorrow with hardly a backward glance at the past. Among the today features: central air conditioning; ceiling-recessed lighting; a prefabricated spiral stairway. Looking to tomorrow: the placing and plan of the house, allowing for expansion from the kitchen end into a new master bedroom and bath. The sewing room will then become a hallway leading to the added bedroom, and the new bath will back the present powder room. After this, the partition between the playroom and the master bedroom on the lower level will be removed, and that floor will belong entirely to the two young boys.

Left: In the bathroom on the lower level, a ceiling light designed and built by Ronald Gainer—a Masonite panel with cutouts screened by light-filtering fiber glass. This, only one of the many building and finishing jobs accomplished by the Gainers themselves, enabling them to have an individually designed house. Below: The kitchen, opening on the side deck, is in oak and white with brown and gray vinyl flooring.

Below: On the other side of the kitchen, the sewing room, another Gainer design. The sewing machine is set into a counter covered in white plastic. Above it, shelves and pigeonholes painted a blazing orange. Additional storage space under the counter is hidden by a white linen curtain.

Transparencies of sheerest glass, of splendidly molded plastic. Geometrics edged with light, catching, holding, reflecting the merest flash. Is it really there or just an illusion? Not a nut or bolt or frame to give it away. This is the shape of modern magic.

The Young Excitement in Music

THREE WHO ARE MAKING IT

By ALAN RICH

In the concert hall, as in the jungle, the survival chances are slim. Hundreds of talented and hopeful young musicians each year gamble their savings and their sanity by staging an official debut concert. They seek entry to a world —the world of the solo musician where hours are long, the income is low for a long time to come, and the working conditions are grueling. We, on the opposite side of the footlights, may think of the virtuoso as a gold-encrusted personage; he will tell us a different story.

What keeps him going? Dedication, for one thing. A young man or woman seeks a career in music because he knows that he cannot be happy doing anything else. Music has seized him, and he must seize it. Beyond that, there is the hope that he will be one of the lucky ones. Fate smiled on Van Cliburn when he won the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow in 1958; he had been just as able a musician before that time, but that prize and its attendant fame drastically shortened the road he had to follow toward success.

Fate's smile is not easily earned, however. Van Cliburn was lucky because he happened to be sent to Moscow in 1958, but he also had the talent to justify his being there. Leonard Bernstein was lucky to have been called in as an emergency replacement at a Philharmonic broadcast concert in 1943, but he was called in because he had the talent to be the orchestra's assistant conductor at the time. Getting the breaks is a big thing in launching a musical career, but deserving the breaks is even more important.

Three young American pianists have gotten their share of breaks in the past few years, and each one of them is now in the busy process of showing the world that his big chance was deserved. In each case, fate's smile took a different form. For André Watts, it was another writing of the Cinderella story—the chance to be called in as a last-minute replacement. For Stephen Bishop, it happened because one of the world's most honored teachers and musicians heard him during a visit to California. For Peter Serkin, it was the break of being born into a family with a noble musical name.

But each makes a different kind of music, and each has a different story to tell. Watts is the dazzler, the latest descendant in the long line of natural, instinctive virtuosi that includes such names as Liszt, Rubinstein (Anton, Nicholas, or Artur—take your pick), and Horowitz. He is all over the keyboard when he plays: body swaying, head bobbing, fingers stretching until each of them appears to be ten feet long. He is the personification of flair.

Bishop is cool, in the classic rather than the hip sense of the word. His playing has an ease that is a bit deceptive, covering thinly as it does a remarkable sense of inner eloquence. External virtuosity does not seem to attract him as naturally as it does Watts. While watching him, one thinks not so much of a Liszt or a Horowitz, but of one of the great unostentatious nobility of the keyboard, Walter Gieseking, perhaps, or Myra Hess. He radiates a joy in playing, as does Watts, but it is a quieter, more mellow joy, remarkable in a young man of 26.

The young Serkin who, like Watts, is just on the brink of his 20's, is by far the most individual of them. Tall and lanky, he tends to slouch at the keyboard and to weave over and around it with an outward projection of uneasiness. Only half in jest, George Szell once threatened to dismiss him as soloist with the Cleveland Orchestra unless he sat up straight. Serkin is the intellectual of the three, just as happy puzzling out the inner patterns of a sonata at his desk as he is propounding them at the piano. When he plays, he frowns: fingers are only incidental to the great mental exercise that music represents to him.

Taken together, the three offer a varied picture of the way the young musician approaches the piano: the gleaming virtuoso, the soft-spoken lyricist, the scholar. Their careers so far, too, offer a variety in the methods by which they achieved their success.

Watts provides the most dramatic story at the moment. His is the kind of success that makes good movies: son of an American GI and his German war bride, first lessons at home, winner of one of the New York Philharmonic's Young People's Auditions, and then the sudden zoom when illness forced Glenn Gould out of the Philharmonic's schedule. But that was in 1963, and since then he has come to realize that hard work is needed to live up to those glamorous first reviews. Like Cliburn after Moscow, he has been working slowly and carefully to build repertory and wisdom, giving concerts only when he feels really ready. It was over three years after that first Philharmonic triumph that he braved a full-scale recital in New York, and the critics reported that he had been wise to bide his time.

For Bishop, matters built slowly from the beginning. His early appearances in his native California, while still in high school and then in college, had been well received but not remarkably so. Then he was heard by Myra Hess, who had the wisdom to recognize his exceptional ability still deeply imbedded inside. She lured him to London, where he became her last major student before her death. She allowed his debut recital only after several years of painstaking study and soul-searching. She was right, because his audiences immediately sensed a musical maturity seldom found in a debut recital.

When he finally decided to brave his native land with a full-scale concert tour this past winter, therefore, it was as a musically significant and rounded musician already highly popular and praised in his adopted country. His patience in waiting so long for this return enabled him to bypass the usual hardships of the beginning artist, the innumerable whistle-stops at starvation fees. He came, instead, under the auspices of the eminent Sol Hurok, with receptions and acclaim of the sort earned by prestige.

For Peter Serkin, a distinguished family name promised fortune's smile—and frown. He is just now reaching the point, he feels, where audiences hear him as himself, rather than as Rudolf's son. When he made his first appearances in his early teens, it was in two-piano work with his father, and this brought audiences that he might not otherwise have reached for years. His father, though proud of the young man's rise, has seen (Continued on page 177)

COUPLES WHO COOK

Once again House Beautiful roams the country to see what the young cooks are up to. If the men don't participate actively in the preparation of meals (a great many of them do), all share in the planning of important menus. More often than not, husbands take special pleasure in choosing and serving the wines. Recipes for starred dishes begin on page 120.

At Corning's marvelous "Counter that Cooks," Mrs. Hubben chops vegetables. Daughter Ann announces: "Annie not ready to go night-night."

Lucky enough to have been stationed in Geneva for a couple of years, which permitted frequent trips to nearby Lyon, the Hubbens became "convinced gastronomes." Mrs. Hubben, an excellent cook to start with, says: "Here in Corning I try to re-create the mood of a French meal without being too precious about it." Her husband's primary gustatory interests are good wines (he has a fine cellar and a fine nose) and good cheeses.

Young Kate, in her father's arms, hasn't a clue to the wonderful eating that lies ahead of her.

In the candlelit dining room, Mr. Hubben presents to his wife and their guests, the John Guths and the Lloyd Litterells, the Pinot Chardonnay that will accompany the Timbale d'Épinards.

Everybody turns a hand in the kitchen at the Petersons, and since Mrs. Peterson thinks nothing whatsoever of having parties (big ones) two or three nights in a row, it would appear to be a downright necessity. "I like parties," says Mrs. Peterson, who was bred in the hospitable Southern tradition. Fortunately, her husband is in agreement. The Petersons are not only busy in the kitchen, they are busy all over the place. This summer, when most of us will be sitting on our own back porches, they will be rolling across the country, living in their brand-new trailer. I guess who will be doing the cooking? All the Petersons.

Between telephone calls, Mrs. Steinbreder turns the marinating swordfish. Below, daughters Susan, Sarah, and Gillett lick the chocolate soufflé bowl, traditional reward for small helpers in the kitchen.

Shortly after they were married, Mrs. Steinbreder came down with a serious case of flu. To her utter and complete amazement, her husband who, to the best of her knowledge, had never put a pot on a stove, served her such flawless fillet of beef, plus (imagine!) popovers, she almost decided to relinquish the kitchen to him.

It would have been too bad, for she may well be one of those rare individuals, a born cook. Because her first cooking experience was making chiffon cakes (in active competition with her sister-in-law as to whose would rise highest), she is inclined to plan her menus starting with the dessert, working backwards. No matter; the sum total is always delicious.

An enthusiastic gardener (she had her best crop of celery last year), she says —and who would disagree?— "Nothing tastes quite as wonderful as young vegetables you've raised yourself."

When Mrs. Johnson is not cooking (there is nothing she would rather do) or tending to her sons, chances are she and the doctor (both ardent conservationists) are very likely sitting by the fire planning an annual family expedition into the Bad Lands.

Newest approach to efficient living: Preplanned groups of appliances carefully arranged with proper storage for the necessary tools and supplies. Each group brought together for a specific purpose: cooking, entertaining, learning, and the like. These innovations from Westinghouse.

5 IDEA CENTERS

By NANCY CRAIG

1 APPLIANCE ISLAND

Now a kitchen is able to run on portable appliances alone, with this revolutionary 60-inch-wide, two-sided appliance center. Provided: housing for as many as ten appliances, plus automatic timing, ventilation, built-in lighting, nine electrical outlets, and hard-to-come-by work surface. To close up the center when not in use, the tambour door on the upper compartment is brought down like the cover on an old-fashioned roll-top desk.

2 THE TOTAL COOK-IN

Placed alongside the range, this against-the-wall version of the appliance center is a mere 42-inches wide but accomplishes as much as the island version above. In addition, a bright new star of the show: a warming oven over the range (closeup) containing two infra-red heating lamps. Its two black glass doors (removable for cleaning) open wide for large hams or turkeys; it accommodates two 12-inch platters or three 9-inch platters.

3 CORNER ON LEARNING

A design to suggest how the new teaching methods and materials may be used at home as well as in the classroom. Printed reference materials, of course, but now the home-study corner has a video tape recorder, which puts all education programs at the student's fingertips. A 19-inch transistorized Jet Set receiver plays back the programs as desired. Also at hand, a slide projector.

4 SHOW BIZ, ALL-IN-A-WALL

For entertainment, a vertical composition to fit into study, living room, or bedroom. On the lower shelf: record storage, AM/FM radio, FM stereo receiver, and swing-down stereo record player. Second shelf: a 23-inch Instant-on color television set, cartridge-fed slide projector, and display niche. And above all: twin speakers for the stereo system and space for books and mementoes.

5 INSTANT REFRESHMENT

Everything here for drinks, soft or hard, and the casual food to accompany them. Behind the stainless-steel bar sink, a narrow shelf for the glassware. At the right, a new-size refrigerator, two cubic feet of ice cubes, chilled drinks, and—who knows—caviar and pâté. Above and below, storage for crackers and cookies, bottles and cans. Left: In this room, Pepperell's "Island Bamboo" sheets rig the mast, and a matching blanket covers the deck of the boat-bed. And, like any proper sloop under sail, this one can rock its passenger to sleep. The red chair on rollers has two facing seats that share a wave-like green table. The turtle is really a table; his head opens for storage. Opposite: The multicolored bunk bed, reached by an adjoining ladder, has an alternate and zippy means of descent. Underneath is a cozy play ledge. The sheets and pillowcase are Pepperell's new "Royalty Stripe," which also makes a sprightly frame for the window. A matching blanket hangs over the lanky clothes-giraffe. To keep all a child's things and stuff, the backward-glancing kangaroo has a bright orange drawer as well as a lift-up side. On his back sits a horse-and-rider sculpture by Accorsi. The magenta-and-blue rocking chair is another double-seater. Below: This square, yellow elephant has three open shelves for keeping toys, and two convenient white rubber tusks for hanging up jackets or pajamas.

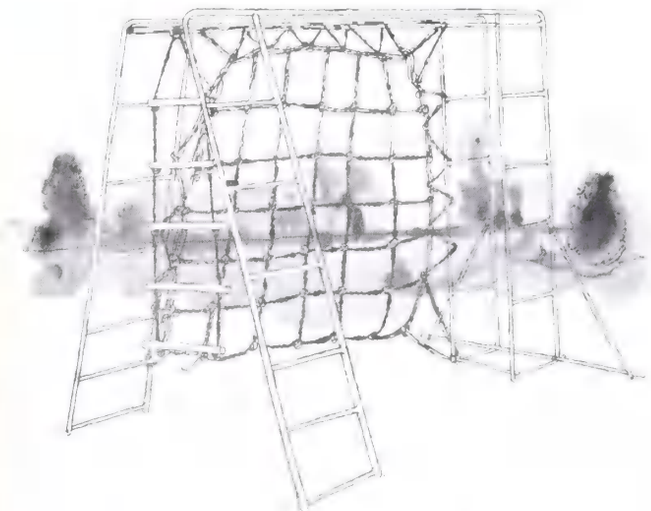
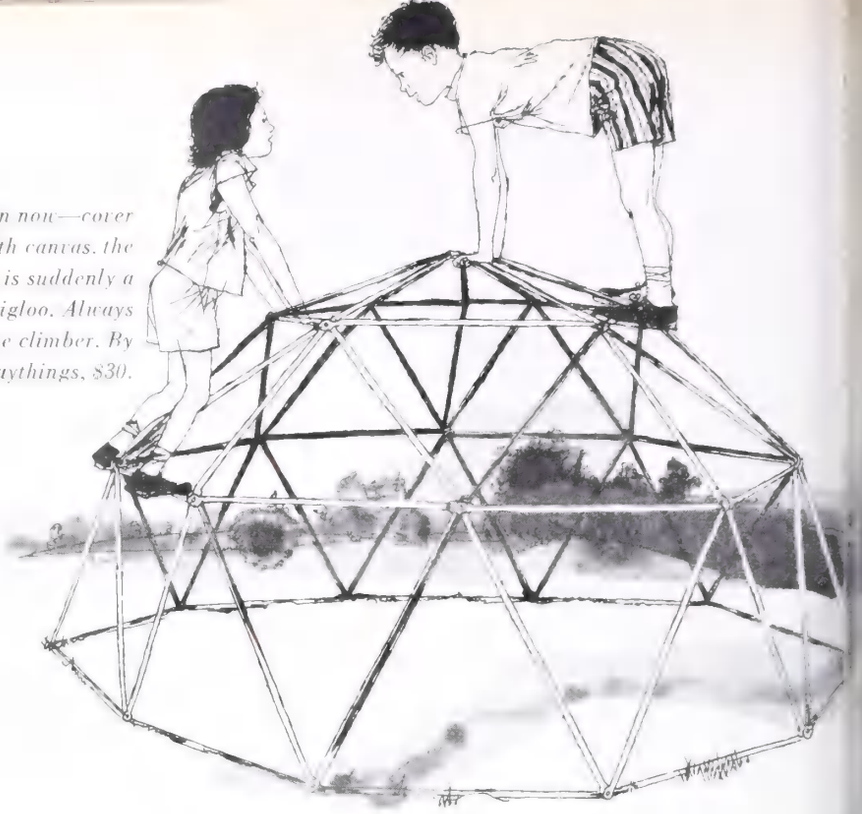
PLAY FURNITURE

All the bright-colored dreams of a child come to life here as simple and whimsical furniture through the vivid young imagination of Sculptor William Accorsi. Commissioned by Pepperell, he created a wonderland of animals, boats, slides, and rockers, and still managed to make them perform as beds, chests, chairs, and the other necessities of a child's world. The colors are bold primaries, planned by Renée to complement new sheets and blankets by Pepperell. Six of the pieces are made by Children's Workbench, N.Y.C. The beds may be custom-ordered.





Hideaway, house, ship at sea—in a child's imagination, this simple ladder box can be these, and many more. Sturdily built of hardwood, the box is 4′ by 4′ by 30″, for ages 2 to 6. By Creative Playthings, $71.50.

Whirling, whirling. Designed originally for school playgrounds, this Space Spinner is safe, heavily built, easy to turn. By Mexico Forge, $126.

Up the rope like a Marine, down the ladder like a fireman. Probably the climbingest climber made. Built of welded, galvanized steel and strong rope. F.A.O. Schwarz, $70.

A mountain now—cover the frame with canvas, the dome is suddenly a tepee or an igloo. Always a fine climber. By Creative Playthings, $30.

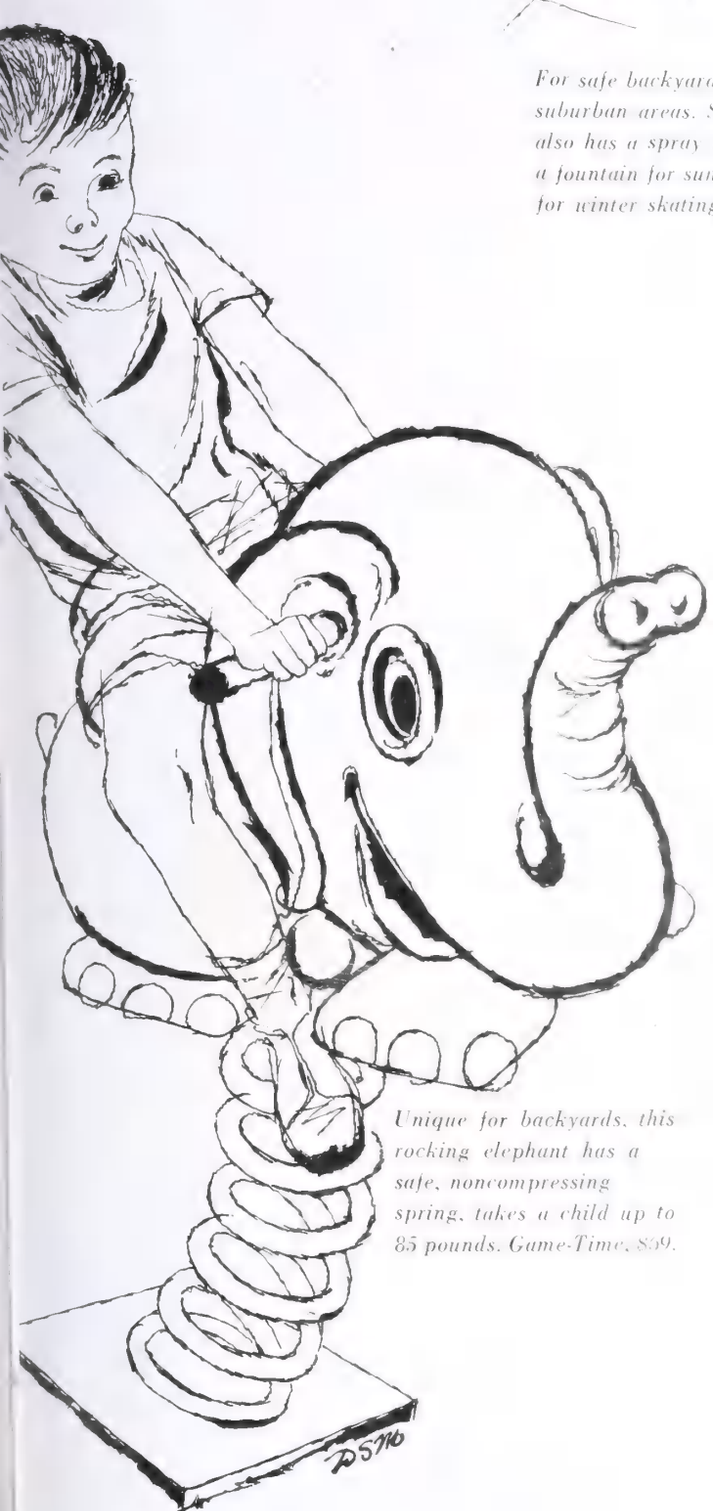
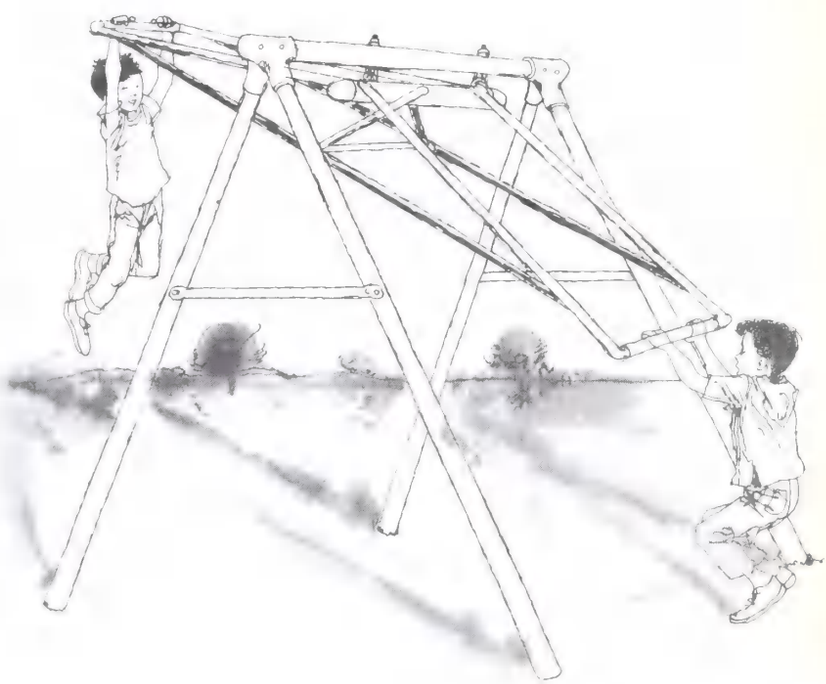
FREE PLAY FOR IMAGINATIONS

Playing at being grown up is deeply satisfying for children—and necessary. Most new backyard play equipment is a stage for just such imaginative games. The ladder box becomes a fort: the spinner, a flying saucer: the elephant, a safari mount.

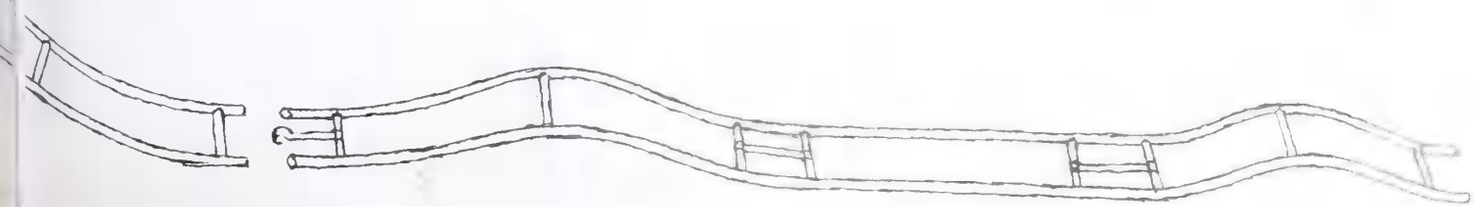


DRAWING BY DAVID STONE MARTIN

Imagine the thrill of a child who can swoop down his own roller coaster! Rubber-tired car safety-locks at the top (about 38″ from the ground), rolls off the track smoothly. As shown, track is 22′ long. From F.A.O. Schwarz: $37 for main section and extension.



For safe backyard cycling in sidewalkless suburban areas. Slightly dished concrete circle also has a spray nozzle at its center—a fountain for summer showers, a flood valve for winter skating. Designed by Karl Linn.



Unique for backyards, this rocking elephant has a safe, noncompressing spring, takes a child up to 85 pounds. Game-Time, $59.

Another Karl Linn idea to be built at home. Plywood or hardboard nailed to 4′ by 4′ posts is covered with wrapping paper. Young Michelangelos have an uninhibited sweep for their artistic expressions. It also makes a good backboard for ball games.

Graduates of the see-saw set find these new Flying Bars exciting, and parents are pleased at its muscle-building potential. About 6½′ from ground to top bar; made of steel tubing. From F.A.O. Schwarz, $27.

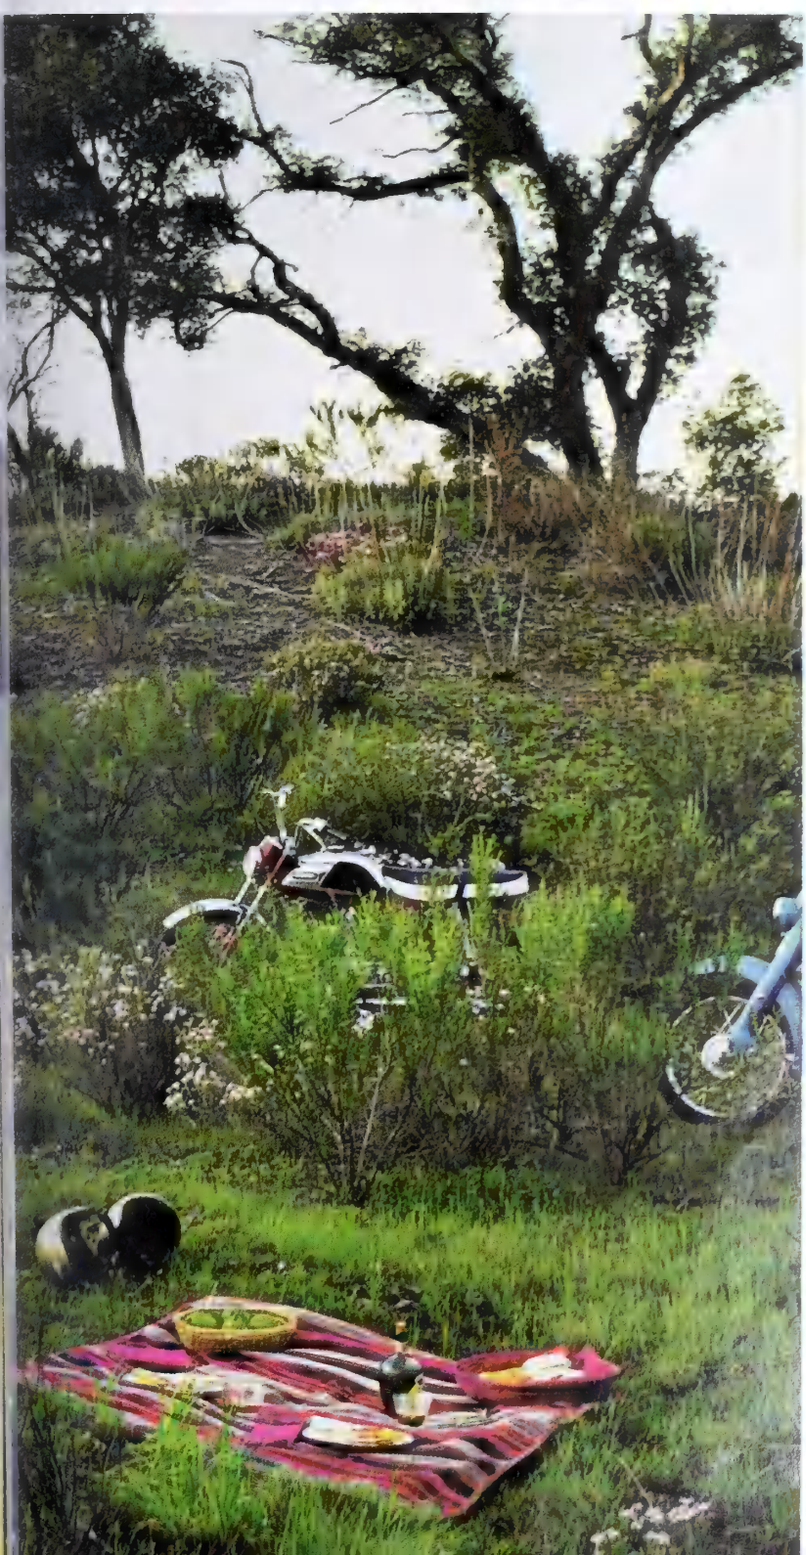
THE PICNIC

A bite-size vacation

Young romantics get the message: to change the beat, get away, switch the time, the place. Here, four ways to make the move, four movable feasts.

1 WOODLAND PICNIC, VIA CAR

Driving along on a Marco Polo voyage of discovery or heading for a favorite place, the time to stop is when both voices say "There it is!" In the shade of old trees, perhaps. Certainly where the grass looks its greenest. The sports car, Renault's Caravelle convertible. Wicker basket and hat from Gifts Unlimited. "Hawaii" tablecloth from Caroline of California. Mugs and cooler, Glacier Ware. Contempo paper plates, napkins. Cheese board, bread board, and server, by Dansk.



2 LAKESIDE PICNIC, ON DECK

Sailing away, for even part of a day, into a blue bright world of water and sky is a tranquilizer, a stimulant, a wonderful change from land life. And appetite-whetting. Quickest locale for the picnic—on the boat. The boat here, an 18′ sloop, Malibu class. The setup aboard concentrates on what's practical. No fuss, no frills. Plates, cups, coffee pot: enamelware. Tablecloth made of "Terry Tuck" toweling. The menu can be planned to delight a finicky landlubber's taste. Given on page 125, four menus appropriate for picnics afloat or ashore, all of them skipping such bores as routine sandwiches and hard-boiled eggs in favor of more original hearty fare.

3 WILDSPOT, BY MOTORCYCLE

One of the current young excitements, the two-wheeled passport to a revved-up, wind-in-the-face freedom. As much at home in the problems of city traffic as on the open highway or ambling down a country road. A young couple roaring by on their way to the wilds may look like a helmetted pair out of science fiction, but they are dependably earthbound. They eat. So, on their holiday dash out of town, they take food and something to put it on. Pictured, a Peruvian serape tablecloth, paper as china. To hold everything, a Spanish basket, a Mexican one. His motorcycle, twin-jet 100; hers, model U-5. Both, Yamaha International. Helmets, by Daytona.

PLANE COURTESY GUNNELL AVIATION, SANTA MONICA, CALIF.

4 FAR-OUT PICNIC, BY PLANE

Flitting by private plane, owned or rented, is to lift the horizon of a holiday. Off to the sea? Toward high hills? Into deep country? Wish, and you are almost there—faster than by magic flying carpet and fabulously far away from takeoff point. The energetic may leave their plane at the landing strip and hike on farther still, using a little of the precious time saved. And though they find themselves, perhaps, in a different time zone, no one is fooled. Alternate pleasure: a meadow picnic in the shade of a wing. Plane shown, a Cessna 172. The hampers, from Briggs of Brentwood. Serving baskets, with liners, from Casual Living Accessories.

THE YOUNG CROWD

By LAWRENCE ALLOWAY

A glass cube which, despite see-through views and reflections that threaten to dissolve the visibility of the structure, holds its form by a nearly imperceptible tint in the glass (like a Bausch and Lomb dream). Layers of Plexiglas that carry vastly enlarged dots from a photographic reproduction: the blow-up turns any object or person in the world into an almost abstract code. A scatter of pink-squared canvases, the plastic surface given a cobra-skin finish and with sequins stuck on for lustrous highlights. Swarms of people, some of them like our view of other people, some of them like descendants of the more primitive German children's books, painted on Plexiglas in hard-flowing outlines.

These are four works by young artists, all good in my opinion, all of them irreconcilably unlike one another in their esthetics. The cube is by Larry Bell, who divides his time between his native Los Angeles and New York; the second artist is French, Alain Jacquet, living in New York now at, of course, the hotel that European artists flock to, the Chelsea. Al Brunelle, who lives in Brooklyn, did the pink squares; his separate canvases add up to one painting titled "Jayne" (you recognize the spelling). The crowd scene is by Gladys Nilsson, a member of the Chicago group called The Hairy Who.

These four examples, a moderate choice of the possible range, make it clear why you can no longer answer the question "What is modern art?" by citing Picasso or Jackson Pollock or Andy Warhol. For one thing, each of the three represents one particular style, one personal set of values that are embodied in his art; for another, each belongs to a different generation. Some years ago somebody made a movie about Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic, only to discover that nobody in American colleges knew who Lindbergh was or what he had done. Tab Hunter did an emergency lecture tour to identify Lindbergh (someone may soon be needed to identify Tab Hunter). I've heard a Midwest college class declare its separateness from Pollock because he was just too old; he died eleven years ago, aged 44.

With such divisive forces, therefore, of stylistic diversity and of generation consciousness, art is no longer a single unified package, but varied and culturally discontinuous. Today an artist can work in any style; all moves are possible. History has become too complex to simplify the artist's decision by showing him the one true tradition to join. In this article, I want to list some of the possible choices facing artists now. The scene is more like open prairie than the linear-routed landscape of Pilgrim's Progress.

The scene: Keane, Wyeth, and Pollock

If there are readers who prefer Mop Art to Pop, I think it's fine (Mop Art: from Moppet Painting, meaning Keane and cheap imitators). As a matter of fact, in a report on the Keanes in a magazine, of the people interviewed only four admitted to liking the Keanes: Joan Crawford, Kim Novak, Andy Warhol, and this writer. But a taste for Keane is spontaneously generated, a cultural reflex, whereas the works to be discussed here are the ones that have to be approached with intelligence and speculation as well as with sentiment. There have been lines all around the museums where the Andrew Wyeth exhibition was shown, but it was not Wyeth, nor was it Keane, who put American art on the map. It was the abstract painter Jackson Pollock, the first man to paint by pouring, splashing, and dripping paint onto canvas laid on the studio floor. He provided a point of reference for the originality of other American artists and fascinated European artists, first as rumor, then in reality when the paintings were shown over there.

Even using the early 30's as the "young" age ceiling, there is a crowd of artists who can be included. The ones mentioned here must symbolize an immense number. The Park Place gallery in New York City is an artists' cooperative—meaning that painters and sculptors who show there decide policy, and it has artists both over and under the age line. All are abstract in style and share an acute sense of the work of art's relation to its surroundings. This environmental sense showed in monumental projects for the city, developed while Thomas Hoving was Parks Commissioner, as well as in intimate, room-size works. Take the works of David Novros, who paints his shaped canvases ("shaped" means departing from the traditional rectangles of easel painting) with metallic and acrylic paints. The unpredictable shapes and the metal paint burning through the top color give his work a combined solidity and luminosity: its solidity parallels architecture; its color responds to light-changes. Charles Ross, who constructs prisms as sculpture, has pointed out that "the pieces are both object and environment. They may be placed in any environment and will refract, reflect, transmit, and absorb images from it." His simple geometric forms precipitate a complex experience in almost every observer.

Today's art is not dominated by a single style. It spans the minimal and the profuse. On the one hand, there are large sculptures that are simple in mass or in clearly articulated groupings, like Richard Van Buren's; on the other hand, there are small objects, crowded with evocative detail, like Joe Brainard's. Art occurs anywhere between the monochrome and the fetish. Consider a painter like Brice Marden, who condenses, as it were, all colors, all possible forms, into one field of paint, in such a way that the field seems full, not empty; brimming, not barren. John Fisher uses bread as a metaphor of other organic substances, including flesh, as he bends, crushes, or stretches it into convulsed relationships with pieces of hardware. Jim Nutt, with his sardonic and knobby figures, and Gladys Nilsson, with her caricatured but elaborately human crowds, reveal another sensibility that derives somewhat from Midwest Expressionism (for some reason the area tends in this direction), but cooled by post-pop developments at the same time. Something of the present abundance of art can be gauged if we realize that this argument for diversity draws its examples only from the work of artists younger than, say, Andy Warhol.

There are relatively few firm groups of artists. The Park Place is one, The Hairy Who is another, but these are exceptions. Instead of the groups and movements which abounded in early modern art, associations of artists tend to be informal and unprogrammed in the United States. However, this does not mean that the artist works in isolation (though he can, and some do). These young artists are not strangers to the art scene. All of them are known to other artists working in comparable (and sometimes opposed) styles and to other professionals who make up the art scene (including collectors, gallery dealers, museum people, writers). The only exception I'd make is Anthony Panzera, with his life-size figures, who is still doing graduate work. Like so many younger painters, he is university-trained, a point of great social difference from the majority of American artists of the recent past.

Most of these artists, then, have exhibition records to prove productivity, as well as the attention of other artists. They are, that is to say, absolutely unlike starlets who are celebrated before they have done anything. The fact that these artists are known and, in some cases, collected should not be regarded as a sign of the "typically American" cult of youth. Artists are not being specially favored or pampered; on the contrary, they have returned the development of talent to a healthy tempo. The so-called Abstract Expressionist generation, including Willem de Kooning, Barnett Newman, Jackson Pollock, Mark Rothko, Clyfford Still, really did not get going until their late 30's or early 40's. Partly as a result of their achievement 20 years ago, and partly as a result of the general improvement in the information available to the public, it is possible to achieve a personal identity sooner. The earlier an artist starts painting, the greater the chance of his working for a long time. It is the shortness of the span of human activity, not its length, that we tend to regret. Thus the proliferation of young artists is not only exhilarating as an experience to anybody who knows their work: in addition, it is the promise and hope of a long future.

One of the characteristics of young American artists now is their confidence. They may work in doubt, they may move hesitatingly around an unresolved problem, but all this rests on a confident mood unlike that of European artists. The reasons for this are various, but they are strong enough to maintain the feeling despite all disappointments with gallery dealers, irritation at museums, or whatever. 1. The Abstract Expressionist generation changed the basis of modern art —both its location (from Paris to New York) and its esthetics. 2. There is a large intimate community in New York of artists of the same age and comparable interests, which has replaced formally organized movements. 3. There is, also, a greater public interest in art in the United States than anywhere else in the world. The mass media provides even young artists with a big audience. In the past, the mass media and the visual arts were automatically assumed to be enemies. Now, even though artists worry about being loved to death or popularized too fast by the mass media, their art is irrevocably a subject of public interest. This confluence of the older painters, their many critical peers, and a big general audience supports the belief of American artists: that they are producing the best art in the world at the moment.

One reason that there are so many good artists of a comparatively low age has to do with the abundance of information available to the student. If you are seriously interested in becoming a painter, you do not have to undergo an apprenticeship to a senior painter whose place you may ultimately inherit. Nor is it now necessary to go through the typical stratified assault course (via drawing from the antique, anatomy lessons, drawing from life) to climb the pyramid of art. On the contrary, you can learn now by imitation, by pastiche, by the revival of artists you feel close to—preferably a lot of them. Exhibitions, traveling shows, catalogs, both art and general magazines, have raised the level of information about art to a high point. It is possible now to imitate, successively and as fully as possible, such diverse originals as, say, Helen Frankenthaler, Ellsworth Kelly, Roy Lichtenstein, and Jules Olitski (to list the entire contents of last year's American Pavilion at the Venice Biennale). Art school is a good place to do this, because it is a full-time art situation. Soon artists should be able to say Self-Taught at the Art Student's League, or Autodidact, Art Institute of Chicago.

This way the young artist learns the process of work and the control of the final image by analogies with the work of other more experienced artists. Out of the learning-by-simulation situation the young artist can develop a self-critical study of both the work imitated and the work done. His or her originality, if it exists, follows this immersion in different styles rather than a series of abstract disciplines. Here the artist is the beneficiary of the communications explosion of the 20th Century, as we are, in our turn, when we discover at early points in their careers the work of new artists. ■

Dinner at the Hubbens'

Timbale d'Épinards with Sauce Choron

Vegetable oil
⅔ cup fine fresh bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter
2 onions, coarsely chopped
3 packages (10-ounce size) frozen spinach, thawed, or 3 pounds fresh spinach
5 eggs
1 cup heavy cream, heated
½ cup freshly grated Swiss cheese

Oil a 1½-quart soufflé dish or any straight-sided mold, add some bread crumbs, and coat the sides well. Give the mold a good bang to knock out any excess crumbs. Set aside. Chill.

Melt the butter in a large heavy saucepan, add the onions and sauté until limp but not brown. Add the spinach, cover

(do not add more liquid), and cook for about five minutes, giving mixture an occasional stir. Strain to get rid of excess liquid.

Beat the eggs and cream together in a large bowl until well mixed, then combine with the spinach. Place in the electric blender and blend until you have a smooth purée. Combine with the remaining bread crumbs and grated cheese. Pour into the prepared mold and set the mold in a pan with enough hot water to reach to ⅔ the depth of the mold. Bake in a preheated 375° oven for 45 minutes or until a knife inserted in the center comes out dry. Allow custard "to collect itself" for five minutes. Run a spatula around the edge, then turn out on a warm serving platter. Pour Sauce Choron over the timbale, and the remainder into a warm sauceboat. Serves 6.

Sauce Choron:

1 cup dry white wine
2 tablespoons chopped onions
2 tablespoons dried tarragon
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk, heated
½ cup heavy cream
1 can (6-ounce size) tomato paste
Salt
Freshly ground pepper

Combine the wine, onions, and tarragon in a small saucepan. Place over a good heat and boil down until there is ¼ cup left. Set aside. Melt the butter in a saucepan. When bubbling, stir in the flour, and cook for about five minutes, stirring. Stir in the milk, bring to a boil and boil for one minute. Add the wine-tarragon mixture, cream, and tomato paste. Taste for seasoning. Place saucepan on the lowest heat just long enough to heat through and for the flavors to mellow. Strain before serving.

Poulets Farci aux Nouilles

½ sticks (¾ cup) butter
½ pound mushrooms, sliced cups chicken broth, your own, or canned condensed ½ box (12-ounce size) wide noodles cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup heavy cream
alt
reshly ground white pepper
3-pound broiler-fryers carrots, coarsely chopped
tablespoons flour

Melt ½ stick of the butter in a heavy fry pan. When hot, add the mushrooms and sauté for a few minutes but do not allow them to brown. Take off the heat. Set aside.

Bring the broth to a boil. Add the noodles, a few at a time, and after the broth has come to a boil a second time, boil for five more minutes. Drain and reserve stock.

Immediately mix the mushrooms, cheese, cream, salt, and pepper to taste with the drained noodles. Cool until stuffing is easy to handle.

Rub the inside of the birds with salt and pepper. Then stuff and truss. Place in a roasting pan with the carrots and onions. Generously rub the skins with the remaining butter, softened. Place in a preheated 375° oven and roast, uncovered, for 1½ hours or until the legs feel soft when pressed and the skin is just beginning to shrink away from the tips of the leg bones. Baste occasionally. Place on a warm platter and keep warm.

Whisk the flour into the pan drippings until smooth. Add the reserved chicken broth and bring to a boil. Boil for a few minutes, or until sauce thickens slightly. Strain into a warm sauceboat.

Meringues au Citron l'Angéliques

(Should be made the day before)

3 egg whites
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
Pinch salt
¾ cup sugar

Cover a cookie sheet with brown wrapping paper. Set aside. Beat the egg whites with the cream of tartar and the salt until they stand in soft peaks. Then gradually beat in the sugar until you have a shiny meringue that stands in firm peaks when you hold the beater straight up. Fill pastry bag with meringue and make six flat circles, about ¼ inch thick and three inches in diameter, on the prepared sheet. Next, make rings around the edges of each, one on top of the other, to form a nest to hold the lemon filling. Place in a preheated 275° oven and bake for one hour. Immediately remove from the paper with a spatula and place on a cake rack.

Filling:

3 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup lemon juice
1½ teaspoons lemon rind
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Green food coloring (optional)

Mix the yolks, sugar, and lemon juice together in the top of a double boiler. Then cook over simmering water until you have a thick custard. Take off the heat, stir in the lemon rind, and chill. When cold, beat in the whipped cream. If the color seems pale, add a drop or so of green food coloring. Spoon into the meringue nests and refrigerate at least twelve hours.

Dinner at the Petersons'

Veal Casserole with Dumplings for 14

2 pounds sliced veal, ½ inch thick, cut from the leg
Flour
Paprika (be generous here)
Pepper
Vegetable oil
2 cups chicken broth, your own, or canned condensed
36 small white onions*
1 can (10½-ounce size) condensed cream of chicken soup

Slice the veal into strips about ¼-inch thick. In a paper bag place about ⅓ cup flour seasoned with paprika, salt, and pepper. Drop the strips of veal into the bag and shake until well coated.

Pour enough oil into a large, heavy skillet to make a film, and place over a good heat. When hot, add the meat and sauté, a small amount at a time, until nicely brown all over. Toss the browned meat into an ovenproof casserole. When all the meat is browned, add the chicken broth, onions, and the cream of chicken soup. Bring to a boil. The dish may be prepared to this point early in the day or the day before. If the latter, refrigerate but bring to room temperature before finishing the cooking.

*Choose onions about one inch in diameter, peel, and drop into boiling, salted water and boil slowly until almost tender. Test with the point of a small sharp knife. Drain and set aside. Or use two cans of onions, drained.

Dumplings:

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
Salt
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 tablespoon onion juice
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 cup milk
Melted butter

Mix together all the ingredients except the butter and bread crumbs until just moistened. Drop by tablespoons into melted butter, then roll in bread crumbs. Arrange on top of the veal and onions. Place in a preheated 425° oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Serve with Sour Cream Sauce.

To make sauce:

Mix one cup sour cream into one can (10½-ounce size) condensed cream of chicken soup. Heat only to the boiling point.

Gerda's Torte

2 egg yolks
1 box (1 pound size) sifted confectioners' sugar
2 sticks (1 cup) butter
Blackberry brandy to taste
1 two-layer cake, your own or a mix
Currant jelly
Finely grated walnuts or almonds
Maraschino or candied cherries

Beat the egg yolks until thick and sticky, then beat in ½ cup of the confectioners' sugar. Cream the butter until soft, then gradually work in all the remaining sugar. Combine the two mixtures thoroughly and flavor with the brandy to taste.

Split the two cake layers in half: whip the jelly until it is spreadable. Spread a layer of the jelly between the first two layers, frosting between the second and third, jelly between the third and fourth. Leave the top plain. Frost the sides and then the top of the cake with the butter cream, saving a small amount for decorating.

Sprinkle the nuts all over the top and sides.

Using a pastry tube, decorate the top of the cake and garnish with well-drained maraschino or candied cherries.

Dinner at the Steinbreders'

Swordfish Grilled Over Charcoal

Have the fishmonger cut the swordfish about two inches thick and allow a half-pound for each person.

Six hours before you wish to cook the fish, rub a large flat dish with a split clove of garlic. Place the fish in the dish and pour over it a mixture of ½ cup soy sauce and ½ cup of bourbon. Turn the fish several times so the entire surface is well covered with the marinade. Cover and refrigerate, turning fish several times during the marinating period.

Light the charcoal fire at least two hours before you want to serve. This gives the fire one hour to burn down to the right point for grilling. Place fish on the grill. Cover, or lacking a cover, make a bonnet with foil, taking care that it does not touch the fish. Grill for one hour, basting occasionally.

To serve, place on a heated platter and garnish with a sprinkling of minced parsley.

Cynthia's Zucchini Casserole

Zucchini
Tomatoes
Onions
Salt
Freshly grated Parmesan

This is one of those fine recipes that don't call for precise measurements.

First, butter an ovenproof casserole that can go to the table. Slice the washed zucchini very thin and place a layer in the bottom of the casserole, top that with a layer of sliced tomatoes and onions, sprinkle with salt, pepper, and cheese. Repeat layers until the casserole is full. Cover with foil and bake about 45 minutes in a preheated 400° oven. Remove the foil for the last ten minutes to allow the top to brown.

Chocolate Mint Soufflé with Whipped Cream

Butter
⅓ cup sugar
12 squares (1-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate or 2 packages chocolate pieces
10 eggs, separated
1 tablespoon creme de menthe
Pinch salt
Heavy cream, whipped

Made in these proportions, this makes a very big soufflé—sufficient to serve eight or more. For a smaller number, Mrs. Steinbreder uses half the batter to make a soufflé and the other half for a chocolate roll.

To make the large soufflé, butter a 2-quart soufflé dish well, coat with sugar, dumping out any excess. To make the smaller soufflé and the chocolate roll, butter and sugar a 1½-quart soufflé dish; then butter a 15-by-10-by-1" jelly-roll pan, line with wax paper and butter the paper. Prepared mold and pan should be refrigerated.

Melt the chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. Cool slightly. Beat the egg yolks in a very large bowl with a wire whisk until they are sticky; then stir in the melted chocolate and the creme de menthe. Whip the egg whites with a pinch of salt until stiff and shiny, then gradually beat in the sugar. Continue beating until the whites hold peaks. Briskly whip about a third of the whites into the chocolate mixture, then gently fold in the remainder with a rubber spatula. If you are making the small soufflé and the chocolate roll, pour enough of the batter into the prepared pan to reach almost to the rim, spreading the batter evenly to all sides and corners. Refrigerate. Pour remaining batter into the 1½-quart mold, and bake in a preheated 400° oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Serve at once with whipped cream sweetened lightly with sugar or perfumed with creme de menthe.

Bake the chocolate roll after dinner in a preheated 400° oven for 10 minutes. Turn out of the pan at once onto a fresh dishtowel or a sheet of foil. Peel off the wax paper and roll up while still hot. Cool. To serve, unroll, fill with sweetened whipped cream. Roll up, and sprinkle with sugar.

Dinner at the Johnsons'

Braised Wild Goose with Stuffing

Stuffing:

1 pound bulk pork sausage
½ cup long-grain rice, cooked
¼ cup fine bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter, melted
2 eggs, well beaten
1 rib celery, finely chopped
Few twists of the peppermill
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon minced parsley sprigs
1 scant teaspoon thyme
¼ cup chopped pecans

Break up the sausage, place in a heavy skillet, and cook until it has lost its pink color. Pour off all the fat. Stir in the rice and all remaining ingredients except the pecans. Cook over a moderate heat for 30 minutes. Take off the heat and stir in the nuts. Rub the cavity of the cleaned goose with salt. Stuff the cavity and secure with skewers, then stuff the neck.

pulling the neck skin under the bird, and secure it with a skewer. Place two pieces of bacon in the bottom of a heavy casserole.

Add: 1 onion, chopped
1 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon butter

Place the goose on top, sprinkle with salt, paprika, and a few twists of the peppermill. Cover and place in a preheated 375° oven for 1¼ hours. Remove the cover, turn the heat up to 400°, and continue cooking until the goose has browned nicely or until the juices run clear when the goose is pierced with a fork, and the legs feel soft when squeezed. Approximately 20 minutes longer. A six-pound goose will serve six.

Note: The State of North Dakota has a curious law, which prohibits holding wild geese in a freezer more than a certain number of months after it has been shot. The goose used by Mrs. Johnson was raised in captivity and purchased for this story.

Scandinavian Game Sauce

tablespoons red currant jelly
1½ teaspoons grated lemon rind
1½ teaspoons red wine vinegar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
3 tablespoons dry Sherry
3 tablespoons dry red wine

Break up the jelly with a fork, combine with the rind, vinegar, and mustard in the top of a double boiler. Mix well. Place over boiling water. Just before serving, stir in the two wines. Serve with wild goose or grouse.

Dr. Johnson's Lemon Ice Cream

4 cups heavy cream
2½ cups sugar
5 eggs, well beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
Rind and juice of 1 lemon
Milk

Mix well all the ingredients except the milk, pour into the container of the freezer, and stir in enough milk to reach to only three-fourths the depth of the container. The mixture increases in bulk during freezing. Add the dasher, cover, and place in the tub. Pack with crushed ice and coarse salt (three to four parts ice to one part salt). Turn the crank slowly and steadily in the beginning. Add more ice and salt, as needed. When ice cream is firm, remove the dasher, cork the top securely, and return it to the tub, packing it well with more ice and salt. Cover with a heavy bag or a piece of carpet. All ice cream tastes best when not too firm, so take the container out of the tub a little while before serving. Makes about two quarts.

Coconut Short Bread

2 sticks (1 cup) butter
½ cup sugar, scant
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 generous cup shredded coconut, packed down
Pinch salt

Cream the butter, then gradually work in the sugar. This can be done easily with your electric beater or mixer. Work in remaining ingredients, then place on wax paper and shape into two long rolls about an inch in diameter. Wrap with the wax paper, then cover with foil. Chill or freeze.

To bake, slice about ¼ inch thick and bake in a preheated 350° oven until the edges have turned a light brown. Makes about three dozen. ■ o it that he has done it on his wn: no lessons at home, nothing ut solid advice on the hardships f a musical career.

Much of the elder Serkin's phiosophy has come naturally to the on as well. Rudolf has been nown to spend a week trying to nravel a single knotty passage, nd now Peter plans to take a ear off from concertizing to unavel the knots in his future. Like is father, he gravitates naturally the thoughtful, subtle reperory of the classic composers, ather than to the more extroerted romantic repertory favored y Watts. He is just as happy abmerging his own individuality n a performance of chamber muic as he is alone on the stage.

There is a further advantage hared by all three of these rising tars that was denied to their predcessors a generation ago. Slowly and carefully as they are building their careers, the building process can be followed by a vast public, through recordings. Before the LP era, when record releases were skimpy indeed compared to the wealth now available, only established masters were invited to the studios. Records by pianists under the age of, say, 40 were seldom to be found.

Today's young musicians are far more welcome in the studios. Whether or not we hear them in the concert hall, we can enjoy at home tangible evidence of their artistic development. It will be interesting to compare the views of André Watts on Chopin and Liszt, Stephen Bishop on Beethoven, and Peter Serkin on Schubert at their present stage of development and again in future decades. It should be interesting for the pianists themselves, too.

On Records

André Watts

LISZT: Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat, with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic. Columbia ML 5858 (MS 6458).

Imperial Crimson

Here's a new dimension in Fall Garden Catalogs . . . one big, "All in One," all-complete, 144-page book that has just everything you could possibly need or want for a more beautiful garden. One glance at this magnificent catalog tells you it is in a class by itself . . . the largest, finest, most comprehensive Fall Catalog ever published. A Wayside Triumph . . . inspired by the newest and best in horticulture. This Autumn, there is an almost unbelievable selection of over 1300 new, rare and unusual items, plus excellent cultural information to make your garden planning an exciting and trouble-free adventure.

HYBRID SPECIOSUM LILY Imperial Crimson
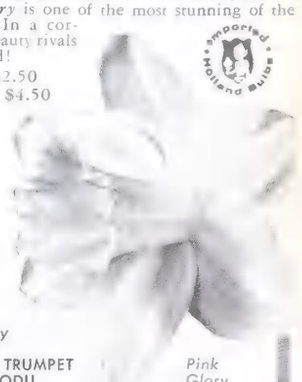
Here is something really special! Huge flowers measuring 8 inches in diameter with individual petals 3½ inches wide. The brilliant crimson color is at its highest intensity in the center of the petal. Blooms lavishly in August on 5 to 7 ft. stems. Large bulbs. . . . . Three, $3.75; Doz., $13.75



New BLUE DOUBLE CLEMATIS

Mrs. P. T. James

DOUBLE CLEMATIS, Mrs. P. T. James
Exquisite blue Clematis that's a joy to behold! It will add color and charm to any garden large or small. Huge, double flowers with elegantly pointed petals bloom in unbelievable profusion, giving the effect of a cascading shower of vivid blue stars. . . . . Each, $4.00

New* PINK DAFFODIL, *Pink Glory
This enchanting new beauty is the "Orchid" among the Narcissi. Its gleaming, pure white perianth is large and unusually graceful. Handsome long trumpet opens a lovely, soft light Indian yellow but soon shades to a most delightful pink color. Inside of trumpet is a luscious, pinkish apricot that retains its richness throughout the life of the flower. Without any question, Pink Glory is one of the most stunning of the "Pinks." In a corsage, its beauty rivals the Orchid!

Six, $2.50
Doz., $4.50

Most people settle for good old khaki duck, but tents can be wall-sided or bungalow types, windowed or screened or pop-up affairs that look like igloos. Walter Stern, tentmaker and tent-camper, is a solon of camping lore, and is as generous with helpful information for potential campers as he is with suggestions for purchasing equipment. His address: 254 Nagle Ave., New York, N.Y. 10034.

Names every camper should remember are L. L. Bean, 395 Main Street, Freeport, Maine; Abercrombie & Fitch, Madison Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, New York, N.Y. 10017; Morsan, 810 Route 17, in Paramus, New Jersey and at 1999 Route 110, in Farmingdale, New York. They are not only major suppliers but also encourage the neophyte to experiment and discover his own preferences by first renting camping equipment. All have catalogs worth sending for.

Want to make a grand entrance? Put in a new Armstrong vinyl floor.

The Spanish tile floor you see in this entrance hall isn't Spanish tile at all. It's sheet vinyl—Armstrong Vinyl Corlon®. It's one of an exciting, new collection of patterned floors that look like the real thing—The Coronelle Collection.

Each Coronelle Vinyl Corlon floor is beautifully textured and colored like the original—Spanish tile, brick, slate, or a brick-and-wood combination. So you get all the beauty of the real thing along with all the advantages of vinyl.

The Coronelle® Collection, by Armstrong.

The new Armstrong Time Paym Plan makes it easier than ever to c an Armstrong floor. Ask your Armstr retailer for details. He's listed in Yellow Pages under "Floors." Anc make sure you're getting an Armstr floor, look for the Armstrong name.

Throw away your pencil

...and get the best secretarial job in town!

Why be an ordinary stenographer when you can be a high-salaried Stenotype specialist working in top-level places where the important things go on? Stenotype is the amazing machine shorthand that frees you from the drudgery of written note-taking, yet enables you to take dictation at a speed faster than the speed of speech!

The modern secretary uses the modern machine shorthand

STENOTYPE

WORLD'S FASTEST SHORTHAND

Learn it at home in your spare time — even if you've never taken a shorthand note before!

EASY TO LEARN
EASY TO READ
Makes ordinary shorthand out of date

- Stenotype is a machine shorthand that uses only 22 symbols. It is not a pen-and-pencil system that forces you to memorize thousands of hooks, circles and special signs.
- Stenotype types an entire word at one stroke. Ordinary hand-written systems may require many strokes for a single word.
- Stenotype "takes" in plain English. This provides employers with a permanent, easily-transcribable record that is simple for any Stenotypist to refer to at any time in the future.
- Stenotype has no speed limit but the experience of its operator. Trained Stenotypists attain speeds of more than 200 words per minute. Complicated push-pencil systems can't compete.
- Stenotype is a small, compact, portable machine that is easy to take to courtrooms, conventions, or outside conferences at offices other than your own. This use of Stenotype — in a variety of unusual situations — is just another advantage the skilled Stenotypist has over ordinary shorthand secretaries.

TODAY in thousands of executive offices, courtrooms, and convention halls, Stenotype is the synonym for highest speed and accuracy in the taking of notes, letters, speeches, testimony, interviews and debates.

With Stenotype, the modern machine shorthand, you can step up from routine office work into an exciting career where the pay is far above the average. You can qualify as executive secretary, legal stenographer, conference secretary, or one of many other high-level secretarial positions.

Stenotype machine notes are easier to take—easier to read — easier to transcribe than written notes. You never have "cold" notes, for you "take" in plain English letters that you can readily read back. Even if you've had difficulty mastering ordinary shorthand, you can become proficient in Stenotype in a short time. Then you won't be doing ordinary work — your services will always be in demand where the unusual secretary is needed.

You can learn Stenotype at home, without interference with your present job. The Stenotype machine itself is included in your course.

ADDRESS BOOK

By EPSIE KINARD

Have you anyone in your little black book who can illuminate manuscripts as the monks did in the Middle Ages? I want to have my husband's favorite poem illuminated to look like a treasured old parchment, writes a McLean, Virginia reader.

One of the diminishing few who pursue this ancient art of decorating books, poems, favorite Psalms, testimonial and memorial scrolls and wedding certificates is E. J. Carroll of the Carroll Studio, 520 Fifth Avenue, New York City. The only difference between his and the medieval lettering is that his steel pen replaces the quill; rag parchment paper, the real parchment. Examples of his work are in the libraries of the Kennedy, Roosevelt, Truman, Johnson and other U.S. presidential families. Special ink, water colors, and 23-karat liquid gold are used.

Would you know of any source for reproducing brass teardrop handles—writes an Allentown, Pennsylvania reader—for a William and Mary dining-room set I am restoring?

P. E. Guerin, Inc., 23 Jane Street, New York City, which counts among its customers the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Brooklyn, the Cincinnati Art, and the M. H. deYoung Memorial Museums, and decorators in charge of historical restorations, will cast authentic reproductions of any period hardware: handles, knobs, hinges, hasps, locks, escutcheon key shields and other fittings. From this shop's 50,000 original period models, the chances are they will have the hardware you want to have reproduced. But if you have an existing fitting, send it for copying. Or send description, measurements and, if possible, a paper tracing of an impression left by a missing piece.

I have an old edition of Alice In Wonderland with a loose binding, writes a New York City reader. Do you know of a bookbinder who will repair it and retain the original cover?

Experts who take pride in repairing or restoring cherished old books to look the way they were are with the James MacDonald Company, 33 West 60th Street, New York City. They can take a book completely apart, resew it, clean all paste from its pages, reline it in a duplicate of its original paper, and put it back to look exactly as it did.

In the case of a valued first edition with torn and faded cover, wobbly leaves, or the sewing worked loose, these experts would suggest making a slipcover or box for it to prevent further wear and tear rather than tampering with the book. A first edition, they say, is more valuable if it hasn't been restored. Estimate sent upon receipt of book.

Do you know anyone who could create original contemporary designs for my needlepoint pieces? writes an Atlanta, Georgia reader. I'd take geometric, flame-stitch, paisley, faux marbre, or even op-art designs—anything to get away from birds perched on a branch and butterflies flitting around nosegays.

Robert Mazaltov and Son, 758 Madison Avenue, New York City, will make up original designs on order for anything from eyeglass cases to full-size rugs. Stylized animals for cushions for actress Mia Farrow, rugs for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, and chair seats for Blair House, the design echoing the pattern of historic blue-and-white dinner plates of the President's guest house, are examples of this shop's custom-made designs. Send a sketch or describe your idea. ■

THE BOOK OF THE RENAISSANCE

(retail price $17.50)

FREE

Horizon is a quite-out-of-the-ordinary, hard-cover quarterly. The magazine is designed to range widely among the arts, ideas, and history of man. It explores our civilization, from caves to Camus. With a penchant for good scholarship. With an eye for excellence in the arts.

In its generous size (9¼″ x 12¼″), in the fine papers and color printing of its 120 pages, Horizon resembles an expensive art volume. But it is much more. Your issues soon add up to a varied and valuable cultural library.

We can offer you a trial subscription now at a good price. And to make the bargain even more appealing, we'll also send you — free — a magnificently illustrated Horizon book: THE RENAISSANCE.

Dr. J. H. Plumb of Cambridge has written the main narrative. Nine experts contribute essays on important Renaissance figures. There are 480 illustrations — a third in color. This big, 432-page book is a panorama-in-print of the Italian Renaissance. It's a fine introduction to Horizon's world.

You would pay $5 a copy for Horizon. Or $16 a year by subscription. But now you may try it for a year at just $12.95. And you will receive, free, the splendid HORIZON BOOK OF THE RENAISSANCE.

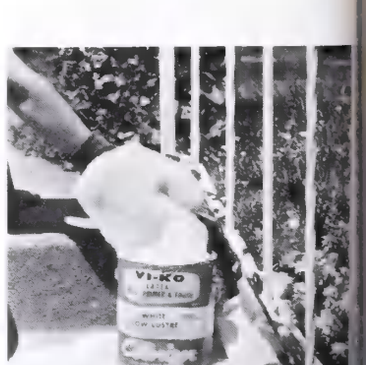
IT'S WORTH MENTIONING

By JULIE POLSHEK



These are refrigerating servers for highballs, beer, soft drinks, etc. They ice-lessly chill the drink; then "refrigerate" it indefinitely, even in outdoor use. You store Glacier Tumblers in your freezer to energize their sealed-in refrigerant. Kept there after use, they're on tap in energized state. Machine washable; structurally, deluxe plastic hermetically sealed; hold 12 ounces. The four-tumbler set and sock coasters cost $10. From Abercrombie & Fitch, N.Y.C. 10017.

When you use the Patio Warmer with its grill top and a charcoal fire, it's a barbecue. Used with a log fire minus the grill, it provides chill-dispelling warmth at poolside or any outdoor site. It travels in tilted position on rubber-tired wheels; parks firmly on any terrain. Its structure, a heavy-duty steel, has weatherproof, porcelain finish in red; bowl diameter is 32". $54.50. Available directly from manufacturer: Condon-King Inc., Lynwood, Washington.

Innovation from France for fish broiling or smoking. It's set on a barbecue grate with inserted fish locked in the cradle; when the fish needs turning, you just reverse the cradle with a flip of the handle. Also ideal for shrimp, etc.: in the oven in a pan of water, it becomes a fish steamer. With a 15" cradle, the Etain Fish Broiler/Smoker costs $9; 20", $12. Structurally, it's polished tin over heavy-gauge steel. From Bloomingdale's, N.Y.C. 10022.

FRED LERNER

Professional painting mitt is the ideal applicator for iron railings, posts, pipes, etc. It's fast, thorough, simplifies coverage of any contoured surface. A truly paint-proof liner, bonded to knitted cotton, supplements thick lamb's wool saturated for use by a mere dip into the paint can. $2.75. The Vi-Ko Metal Primer & Finish, also newsworthy, can go over existing rust; is a matte-finish paint. $2.95 a quart. From Plaza Paint Co., 1026 Third Ave., N.Y.C. 10022.

How sheets can decorate a bedroom. Not just a bed.

Plan a whole room theme with patterns and ideas from Springmaid.

corating with sheets has more to recommend it than king a prettier bedroom. It's fun, creative...and inex-nsive. One double-bed top sheet gives you about six iare yards of fabric, costing less than fabric by the yard. Springmaid has solid ors, stripes and floral tterns to offer you a de choice of decora-e effects. We've used lorning Garden" here cause its charming ral border in pink, e or yellow suggests many variations. Your master plan for room will determine ich items you'll make m sheets. Be sure to nder sheets before ing to insure correct asurements for the ished piece. Just to your imagination king, here are some gestions.

rt with a "Morning Garden" top sheet, working so that printed border forms one garland of flowers the length the drapery. Then sew additional borders to the sheet, ced according to the width of the drapery, a striking "stripes of flowers" effect.

st Ruffle.
e border pattern of orning Garden" is a natu-for this. Your border hem are ready-made so only have to gather or at it and tailor it to the bed.

Cafe Curtains.
Again, the sheet works perfectly for a double bank of snowy curtains, the floral border providing a finished hem.

Vanity Skirt.
We've used the "Morning Garden" bottom sheet, widely scattered with flowers from the border motif, and sewn the border to it for a pattern-on-pattern effect. Gather it for a bouffant flounce; or box-pleat for a more tailored look.

Now that you've got the idea, you can probably think of many variations especially suited to your own rooms. And with Springmaid as your "interior decorator," you can turn your bed of flowers into a "Morning Garden"—a roomful of enduring charm and fashion that you've created yourself.

Available at fine stores everywhere with other Springmaid fashion sheets from $2.99 to $10.99.

You can tell a lot about furniture quality by simply opening the top drawer. If you see the manufacturer's name there—a name you recognize—you can be sure of all this:

That the furniture is built to last. So you're not just making a buy for today, but a sound investment for the future. You can be sure the style and design are authentic, too. And you'll know you're getting good, honest value for your money.

A brand name means quality and integrity. It's the manufacturer's way of telling you that he stands behind his product 100%. With furniture though, you have to snoop to find the brand name. It may be tucked inside a drawer. Or on the underside of a table. Or hidden beneath the cushions of a sofa. Or on the end of a mattress.

That way, the brand name never detracts from the furniture's appearance. But it does add greatly to your confidence and satisfaction.

NOBODY EVER TELLS YOU THESE THINGS

—about food and drink

By HELEN McCULLY

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

Is it true sherbets are of Turkish origin? Yes. The Turkish spelling is serbet, the Arabic, sharbah, and the Persian, sharbat. Actually, it is a drink, and in the days of the Sultans, sherbets made of fresh fruits such as black cherries or strawberries, sweetened with sugar or honey and diluted with cold water, were served to honored guests in exquisite sherbet glasses. Many of these lovely glasses from the old palaces are now on exhibition in Turkish museums. The slender, graceful glasses are still made in Turkey (the ones available to us are evidently adapted from the original designs), and serbets are still drunk. However, sherbet, as we make it in the West, is really an ice—a cool and refreshing climax to a splendid dinner.

Do glace and glacé have the same meaning? Glace means ice, and glacé, from glacer, to freeze as well as to cover, means frozen or covered with icing or frosting or glaze. The French, with their customary logic, call ice cream, glace. Glacé, or glaze, in cookery, actually means to give a glossy finish to food.

Can nasturtiums be eaten? Yes, and they're extremely good. Flowers and all. Just mix them in with a plain green salad to brighten things up.

Are snap beans and green beans identical? Yes. Just as a matter of interest, there are two types of snap beans: the bush and the pole. And within these types there are green-podded and yellow-podded varieties. Some beans are round-podded, some oval, and some flat. Available the year round. That's the whole story, except there is no longer such a thing as a "string" bean.

What are cornichons? French gherkins, miniature pickles marinated in a spicy wine vinegar and used as a garnish to flavor sandwiches, etc. Except in size, comparable to our own standard sour pickles.

What is chine bone? According to the Random House Dictionary of the English Language, "The whole or a piece of the backbone of an animal with adjoining parts, cut for cooking." Interestingly, no other source at hand—cookbooks, other dictionaries, or books dealing specifically with meats—carries this information. With ribs of beef, the rack or crown of lamb, and loin of pork—where the chops are all in one piece—you should always have the chine bone removed by the butcher. Some butchers tie it back onto a loin or crown to seal in the juices, and it is removed before serving. As a matter of record, the ribs must be cracked between for easy carving and serving.

What is meant by freezer burn? It's a term used to designate oods, particularly meats, that have dried out in the freezer, because they have not been wrapped and sealed properly. Although the food is still edible, it will lack flavor (may even be ff-flavor), and the texture will be stringy. A grayish-looking rface is the sign to watch for. Frost-free freezers are more pt to bring this about because they are kept free of accumuted frost by fans which, as must be obvious, are drying. Hence ie very special need to use proper materials or containers, well ealed. To forestall freezer burn, moistureproof, transparent uilted bags, tied securely with rubber bands or metal closures, nd freezer foil or several layers of Saran, securely taped, are commended for meats with the bone in; freezer tubs or jars curely sealed can be used for meats cut off the bones, if sufently large to accommodate the meat.

ow long can frozen meats be stored? Ground beef and sauge, one to three months; fresh pork, three to six months; al and lamb, six to nine months; beef, six to twelve months. moked meats should never be frozen.

ote: This freezing-time guide should only be followed if ou have a separate freezer or your refrigerator freezing comartment maintains zero temperature or below. All meats to be ozen should be very fresh.

hould rice be washed before cooking? It depends on what hool of cooking you follow and what rice you are using. The hinese, who should know, always use long-grain rice and wash thoroughly until the water runs clear before cooking. This ts rid of the starchy coating. The Chinese also say rice should ot be stirred while it cooks or it will stick to the bottom, and ey never add salt or butter while it is cooking. Too much ater, most Chinese cooks will tell you, is the error many people ake when cooking rice. The Chinese use 1½ to 1¾ cups of ld water to one cup of rice. The French, on the other hand, our authority here is Mastering the Art of French Cooking) adually drop the unwashed, long-grain rice into boiling, salted ater, using seven to eight quarts of water for 1½ cups raw e, stirring it once after all the rice has been added. The inese cover it and allow it to simmer until all the water has aporated—about 20 minutes—and then allow it to stand, covd, not over direct heat, another 20 minutes before fluffing it th a fork. The French do not cover; they cook it at a moderately st boil for ten to twelve minutes or until the rice is just tender en tasted. It is then thoroughly drained. Converted and inant rice do not call for washing before cooking.

What are lingonberries? A mountain berry that grows wild Northern Europe, in Maine, and in Canada. Not unlike our miliar cranberry, although smaller, they are also known as ngenberries and lings. Available imported from Sweden in rs, cooked. Also from Canada, ready-to-cook, by the pound ost of the year in stores specializing in Scandinavian foods.

hould a cake pan be greased with butter or vegetable shortens? Modern cookbooks claim that butter—especially salted tter—will burn. It has not been our experience. If you are apehensive, brush the pan with a light coating of vegetable oil grease it with vegetable shortening. Whatever you use, be orough about it, so the pan—sides and bottom, curves and be, if any—are all completely covered, following, of course, cipe instructions.

Beautiful "Kohlapuri Chappals"

INDIAN SANDALS

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Hand-Made of Water-Buffalo Leather

These famous sandals were originally designed in the town of Kohlapur in the 18th Century. They combine wonderful freedom and comfort with the graceful beauty of the loveliest of India. Strong Water-Buffalo leather is worked carefully to give full pliability and long wear. Then it is beautifully embossed. Leather is a rich, deep natural color, looks more beautiful as you wear it. And it molds to your foot with wear, or if soaked in water and worn until dry!

This classic design flatters a woman's feet —is handsome on men. We guarantee you will find "Kohlapuri Chappals" the most comfortable and handsome sandals you have ever worn —or seen. Order in sizes from 5 to 12 for men and women. A remarkable bargain, too. These usually sell at $12 to $15.

There is a way to hit long, straight balls AUTOMATICALLY every time

#667 NEW TRU-DRIVE TEES

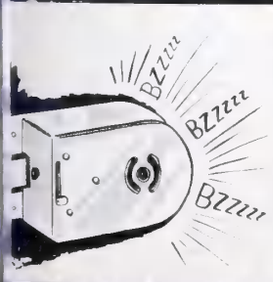
THIS IS IT!

You have to try this to see for yourself! And you can do it on our money-back guarantee. This tee gives you almost unbelievable results. Long straight drives every time!



It's simple because the tee is based on aero-dynamic principles that prevent the lateral spin which causes hooks or slicing. The tee cups your ball (see illustration). When the club hits the tee all the power behind it goes into getting the ball away—and no matter where the club connects, the power goes behind the ball, gets it away faster, straighter. You may hit a few yards to right or left, BUT YOU WON'T HOOK OR SLICE.

You'll get off drives that will amaze you for distance. You'll hit truer shots, this tee makes golfers out of beginners and club champs out of week-end golfers.

What's more, it saves you money on balls. You don't mark them up, you don't cut or mar them. You don't lose them so easily—and it speeds up your game.

Of course you have to try them for yourself. Order at our risk. If you are not completely satisfied—if you are not absolutely delighted with what it does for your game—return for a full refund.

Tru-Drive Golf Tees are only $1.98 for pkg. of 5. (They last for years if you don't lose them.) But get enough for your partners and friends. Special offer for 3 sets—$5.75 postpaid. Order now—impress your golf partners next week-end!

PERMA-GUARD—THE "EAR BLASTING" DOOR AND WINDOW BURGLAR ALARM

Sure-fire home or travel protection. With Perma-Guard on the job you can't be surprised by prowlers, burglars or intruders. Even guards you against unwanted entrance of pets, small children, etc. Just set this into door jamb, above the door—and if it's opened the alarm goes off with a loud, persistent buzz. Little larger than a pack of cigarettes. Needs no electricity, no wiring. Neatly designed styrene case. Foolproof—tamper-proof. #663 Only $3.95 postpaid. Two for $7.75.

Organize your personal papers at home with office-file efficiency and custom-crafted beauty!

Who'd ever guess that this fine, handsomely crafted end table leads a double life? It looks like an elegant end table, but it is also an ingenious aid for the "executive in residence." One file drawer (or two) slides open to receive a full bank of alphabetical files. Deep and long, it can accommodate years of files — correspondence, policies, and other important documents.

Drawers ride on non-stick nylon glides. Dovetailed for flush fit. Mounted with antiqued hardware. Every inch hand-made in our North Carolina workshop, where craftsmanship is traditional and values old-fashioned.

Thousands of executives use it! Why buy an ordinary file cabinet when a double-duty Executive File-Drawer End Table serves you — at no extra expense!

the Fair brings you a new concept in the decorative arts

New and exciting . . . for home or office. Inspired by museum pieces, they're truly works of art themselves. Use to hold magazines, as umbrella stand or waste basket. They're leakproof and can even be used as planters. Extremely strong. Not really wood, but you'd never know it, the detailing of grain and color is so well done . . . yet they cost just a fraction of the price of hand-carved baskets. Non-porous, easy to clean. Each about 14½ inches high, 10½ x 8½. Lovely colors in enough choices to fit any decor.

"Please take care of my sister..."

TAICHUNG, FORMOSA—Two-year-old Su Ying, her parents dead, waits for her brother who will never return.

Little Su Ying was abandoned in the alley behind our Babies' Home in Formosa. She was frightened, cold and hungry.

But as you can see in the picture, someone had tried to make her look pretty. Her hair was combed and her dress, even though torn, was clean.

In her hand she clutched a note written by her brother:

"Please take care of my sister. Our parents are dead for many weeks. I am twelve and can no longer find food for this small sister. To my ears came news of your House, so I bring Su Ying to you."

Will you help us give Su Ying—and youngsters equally as needy—a chance to grow up in an atmosphere of love?

For only $12 a month you can sponsor such a child and receive his or her photograph, personal history, and the opportunity to write letters.

Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(And if you want your child to have a special gift—a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear—you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Since 1938, thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate, person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

And your help is desperately needed. Overseas, our staff reports boys and girls still search garbage dumps for food . . . babies abandoned in the streets . . . blind children locked in cellars . . .

Little Su Ying and children like her need your love. Won't you help? Today? Thank you.

SAFETY DOOR LOCK

unlocked locked

Keeps your door locked securely until you open it . . . This little lock does a big job to keep intruders out. Made of solid brass, it's been designed and tested to withstand a force of more than two tons. And it's tamper-proof. Cannot be unlocked from the outside.

You install the safety lock at any height on your door. A single screw holds it in place. Yet when the door is forced, pressure of the lock against door facing gives this screw the strength of many. And it won't mar your door. Locks and unlocks with a flick of your finger.

Keep intruders out . . . children in . . . with this proven protection. Sold on a money back guarantee if not completely satisfied. Order one for every door in your house or apartment. $1 each postpaid.

KRESKIN'S ESP GAME

Ages: 10 to Adult For 1 to a Group

The game designed by the master of ESP, Kreskin himself. Everyone has fun testing his own his children's, his mate's, or his friends' ESP extra sensory perception. Dramatically revealing and surprisingly accurate this mysterious game provides hours of interesting fun as players find answers to questions of love, finance, travel, career and futures. Depths of the subconscious are disclosed as the eerie pendulum hovers and discloses answers often unknown to the player himself. Even ESP skeptics are amazed at the uncanny accuracy of this game when played with deep and sincere meditation.

CONTAINS: Playing board, Test Screen, Four Question Mats, pack of 54 ESP cards containing symbols and colors, one mystery pendulum, instruction booklet, and score pad.

the nicest thing about Zeigler Facial Care: IT REALLY WORKS!

This woman used to appear as you see her on the left, showing signs of normal aging. The photo on the right shows the dramatic improvement Zeigler Facial Care made in six fleeting months.

These photos are not retouched, and she did not lose weight. How was it done? By scientifically correct exercise of the facial muscles and stimulation of the deeper facial circulation. That's the Zeigler way—it does more than creams, vibration or massage. It is pleasant and effective to use; years of medical research and testing prove it so.

Will Zeigler Facial Care do this for your beauty?

Will it improve facial contours? ■ Reduce the prominence of fine lines and wrinkles? ■ Generally improve facial appearance with more youthful contours?

Improve tightness of skin, skin texture and complexion?

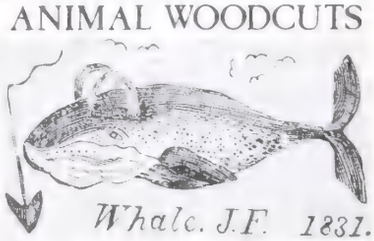
BOGUS DIAMONDS

Diamond prices are ridiculous. What we're offering is a new stone that sparkles like a diamond and is almost as hard as a diamond.

These bogus diamonds are called Caribbean Gems, and they sell for a fraction of what real diamonds cost. $40 per carat as opposed to over $1000 per carat for diamonds.

The nice thing about Caribbean Gems is that only a trained jeweler can tell these bogus diamonds from the real thing.



Caribbean Gems are so hard and so long lasting that we can offer this special guarantee. Anytime you'd like to trade up to a larger size, just send back your old Caribbean Gem for a full trade-in. No money lost.

Send for our free catolog.

All of our bogus diamonds come in 14 Karat gold settings. And we'd like to show you what they look like.

ANIMAL WOODCUTS

Whale. J.F. 1831.

by Jonathan Fisher (1768-1847)

6 RARE WOODCUTS

A rare discovery! Woodcuts done by Jonathan Fisher, Parson of Blue Hill, Maine. A versatile man of great energy and talents, Parson Fisher engraved 142 woodcuts to illustrate his book Scripture Animals, published in 1834. Through special permission of the Jonathan Fisher Memorial, Inc., we have reproduced six of his original wood engravings. These delightful, primitive animals are printed on antique finish, colored book cover paper. Size 11 x 14 inches (standard frame size). The woodcuts make handsome decorative groupings in home or office.

FALLING HAIR?

For years hair specialists have said: Relieve dryness and you help to stop hair loss and brittle ends from breaking. Thus you give your hair its chance to grow normally and attain its true and normal length — softer, silkier, more attractive. If you desire longer, longer hair, you must help to bring about conditions under which normal hair can grow. You will find new attractiveness, new friends.

(medicine for hair and scalp)

OUR GUARANTEE—

You must see the marked improvement in your hair. Your dandruff must be gone. Your scalp must stop itching. Your hair must look more attractive and alive. Your excessive hair loss must stop. It will no longer be greasy or oily. It will have a clean, softer, glossier look.

HOW TO LEAVE HOME AND LIKE IT

TAGS COURTESY OF NEPTUNE MOVING AND BARD'S MOVING & STORAGE

HOW TO MOVE —from here to there

By SUE NIRENBERG

Somewhere between the soothing assurances of the movers and the disaster stories of those who have moved lies the truth: It is possible to move efficiently—without comfort but without calamity—and with a good-humored acceptance of minor irritations. One thing is certain: Moving is no time for free spirit and originality: it is a heyday for orderly makers of lists: a time for the meticulous and the methodical.

Moving companies will help you make the lists. They will, if you like, pack your possessions, haul them off with amazing dispatch, unpack them, and replace them, but they will not hold your hand or find you a new dry cleaner or a friend for your child. But once the new home has been selected, they are the place to begin.

You must have a master plan—suggestions for it herewith—but you should not start more than a month ahead lest the dismantling of the present place cause you a small depression.

One month before moving

Get written estimates from several movers—written, because a pleasant chat is not a binding agreement. And remember that the estimate is approximate, only as accurate as your honesty in showing all you plan to move and as the inevitable unforeseen delays on the day allow. In choosing a mover, check with pleased friends, should you find any, who have recently moved. The Better Business Bureau in your city will be able to give you the official word.

A reputable moving company will usually supply a good crew. This is what counts and should concern you more than a low estimate, which is often simply an attempt to please the prospective client and secure the contract, no matter what.

In a local move, you pay by the hour according to the size of the truck and the number of men involved. (Continued on page 128)

See how Cascade eliminates drops that spot!

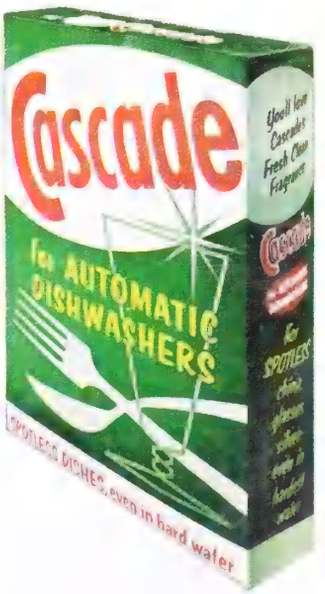
Even clean water leaves drops that spot.

But no drops, no spots with Cascade.

Only Cascade has Chlorosheen.

Wonderful how Cascade gives you such spotfree dishes! Cascade has an exclusive spotfighting ingredient, Chlorosheen. It makes water rinse off in clear sheets, so drops that spot don't form. And what results! Instead of spots, you get sparkle. Instead of towel touch-ups, you get spotless dishes you'll be proud to take straight from the dishwasher to the table. Convince yourself: try this fascinating test.

See how Cascade with Chlorosheen works!



A toothpick can't pry a water drop from a glass. The drop holds tight.

Toothpick is dipped into Cascade solution, then touched to the drop.

Poof! Because Cascade has Chlorosheen, the drop loses its grip and runs off.

To be "home free" yet able to leave—and leave all worry behind, merely by the turn of a key. The Apartment Life is this issue's sole concern. Home apartments that are as complete and spacious and secure as any leafy neighborhood's house. A city apartment with the elegance of a Versailles suite. Holiday apartments that wait for their owners to fly down to swim or up to ski. Weekend apartments of marvelous refreshment. Rooms with spectacular views of bays and rivers and oceans, of distant hills and ancient monuments. House Beautiful has taken the lift in Milan, London, Paris, New York, Atlantic City, Boston, San Francisco, Palm Beach to record space-saving solutions, quiet measures, storage arrangements, kitchens, window treatments, and finally, décor, for You who prefer to live in a slice of sky.

1. On Boston's Beacon Hill, in arched spaces over 100 years old

THE COUNTRY IN THE CITY

The current mingling of the old, the renascent, and the new on Beacon Hill is reflected in Architect Eduard H. Bullerjahn's top-floor apartment in what was once the New England College of Pharmacy. On the opposite page and the four following, examples of how, within old walls, modern concepts are combined with a cumulative collection of furnishings formerly used in the family's country house.

To bring to the city apartment as much of a country atmosphere as possible, skylights were introduced, so that interior gardens could flourish under direct sun. As a practical touch for these green-thumb spots, slate flagging or tiles are substituted for the prevailing parquet. In the arched window openings that face four ways, large plate glass substitutes for the original small panes. Arches in the new partitions reflect the same curves.

Almost everywhere, white walls to bounce the light, with here and there the original brick left for its rustic look. In appreciation of the pleasure of having so much light, such long vistas to lure the eye, the windows are kept unveiled by day, and the furniture is placed with consideration for the sun and the view. In the living room, with architectural daring, the light itself is treated as a luminous wall, three of the arched windows becoming niches, holding sculptured heads of Mrs. Bullerjahn and the two young sons. Hardly interrupting the views, these pieces nevertheless point up the happy fact that this remarkably scenic room is a family gathering place.

In this Beacon Hill rarity (because of its height), left, the twelve arched windows across the top identify the Eduard Bullerjahns' floor-wide apartment. Beyond the bright pink tulips, opposite page, a view from one of the apartment balconies across part of Old Boston and the Charles toward Harvard Square. Through living-room arches, top right, a glimpse of the greenery in the slate-tiled west atrium, called the winter garden, and of the open stairs curving up past an original brick wall to a terrace on the roof. The daytime look of the living room, right, all sunniness, airiness, outlook. Between the arched windows—now all glass, replacing tiny panes—golden curtains, ceiling-high, with something of the architectural impact of fluted gilded pilasters. After dark, when the curtains are drawn, the room takes on a different personality. Whether or not flames are leaping in the fireplace, there is a feeling of warmth, coziness, intimacy. With the world shut out, the room itself is freshly revealed.

The corner room, far left, with its private balcony and two-way views, was voted by all the Bullerjahns to be given to the boys' nurse. From the window over the desk, the dome of the Statehouse is visible. Game room, center below, with white walls or brick as foils for the billiard table's classic vivid green. The table was designed by Stanford White. Two bedrooms, below, for the young sons, open directly off the game room and are full of light, color, and modern furniture. At one end of the game room, seats, tables, and a TV set turn it into a place of entertainment. As shown in the plan below, the boys' wing is well separated from the rest of the apartment.

A SENSE OF SERENITY

Rarely do the privacy of hilltop living and the beauty of a water's view meet in a crowded city, but for Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lewis, who live at the crest of Telegraph Hill in San Francisco, there it is. With children grown, they have come back, like many others, to this often misty, always magical city. At the top floor of a small new building, designed by Architect Gardner Dailey, the Lewises, aided and abetted by Decorator Anthony Hail, have created all the pleasures of old-fashioned comfort and hospitality in the contemporary spaces of a window-walled apartment. Fabrics—traditional and luxurious—are silks and velvets and chintz and linen. Wood and silver are polished to a fare-thee-well. Here and there, Mrs. Lewis's collection of porcelain, and all about (on the fabrics, too) masses of flowers and greenery. Outside, in contrast to the calm of the apartment, toots and pipings from the boats and, occasionally, the mournful horns, regretfully announcing the approach of San Francisco's fog, which comes suddenly—and lifts just as suddenly. More

Lush green splashes of fernery on white fabric in the foyer, above left, create the impression of a garden room. A French Provincial bench is cushioned in a dazzling green linen; the dark-stained floor is nearly covered by an off-white rug. All cooling, refreshing. Contributing to the sense of outdoors: a skylight to let in streams of sunlight (by night, it is artificially lighted). The French barometer—in another city, a decoration—here, in unpredictable San Francisco, a necessity.

The blue-green cool of the Bay outside becomes part of the interior, let in by wide expanses of glass. Spacious rooms, high ceilings, and the monochromatic background of beige and white all play an important part in the beautifully composed tranquillity and graciousness of another time.
In the living room, opposite, the splendidly comfortable sofa and chairs in one seating area are covered in stylized bright white flowers on a brilliant Bay-blue cotton chintz—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis like "the look of blue to blue."
In front of the window wall, top, no patterned fabric competes with the view of the Bridge. Beige draperies frame the window but—for quite obvious reasons—they are seldom drawn.
Corner of the den, upper right, an extension of the living room, has walls and shades of beige linen, the edges bound in brown-and-black braid. On the window ledge, a brass telescope discovered by Mr. Lewis in an antique shop in Chinatown.
In the master bedroom, below right, the prettiness and gaiety of flowers strewn at random, it would seem, on the white cotton chintz of the bedspread and dressing table (not shown) and, captured in small jardinieres, bunches of fresh petunias.
Bath-dressing room, below, with wallpaper of the same pattern as the bedroom chintz, appropriately called "Mille Fleurs"; the tub a delight of beigey marble with three shelves carved into its back wall for bathroom luxuries.

3. In Manhattan, in a grand-manner building of the '20's

FAMILY APARTMENT, CHÂTEAU STYLE

The city, fine furnishings, delicate color, and children have long since been considered incompatible. The case is quite disproved in Mr. and Mrs. Harold Toppel's New York apartment. If everything here is a thing of beauty, it is because these youthful parents believe that children should grow up with loveliness and that excellence is not for kid-glove handling but daily enjoyment.

The Toppels' large, high-ceilinged flat, designed by Michael Greer, was built in the grand, solid manner of the twenties, with twin living rooms, each 20′ by 24′. One, shown overleaf, is a sunny jewel box à la française, its walls glazed (against urban dust) pastel yellow. The other, shown here, is a virtuoso performance in transforming an identical room into a contemporary, high-style family room, its walls covered in linen; its music, television, and sound equipment built in; and its steel, suede, and ebony fittings livably attractive to young and old alike.

By MARION GOUGH

In the manner of a sophisticated family room, the living room, shown here and opposite, performs variously as music room, library, and game room. Music-playing equipment, TV, book and record storage are enclosed in a massive wall case of Madagascar ebony, the same wood that veneers the doors and window frames. In easel holds a rotation of favorite paintings. The mood is contemporary, but the furnishings are a compatible mix of many eras. The desk is a crystalline modernity of glass and steel, its companionable armchair dating back to Louis XVI. Game-table chairs are 18th-century Dutch, the long sofa table a modern design "upholstered" in black ostrich leather. The mantel is French, the chairs steel and tawny suede, the coffee-table top a handsome conversion of a Chinese lacquer panel.

The drawing room, architecturally the identical counterpart of the living room on the preceding page, has the winsome delicacy of an 18th-century French court salon, its walls light as sunshine (and glazed against city soil). The room is a little treasury of rare pieces like the twin Louis XVI canapés shown above, one commanding the conversation group around an Aubusson rug, left, and the other at the screened fireside, right, with a Ghiordes rug and a table of glass and bronze dorée. In the grand French manner, silk table skirts and drapery cornices were hand-embroidered and appliquéd in related patterns in a Paris workshop. Upholstery fabrics, chiefly subtle stripes and damasks in Watteau colors, are documentaries. Walls were "paneled" in the style of 18th-century châteaux, lit by gilt sconces.

The dining room is surrounded by sylvan scenes of the 18th Century, painted on the antique panels that sheathe the walls. The dining table, reminiscent of the era's folies, is painted in faux marbre, given as a centerpiece a plateau of mirror and bronze dorée, crowned with a charming little "Temple of Love." Screening the kitchen door, embroidered silk panels worked in motifs to match the cornices. The rug, modern made, has been woven to resemble the patterns of old Savonnerie, suggesting the intricately tiled pavings of garden terraces. Chairs are Louis XIV. The glass-top breakfast table, below, is modern, but in the spirit of the antique. The supporting framework is a simulation of tree coral, brightly gilded.

The high-ceilinged rooms, uniformly large, provide the Toppel youngsters with bedrooms that are simultaneously playrooms. Appropriately, each is entertainingly patterned in wallpaper amusement—marching ranks of grenadiers, showers of polka dots, merry carrousels. Each is given a bright, strong, distinguishing color that picks out the woodwork detail.

The practical furniture is of the simplest Danish design. Each room has the comforting presence of a rocking chair and a bed or sofa bed, foresightedly chosen to last well beyond childhood. The bed immediately below is a fine reproduction of a steel Directoire campaign bed. In all the children's rooms, paneled walls conceal closets for toys and clothing, leaving floor spaces for play.

Master bath. above, paved in pink and black marble, is "paneled" in trompe l'oeil, painted moldings framing trophies in the Louis XVI style. A folding wall of adjustable mirrors over the basins shuts out a window which gave the room little light. Light comes instead from the mirror frame and a charming Directoire crystal chandelier. At each corner of the domed ceiling, a bull's-eye mirror further reflects light. The tiny guest bath. left, is visually enlarged by a trompe l'oeil garden view, framed as though by a window. The bathtub is completely draped and valanced in heavy silk, protected from moisture by a separate set of plastic curtains hung within the tub. Still in the 18th-century French manner that pervades the apartment, the basin, like a rococo amusement, is a carved shell of onyx.

4. In a tower overlooking the ocean at Atlantic City

Editor: ELIZABETH SVERBEYEFF

Built into the cool white window wall of the Atlantic City apartment, far left, is a wealth of storage space engineered to hold the stereo sound system, records, a serving bar, and liquor cabinet. Furnishings are simple, classic, such as steel and leather chairs designed by Marcel Breuer. On the heavy glass table, a sculpture by Harry Bertoia. Matchstick bamboo blinds, painted white, diffuse sunlight without shutting out view of beach. The same blinds cover door to terrace, near left. This terrace faces the ocean directly across the boardwalk. The unusual length of the living room was achieved by removing one wall of what was a bedroom in the original plan. The added space, below, contains a bridge table and sofas that double as guest beds.

CLASSIC

The joys of having an apartment at the beach are being discovered by an increasing number of families. For Jack and Muriel Wolgin, of Philadelphia, a weekend here, overlooking the ocean in Atlantic City, is as bracing as a cruise. The apartment is crisp, cool, invigorating, and a trip here is not bound by an itinerary. The shining, white-lacquered window wall, the white tiled floor, and the blue Atlantic horizon glimpsed outside, contribute to the sensation of being afloat. The storage wall at the windows, a feature worked out by the interior designers, Design Three, makes possible the clean-swept, shipshape mood of the scheme. Now deep-cut, the down-lit windows take on new architectural importance. More photographs on page 137.

5. Modern apartment in an old quarter of Paris

FRANCE TODAY, SAVOIR-VIVRE

By HARRIET MORRISON

In Paris, the contemporary design idiom is expressed with savoir-vivre. In the apartment of Daniel Kiener, shown here, on the following pages, and on our cover, today's urbanity is translated with controlled ease, stemming from a superb sense of scale and proportion, knowing attention to detail, and an instinct for composition. The apartment didn't just happen. It was rebuilt from a traditional layout in a picturesque 19th-century residence hotel on Avenue Georges Mandel just off the Trocadero in Paris. The owner created a smooth-walled rectangular room of ample and restful proportions, while retaining the stately double door of the original layout. The decisive use of animal prints, the deliberate use of antiques as ornaments, and the play of neutral color romanced with downlighting convey the message.

More

Buffalo horns on the library wall, a zebra skin on the carpeted floor, and zebra-pattern slipcovers on the deep sofas, give an animal vitality to the bachelor apartment. Gilt French Regence mirror frames hang over end tables.*

Each object in the Paris living room was selected and placed with a sure sense of scale to contribute to the imposing quality of the total composition. Italian Renaissance cabinet is a focal point. Trays are tables on the sofas.*

ALBERTO PINTO

Linen fabric stretched over walls of this Paris apartment is repeated on long radiator cover across end of room, at left. All colors here are subdued. Flaxen tones are a foil for black and white.

Living-room windows, above, are hidden by wooden shutters lacquered to a chestnut tone. In summer, these are replaced by sliding linen shades. Ebony columns hold Chinese porcelain vases serving as lamps.

6. A duplex in London's Pimlico section

ENGLISH CONTEMPORARY

Optical wizardry makes the duplex apartment of John Stefanidis, in the Pimlico section of London, appear much larger than it is. The total effect is open and uncluttered. Floor-to-ceiling mirrored panels flanking the fireplace are key elements in creating a generous sense of space in the living room. These give the illusory image of a continuing room, while the adjoining window offers a genuine vista for the eye to enjoy. The minimal use of furniture also contributes to the illusion of spaciousness. A pair of transparent plastic tables provides a resting place for sculpture, flowers, and other objects, without obstructing vision.

MICHAEL GRAY

Giorgio and Jolanda Wiskemann's apartment in Milan is a free-flowing combination of open living areas linked by tiled indoor pathways, and, at one point, by a deep red band on the ceiling. The ceiling band outlines the cross-shape nucleus of the floor plan, formed by the entrance hall and dining area, separated by a low, sculptured masonry wall. Tiled pathways lead from the entrance hall around each end of the divider wall. One path leads to the service area and beyond it to the children's rooms. The other path leads to the parents' room and the main living area in a corner of the house overlooking the Santo Simpliciano, one of the most beautiful squares in Milan, built around a church of the same name. The Wiskemanns are a husband-and-wife team of architects with three small daughters.

An indoor pathway paved with glazed tile in the Milan apartment connects the parents' room, above, in one corner of the young family's floor plan, with the children's rooms, in the opposite corner. The trail leads through double doors with inset fabric panels, shown from the parents' room and from the living room, right. In front of the library wall, top, the trail makes a left turn and continues along the window wall to the children's quarters. Murano glass, globe-shape lamps mounted on tall wood moldings are installed at corners of major living areas, a recurring design theme.

THE PROBLEM APARTMENT

The apartment is perfect—at first glance. The neighborhood is good, the building close to all the delights of the city. The casual visitor would even gasp with pleasure at the glittering view, the height of the windows, or the parqueted floors.

But the prospective tenant or owner, who cannot see where to put his dinner guests or his brandy or his son (on trips home from college), will be uncomfortable, and his wife even more so. They know that elegance of outlook and proximity to city lures do not make up for lack of storage, poorly planned spaces, and cumbersome architectural oddities.

When more is good than bad, can something be done to fix the trouble spots? Obviously, as the solutions on these six pages prove: graceful partitions, new cabinetry and window treatments, and artful dodging.

TWO WAYS TO CONCEAL DOORS

To avoid a shock of six doors placed without symmetry in a small area, this foyer was paneled in a wonderful French walnut, cut neatly to cover doors and spaces between. Designed by Edward Wormley for the Robert Bachrachs.

PHILIP ROEDEL

Hinged doors, utilitarian and looking so, were papered in a handsome mural to blend the four into one. Door and walls, a dark green, and the wide, dark band on the vinyl floor seems to enlarge the room. Designer and owner: Eliot Gordon Clark.

MAKING AN EXTRA BEDROOM

DRAPING THE WINDOW WALL

Interfering with the long window-walls in this United Nations Plaza apartment: heating and cooling units, and an obtrusive post (see drawing, right). To accommodate floor-length draperies, Interior Designer Sanford Jacobs, A.I.D., built a plywood valance and framework, which unifies the whole area. During the day, the undrawn draperies are neatly enclosed by the fabric-covered façade. Owners: Anita and Fred Rosen.

TO GIVE THE LIVING ROOM A SENSE OF PRIVACY

To make a separate foyer and avoid immediate entry into their living room, Mr. and Mrs. George Hansen built two storage units that also act as dividers between living room and foyer. One, for towels and table linens, opens on the foyer; the other, for stereo equipment and records, opens on the living room. Each side has quite a different look: white for the foyer, walnut and cane for the living room.

DIVIDER FOR THE L-SHAPE ROOM

Walnut-panel storage units separate different areas in this large L-shape room; the wood itself becomes, at the same time, the major decorating element. Edging even the windows, which face north and west, it is—as the photographs show—the stuff of which bar, display shelves, and divider cabinet are made. These units not only provide the storage for books, china, and silver, but create seating sections as well. To offset the dark of the paneling: pale blue-green carpeting, accents of blues and greens, and an occasional sharp white. Designed by Edward Wormley.

WHEN THE VIEW IS ALL

"I want a room drenched with sky," said Mrs. Henry McCormick Gross, so Designer Edward Martin placed her day bed across the window, used only shutters (seldom closed) as decoration. THE INSTANT GUESTROOM

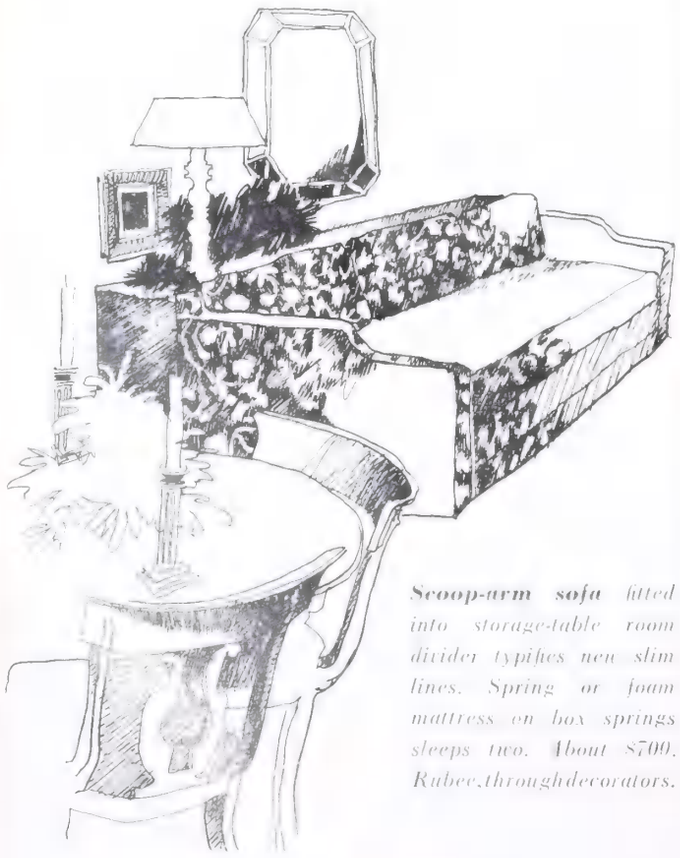
By EPSIE KINARD



So handsome in their own right, it comes as a surprise that these new furniture pieces also conceal beds. No longer bulky or hard to handle, the graceful, slim sofas are engineered to perform marvels. Such bed-concealing furniture, including cabinets and bookcases, is designed in almost every period style, has storage facilities, and, in the case of the sofas, may be upholstered in a choice of fabrics—quilted or button-tufted—many treated to resist soil. Though the bed frames are leaner, new mattresses and springs provide luxurious comfort. Many offer cleverly engineered headrests for late-show TV fans or bedtime readers.

Studio daybed fitted with floral print cover in two layers (top part comes off) has foam mattress and bolsters. In standard and king sizes, $260. Englander.

Swiss-sofa, in handsome cover of Danish wool, converts into single bed simply by pushing down the back. Foam mattress on springs, chrome frame. About $180. Stendig, Inc., through decorators.

Scoop-arm sofa fitted into storage-table room divider typifies new slim lines. Spring or foam mattress on box springs sleeps two. About $709. Rubee, through decorators.

Contemporary lounge upholstered in button-tufted biscuit design has double spring or foam mattress. Tilt rest. About $300. Krochler.

Traditional sofa, slim, trim, and luxuriously cushioned, is one of four period styles. Foam or spring mattress. TV headrest. Regular or queen size. About $389. From Flexsteel.

Cabinet hideaway, handsome teak or walnut façade for a new kind of Swiss-designed foam-mattress bed. A wooden spring base promises to improve quality of sleep. Sleeps one. Bookcase or cabinet, about $430. Lattoflex.

Period loveseat is upholstered in a sprightly cotton print, one of dozens of fabrics you may choose. Single bed comes with a coil mattress. About $240. Simmons Co.

THE NEW APARTMENT COMMUNITY

Swimming pools, private entrances, shops, well-conceived landscaping and lavish community centers make many of today's apartments highly attractive—even to the confirmed single-family homeowner

An apartment developer in Tucson, Arizona, warns his rental agents never to say "apartment house." "This is an apartment home," he admonishes.

Better than a salesman's euphemism, the word "home" is an accurate summing-up of the change in apartment living that has burst on our national scene in less than a decade. As late as 1955, when you rented an apartment, an apartment is what you got for your money. This space was accompanied, of course, with long-established services—elevators in high-rise buildings; trash removal; maintenance of building-owned equipment, and so on. But little more, in most cases.

Today, there is a staggering array of amenities packaged with the price of an apartment. They range from a simple park bench on a landscaped common through community buildings, swimming pools, and adult classes to vast recreational programs run by a social director and staff.

In fact, some apartments open up a way of life that is rarely possible in a single-family residence. While no one would deny that private homes can be and often are replete with luxuries, the size and financing behind an apartment development places it in a position to offer more.

Take, for example, the handsome collection of two- and three-story apartment structures ringing a small cove in Marblehead, Massachusetts. Called Glover Landing, and designed by Chapman & Goyette of Cambridge, the project begins by facing each of the 114 units toward the water.

Viewed from the bay, the buildings closely resemble a small New England village, clustered on the slope of a gentle, amphitheatre-shape rise above the cove. Trees, shrubbery, and patches of lawn weave in and out of the structures. And each family is privileged (at no extra fee) to make use of a large communal sun deck that surrounds and is slightly above their private beach. There is also a glass-enclosed common meeting room overlooking the bay, and below that, boating lockers, a sauna, and showers for the exclusive use of tenants.

Here, families with boats can use the docking facilities, take advantage of a launch service, and join the sailing club.

A vacation community? Sounds like it, but Glover Landing is situated about 15 miles north of Boston—well within commuting range of the city, and is peopled by quite a number of Boston executives and their families. Suburban apartment living, if you will. The advantage of a pleasant town like Marblehead without the responsibilities of maintaining a house. And that's what's happening—everywhere.

Center city, long the mecca for apartment dwellers, has already given ground to the suburban, and near-urban, apartment explosion. The Department of Housing and Urban Development notes that in 1962, 54 percent of apartment construction was within the central city. By 1965—latest figures available—this had dropped to 41 percent, while near-urban and suburban building rose from 39 to 46 percent.

Even more surprising, perhaps, is the apartment activity completely beyond the metropolitan centers. In years to come, you may be able to pick any U.S. community, no matter how small, and expect to find an attractive apartment development.

Typical is a new complex that has sprung up on 700 acres of rolling fields and woods in Southbury, Connecticut. Designed by Charles Warren Callister & Associates of Tiburon, California, there will eventually be 2,000 apartments and attached townhouses. None are over two stories, and all are carefully sited to produce the effect of a rustic Connecticut town. One hundred acres of woodland will be left virtually untouched to provide the residents with riding and nature trails.

Named Heritage Village by its developers, this apartment community is a taste of what is going to happen on more undeveloped U.S. land every year. It practically has to happen. Our population is swelling. The demand for and the cost of land is going up. The economic answer is to build more living units on less land. Thoughts of this coming to pass stir anxiety in some people, fear in others. Before passing judgment yourself, consider what took place at Heritage Village.

The developers had quite a fight on their hands. The prospect of 2,000 new families in a hamlet with a population of not much over 600 took on the proportions of a catastrophe for many townspeople. Moreover, in this community of private homes and farms, the word apartments elicited a quick negative reaction. Owners pictured tree-topping brick boxes, row upon row, scarring the landscape.

Today, owners who vociferously opposed the project are its warmest supporters. What won them over? Good design, for one thing. The buildings are low, long, wood-clad and beautifully proportioned. They are well separated, and worked into the un-bulldozed land as if they had grown there. Huge segments of the land remain exactly as they were before the project began. In short, the character of the land hasn't changed.

Will this be the pattern in all new apartment communities? Of course not. Some are bound to be commonplace. But the design levels, on the whole, have been exceedingly high, and there are good reasons to believe they will continue to be high. One explanation: The size and complexity of the project demand the services of an architect. While this doesn't automatically guarantee a successful design, the chances are considerably better than for a development of single-family homes ground out by a construction-oriented builder, sans architect.

There was more to the fears of Southbury homeowners than good design, however. Money was involved. Residents were afraid that shoddy, unimaginative structures would depress land values, and that apartments would bring in hordes of school-age children—the signal for taxes to go up. Both are legitimate concerns. The quality of Heritage Village design soothed owners on the first point. The more-taxes fear was eliminated when residents learned that only families with children over 17 would be permitted to settle into the project.

While intelligent planning and design can conquer apprehensions anywhere over shaky land values, the Heritage Village solution for no new school taxes will hardly work in every community. Families with young children aren't going to evaporate. In fact, the Bureau of the Census continues to report that an increasing proportion of our population is under 30. By the end of 1968, the median U.S. age will be slightly over 27. (Continued on page 126)

Living, thriving house plants bring to the contemporary habitat of man that elusive and wonderful sense of being close to nature. As urbanization takes more and more of us away from the land, our need for the beauty and freshness of plants increases. When the right plant is selected for a place indoors, it can be the delight of both decorator and gardener. Here we introduce an important selection of plants that can be grown indoors where the light is bright but not sunny. If you were to trace the ancestry of these, you would find that most of them came from the tropics, where they carpeted the floors of rainforests or grew as small, shrubby plants under canopies of vines and shade trees. Sizes vary from thimble-size miniatures to towering palms. Leaf textures may be bold, lush, and tropical; delicate, airy, and fernlike; or stiff and starkly dramatic. In this grouping you will discover an abundance of plain green plants, a wealth of kinds with richly hued foliage, and a precious few that yield flowers. See page 134 for more plants to grow without the sun, and cultural guidelines for all.

APARTMENT IN THE ROCKIES

The urban row house is reincarnated, with changes, in the ski-country sequence of duplexes above, planned by Architect Herbert Bayer, former Bauhaus master, whose headquarters are now in Aspen and who designed the famous Institute for Humanistic Studies there. Important departure from city row houses: the positioning of the buildings so that each terrace, at the back, with a wonderful view of forest and mountains, is completely private. No one can look into his neighbor's terrace. Significantly different, too: Each duplex is readily divisible into two apartments. Two stairways, one inside, one out, turn this trick. The interiors below, designed by New York Architect Armand P. Bartos, are in his own duplex, a holiday retreat.

As in more conventional arrangements, these quarters may serve as an extra bedroom for the owner's family, as a place for overnight company, or as a rental unit. In the latter case, since there is no kitchen on the upper floor, its occupants can either get room service from the Aspen Meadows Club or go to the dining room there.*

TWO APARTMENTS BY THE SEA

9. In Fort Lauderdale, co-op apartments serve as a base for year-round vacations

Where sun is a year-round brag, as in Florida, and air conditioning has taken the heat off summer, cooperative apartment houses, proliferating at a great rate, make the living even easier, incline more families to consider the subtropics as home base instead of a winter playground. With this shift of attitude, knowledgeable owners, unlike many earlier whole- or part-time residents, are changing their ideas about interior design and taking their décor cues from their summery Southern surroundings. Example: Mrs. Jean Carmichael's duplex in the Fort Lauderdale apartment house, right. In her living room, opposite page, mild sea and sand tones echoing the water and the beach stretching just beyond this room and its terrace. Bright thought in the living room: the split-level curtaining, allowing either half to be drawn against strong light.

10. In Palm Beach, the varieties of vacation experience, all at the same address

For secluded enjoyment of the outdoors, the South Ocean Boulevard apartment house, right, was designed by Architect Edward Durell Stone around a wide-open center court called the water garden. Here the owners can lounge or stroll shielded from the public view. For more active leisure, there is, on the roof, an open-to-the-sky pool adjoining an enclosed recreation room. All this to offer a total environment, not just a seaside motel room, to the occupants. The landscaping here, including the islands of trees in the blue pool, the spills of greenery along the top terraces, designed by the architect's son, Edward D. Stone, Jr. On the opposite page, near right, a glimpse of the high-ceiling living room in Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Biehl's penthouse, its surfy greens and whites appropriate to its position overlooking the Atlantic. The ground-floor living room, far right, in the same ocean-side building, belongs to Mrs. Louise Raymond. In a sun-loving fashion, she uses in its pale palette flowery coverings that repeat the cheerful yellows of sunshine.

BEER

By WILLIAM CLIFFORD

"Our victuals being much spent, especially our beer," wrote one of the Pilgrim Fathers after a rough 64 days at sea, the Mayflower dropped anchor near the tip of Cape Cod instead of pressing on to her original destination near the mouth of the Hudson River.

The first child born in the colony of New Amsterdam grew up to found a brewery on Wall Street, New York City.

William Penn built a brewery adjoining his house in Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

The Boston revolutionary, Samuel Adams, was a brewer, the son of a brewer.

George Washington wrote out in his own hand a favorite recipe for making beer, and he lamented the short supply of same to troops during the War for Independence.

If these notes from our Colonial history appear to portray the American ship of state launched on a foaming sea of fermented barleycorn, remember that a small draught of mild, generally homemade beer was long needed and consumed in place of unsafe drinking water. Beer has been the everyday drink of northern Europe for thousands of years, as wine is the daily beverage of the sunnier grape-growing Latin lands. Seals and jars and written records reveal that men learned to make beer before they ever learned to make war—at least there's no proof of organized combat back in the Bronze Age. In fact, the art of fermentation was mastered long before it was understood. Louis Pasteur finally explained it (the action of yeast) less than a century ago. But it still remains one of nature's magic tricks, like baking bread or making yogurt—which can be controlled though not synthesized by man.

In our generation, beer has shifted its role in the American way of life. Before Prohibition, three-quarters of the product was shipped in barrels and sold on draught in public places. Remember the beer gardens? They appeared when the waves of 19th-century immigrants brought the new German process for making light, sparkling beer and lagering or storing it a few months to improve the flavor and aroma. The immigrants also brought a taste for a Seidel of lager at the end of a day's work, and theirs was the thirst that made the fortune of many a beer baron, such as Matthew Vassar of Poughkeepsie.

"Full well we know That all we owe To Matthew Vassar's ale," still sing the Vassar girls after more than a century.

During Prohibition, beer found its way into the American home, one way and another, and since then it has stayed there. Today the pre-Prohibition ratio is reversed, about three-quarters of our beer being bottled and canned, intended mostly for drinking at home.

Nine-tenths of all the beer we drink is lager, a mild, refreshing, carbonated brew that is light in color, taste, and alcohol (usually about 3¾ percent). Next in popularity comes light ale, sometimes not too easy to distinguish from lager, though made with different strains of yeast and fermented differently. (The yeast settles to the bottom in low-temperature beer fermentation; in ale, which is fermented faster, at higher temperatures, it rises to the top.) American ales are generally a little more pungent and paler than beer, though just about all variations are possible. One of the finest of them, Ballantine's India Pale Ale, is dark amber, aged for a full year, high in alcohol (nearly twice that of ordinary beer and ale), exceptionally full-bodied and bitter. This sounds as though it might be the spicy nut-brown ale of English literature, and indeed the English have long distinguished spiced ale (flavored with spices and herbs as well as hops) from common ale, defined in Samuel Johnson's Dictionary as "A liquor brewed from malt, to be drunk fresh."

No lagering, then, for traditional English mild ale, and the English are so used to it this way that whenever they are confronted with lager beer, they're likely to make a mixed drink out of it by adding a dash of Rose's lime juice. Perhaps lager-and-lime makes as much sense as black velvet (stout and Champagne) or a shandy (ale and ginger beer). English ales range from the weak fresh drink sold in every pub under the name "mild," through best bitter, to bottled strong ale or barley wine. Porter is a darker, sweeter variation of ale, while stout is generally still sweeter, darker, and heavy with malt flavor. Guinness, the best-known of the stouts, is a bit drier and more bitter than average.

Besides light lager beer and ale, we as a nation drink a small amount of dark beer, also lager, often a bit sweeter and heavier with malt flavor than light lager. Bock beer is a somewhat sweeter and heavier type of dark lager that used to be made each winter for sale only during the spring. Today it often appears before the end of February, and supplies can be found in some stores for many months. A few breweries turn it out all year.

We also drink a great assortment of imported beers of premium quality. Your corner delicatessen may have them from England and Ireland, Denmark and Norway, Holland and Germany, France (Alsace) and Italy, Greece and Israel, the Philippines and Japan, Mexico and Colombia, and, of course, Canada —a veritable United Nations of beers. Most of them are lager beers (there are also a few ales, including porter and stout), of which the prototype is perhaps the original Pilsener Urquell from Czechoslovakia. The word "Pilsener" used on other beers indicates they are meant to be of the same lager type as the Czech beer from Pilsen. This one also reaches the American market, and it is a bit heavier and more pungent than most of its imitators.

Most imported beers are very good, as indeed they ought to be, for they are usually the best each of their countries has to offer and they sell at premium prices. Recently there has been an increase of lower-priced imports from Norway, Denmark, and Germany. Oddly enough, beers that originate 10,000 miles apart can sometimes seem remarkably alike. This is surprising if you consider the variables. First, there's the choice of grain—barley predominates, with adjuncts of corn and rice—and the way these grains are made into malt. Then the amount and quality of hops; these contribute the tannins and resins—the bitterness. Then the strains of yeast. Then the type of water—that's what made Milwaukee famous for more than one beer. And finally the art of the brewmaster. With the interplay of all these factors producing hundreds of different beers, every man can find something to his taste.

Or, more accurately, two out of every three men, for that's the number who drink beer. For women the proportion is lower: two out of five. For both, it's a youthful group, mainly between 20 and 40. These figures haven't changed very much in the generation since beer came home, but something else has. Today we're in the early stages of a packaging revolution, and the next few years may see radical changes in the beer poured at home.

Down through the year many imbibers have concluded that draft beer tastes better than bottled beer—fresher and softer, perhaps, and not so highly carbonated. The scientific reason for the difference is simply bacteria. From the time it leaves the aging tank and goes through filters into the barrel, draft beer stays under constant refrigeration, until it goes down the gullet no more than a few weeks later. On the other hand, bottled beer is neither shipped nor kept in cold storage. It may lie on a warm shelf for months before it is finally chilled and drunk. Therefore, beer in bottles has always been pasteurized to kill bacteria that could otherwise grow and ruin it. Recently, however, a new process was developed to filter out the microorganisms without harming the beer. The new "real draft beer" in bottles and cans needs neither pasteurization nor refrigerated storage, and it does come a good deal closer to the fresh taste of beer from the barrel.

You can enjoy genuine beer from the barrel on tap in your kitchen refrigerator, thanks to Reynolds Metals' new "Tapper," a refillable aluminum keg now distributed in many different parts of the country by four of our larger breweries. Like full-size beer barrels, the Tapper must be kept refrigerated at all times, but if you want to put it out on the patio or take it along on a picnic, portable accessories and refrigerants are available. The popular 2¼-gallon Tapper holds the same amount of beer as a case or four six-packs of twelve-ounce bottles. It weighs 26 pounds when full, and proportionately less after you and your friends have drunk up its 13 pounds of beer. A full Tapper sells in some localities for the same price as a case of bottles, in others at a premium, and there's a refundable deposit on the aluminum container.

The Tapper is fun at a party and well suited to our penchant for gadgetry and elaborate outdoor living. If enough of us can find space for it in our giant yet always jam-packed refrigerators (Reynolds made a survey to show that it would fit into 93 percent of them, but they didn't say what to get rid of to make room), then the Tapper may well revive the Elizabethan tradition of small beer at all hours of the day, all day long. That's something to think about.

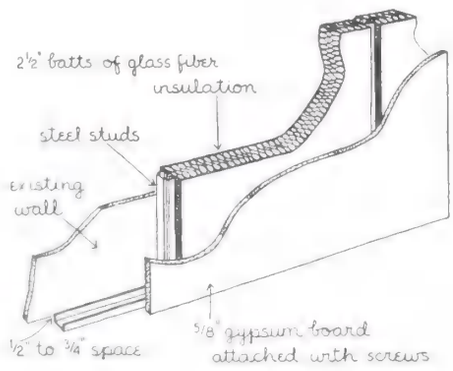
Other new conveniences in beer packaging are mainly efforts to help people who have trouble using conventional bottle openers or who can't ever seem to find the beer-can opener. Beer bottles are now available with tamper-proof aluminum screw caps, the same as wine, soft drinks, Macadamia nuts, baby food, and Pepto-Bismol. Aluminum cans now have flip tops or tear tops with a choice of ring or teardrop opening. The convenient six-pack has edged up to eight, then mushroomed to twelve, and we may one day expect to see an old friend with a new name: the handy carry-home case of 24.

Meanwhile, in the midst of all this to-do over the wrapper, the distinctive-tasting content, the pungent drink that's roughly as old as agriculture goes on pleasing many tastes, complementing a wide variety of foods, and contributing to the preparation of several outstanding dishes. Everyone knows beer goes with cheese, but how long is it since you've eaten a Welsh rabbit—that masterfully simple dish of melted Cheddar, seasoned, and blended with beer?

Living as they do just a shade too far north to grow wine grapes, the Belgians have invented a superb beef stew with beer called carbonnades. The name suggests that the meat was originally charcoal-broiled, and you can certainly add to its flavor by browning it that way if you want to. The normal way is to brown cubes or small slices of beef well in butter or suet, then lightly brown a large quantity of chopped or sliced onions, add seasoning, moisten well with beer, cover, and stew gently until tender. Escoffier's recipe (Continued on page 132)

LEASE AND QUIET

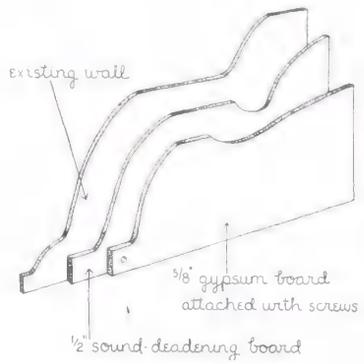
Rejoice if you live in a problem-less apartment. They do exist. But it's fair to say that many apartments have annoyances at least, in the form of construction flaws or lease restrictions. Here's a compendium of ways to circumvent such difficulties as noise from next door, no-wallpaper rules, and never-quite-right temperatures.



By JOHN H. INGERSOLL

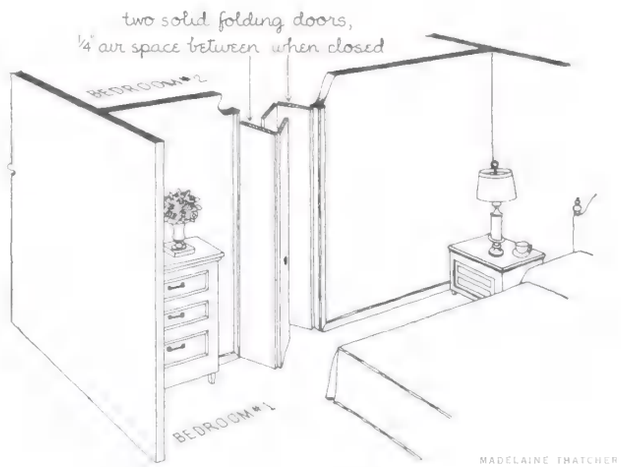
Nothing in this world is perfect. Apartments—most people would agree—certainly must be included in that comfortable dictum. Problems arise because of the nature of apartment construction, or as a result of the landlord's nervous apprehensions (which translate into restrictions in your lease).

Collected below are solutions to four major problems of apartment living: how to cut down noise from adjoining apartments; how to hang paintings and other wall decorations; how to install wall paneling; and how to maintain a comfortable temperature-humidity level.



CUTTING DOWN NOISE

Perhaps the most vexing problem is noise transmission through common, or so-called party walls, and through floors in apartments. Happily, this occurs less often in new buildings because technological advances make it easier and cheaper to sound-deaden relatively thin walls. However, that won't help you if you're facing this problem now, in your present apartment. The most effective way to gain some quiet is to have a second wall built, as illustrated below.



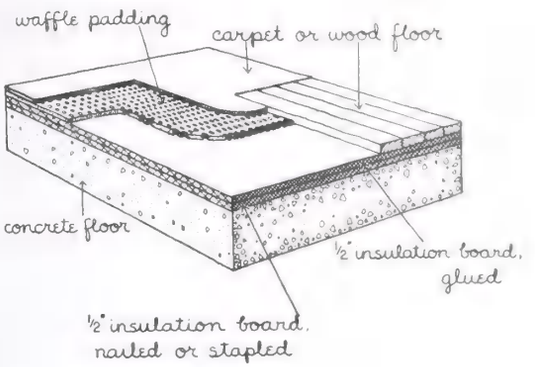
Because the new wall is an addition to the existing wall, you'll lose a 3½"-wide strip of floor space. Installation may run as much as $1 per square foot, and unless you own your apartment (as in a condominium), you would need to get the landlord's permission to remodel. But there's no question the system will reduce sound transmission. Normal household sounds from behind the wall will disappear. And even the sounds of a lively, crowded party next door should be trimmed at least to whisper levels, if not erased. This particular technique is recommended by Owens-Corning. Other manufacturers—Bestwall Gypsum, for example—suggest the use of less-thick insulation in combination with a ½"-thick sound-deadening board. Tests show that both these methods produce approximately the same level of noise reduction.

There is a second wall system aimed at deadening noise. You would turn to it if space in your apartment is more precious than sound reduction. As you can see in the sketch below, the two panels build out your wall no more than 1½", a span that conserves floor space and delivers a nominal increase in quiet.

Applying this system would probably keep out noises made by the everyday comings and goings of your neighbors, but it's likely you would still hear very loud voices.

If you want to muffle sound flowing between two connecting rooms, replace the existing door with two solid, folding doors. Even when the doors are ajar, as shown below, there is a considerable reduction of noise.

Less permanent techniques of sound-deadening walls aren't as effective as the systems described above, but some noise reduction is better than none. And those listed below are more suitable if your lease is for only a short time.



- Almost anything soft that covers the wall is of some value.

A heavy tapestry, for example. Or consider decorating with colored felt stretched over wooden frames that are then attached lightly to the walls. Even better, tack a fabric around insulating board, and mount the boards against the wall. These are ideas that have been used successfully by Decorator Beryl S. Austrian.

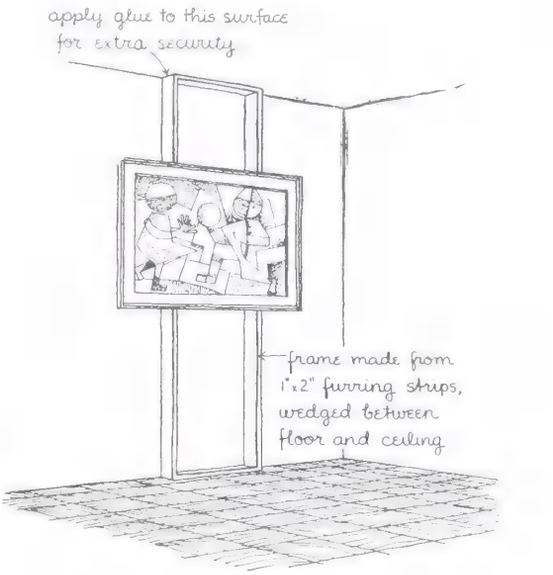
• If there is space in your apartment, and a need for storage, you can sound-deaden and gain shelf or closet room simultaneously. The shelving or closets ought to be free-standing, floor-to-ceiling, and backed by panels of hardboard, plywood or insulating board. The units should be positioned so that the back panel isn't touching the party wall.

• Room air conditioners help, on the theory that one relatively pleasant and consistent sound tends to cover up annoying and erratic noises.

What can you do about thumps and bumps that reverberate between floors? You can have your own floors treated so the neighbors below will remain friendly. If you're able to sign up for an apartment before a new building is completed, specify this construction:

When the insulating boards go down over a new concrete (or wood frame) floor, door saddles and doors can be ordered to fit. Unfortunately, this system is clumsy to use over existing floors. To muffle your footsteps in a finished apartment, put down heavy padding and wall-to-wall carpeting, or the new sheet-vinyl, cushioned flooring (by Armstrong, Congoleum-Nairn, or Flintkote).

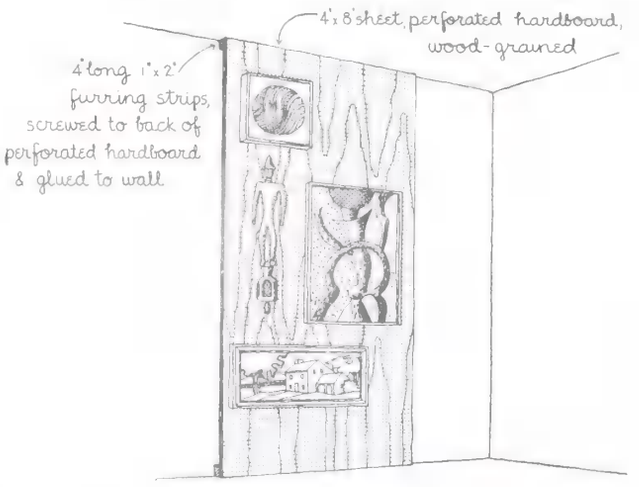
Noise coming into your apartment from above is more difficult to stop. There's always the chance you can persuade your neighbor upstairs to put down padding and carpet. But if that tack fails, the landlord refuses to do anything, and you're losing sleep, the best solution is to move.



Next best is a second ceiling. Owens-Corning recommends furring down, packing the space with insulation and finishing with more gypsum board. Even so, the company warns that some noise will get through. There may also be a problem due to building-code regulations. Acoustical ceiling tile—excellent for softening sound within rooms—will not stop noises penetrating from above.

Street noises can be curtailed somewhat by heavy draperies, the hum of an air conditioner, or weatherstripping around windows. Or, more lasting, thicker window glass.

HANGING PAINTINGS



There may be a restriction against hammering too many nails into the wall, or the plaster may be too old to support a heavy art object safely—two of the reasons for finding a way to hang paintings, plants, sculpture, or photographs without touching, or at least seriously damaging the walls.

Borrowed from art galleries, the idea of mounting a painting on a 1" by 2" wood frame is a good one and worth repeating here.

For additional peace of mind, you could glue the top of the frame to the ceiling. Width of the rectangular frame and the width of the painting ought to balance visually.

An even easier way to hang your paintings starts with a single tension pole. A number of these poles are slotted to take shelf brackets (one by Knape & Vogt, for example). The vertical slots are about 1" long and perhaps 1/16" wide. An "S" hook, purchased, or bent, will handle a light painting. Or you could insert the nail through a conventional picture hanger, bend down the pointed end of the nail, and drop nail and hanger into a slot.

The "instant gallery" above is an idea you may want to try in your apartment, restrictions or not. The fact that this is perforated hardboard gives you complete freedom to arrange the art pieces in any way you wish. And since the surface has a wood-grained finish (a recent addition to Masonite's line), the panel retains an attractive appearance despite the many holes.

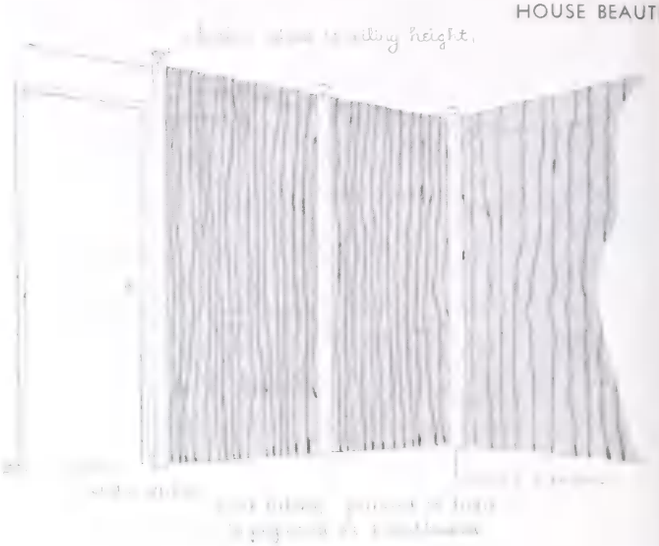
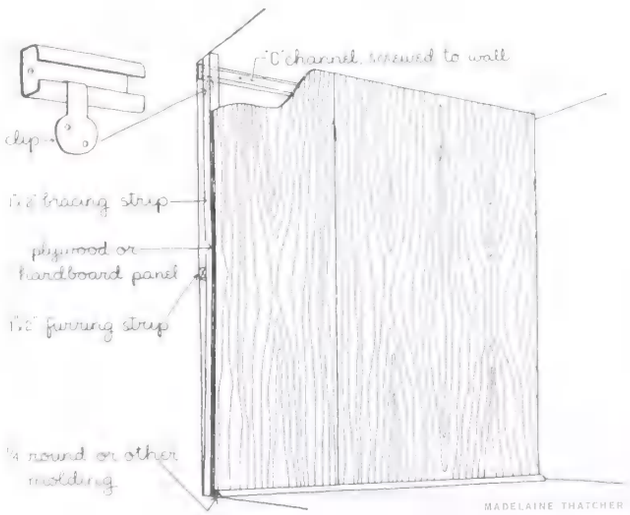
Ideally, the panel is cut to fit snugly between ceiling and floor. If your ceiling is higher than 8′, rest the panel on the floor and screw a panel-wide furring strip to the top before adhering the strips to the wall. Otherwise, position 4″-long furring strips at each corner and at the center of the panel. Use a good strong glue.



Three more suggestions: Rest your favorite oil on a decorative easel; move it wherever you want in the room. Build into free-form shelving a shape that will just surround the painting, which you would then frame simply and slide into the opening. Or you can hang your decorations from the built-out walls described earlier, or the paneling shown below—no harm whatsoever to the original wall.

Installing wall paneling

While most landlords probably won't object to wall paneling once it's up—installed in the normal way—the paneling becomes the property of the owner in 95 out of 100 cases.



Question: How do you put up wall paneling temporarily? One way is illustrated below.

Screws go into the wall only to hold the "C" channel. And by nailing through the wood flooring joints and into the subflooring, the molding can be stabilized without damaging the floor surface. Suggested and tested by U.S. Plywood, the system avoids panel warpage (bound to occur, since the plywood panels are all but freestanding) by bowing the panels out ever so slightly at the center with a horizontally-mounted furring strip. Careful cutting is required for a clean butt at the panel joints.

A system that never touches the existing wall is shown above. Square, matte-finished aluminum tubing, fitted with levelers, supports ¼″ plywood or hardboard paneling between flanges. Of course, the aluminum shows to the room, but it's quite attractive, serving as a pleasant foil for the wood-grained boards. With corner, end, and connecting tubes, it's easy to panel one wall or turn the corner and panel more than one. There's no simple way, however, to panel above a window or door. The tubing is a new product by Ameo Engineering Company of Chicago.

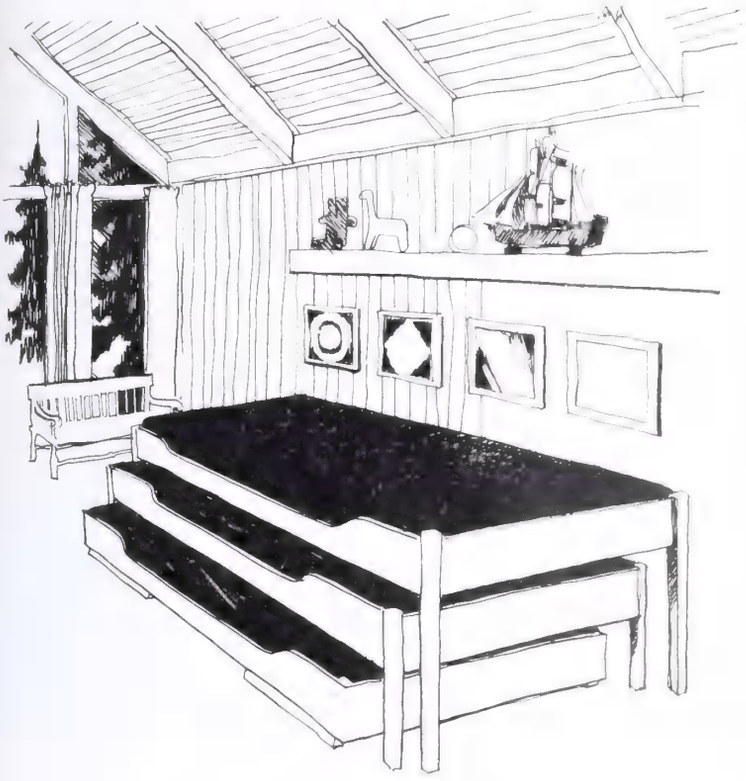
A third way is recommended by Velcro, makers of the nylon tape fastener used often in upholstery and women's wear. A commercial, extra-strength tape, called RCI Hook Velcro, is tenacious enough to hold up paneling. One 1′ by 8′ panel could be attached with a short strip of tape at each corner and a longer strip in the center. Hook tape is glued to the wall, and pile tape is glued to the back of the panel. For information on the tape, write to F. Schumacher & Co., 939 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y.

MADELAINE THATCHER

Wallpaper falls into the same category as wall paneling for many landlords. If you move, you'll most likely be asked to pay for stripping the paper and preparing the walls for paint again. You can avoid this by coating the wall first with Resistane Wallpaper-Release Coating. The paper is hung conventionally with Resistane paste. Whenever you move (or want to change the wallpaper), you can strip the paper dry from the wall, and the apartment owner can paint with no further preparation.

Temperature and humidity

If there's no 220-volt circuit in your apartment, the size of the room air conditioner you can install is automatically reduced. But you can still have some cooling. There are many 115-volt conditioners on the market—some that draw no more than 7.5 amps. It would be wise to connect the unit to a separate 115-volt circuit to put less strain on the fuses (the law, incidentally, in some cities).



You may find it inconvenient or impossible to use windows as the mount for air-cooled room air conditioners. In that case, have a KoldWave, water-cooled unit installed within your apartment—anywhere at all, so long as water supply and drain lines are available.

Or you can keep an apartment surprisingly comfortable during hot weather by installing only dehumidifiers. In the dry, crackling atmosphere of winter, you could hook up a portable humidifier. A single console unit will take care of the average-sized apartment.

Finally, if you're worried over air pollution, look into the new Tensor air purifiers, available at Hammacher Schlemmer. ■

Private clubs are a part of many new apartment communities today. This one has an outdoor and indoor pool, a beautiful lounge with a big fireplace, and a patio—at Kenilworth in a Kansas City suburb.

What's to be done? The key word in apartment construction is "balance"—becoming an accepted fact in many large apartment complexes. An example is The Meadows, a 219-unit development designed by Welton Becket & Associates in San Rafael, California. Here there is an age mixture among tenants that ranges from newly married, to the retired. But the distribution of age groups will remain constant, since young people may rent in only one area, the elderly in another. Thus, the number of new schoolchildren in that immediate zone is limited—a limit that is proportional to the number of new living units added from the point of view of township income.

This also seems a happy solution to the problem of friction between young and older generations living in close proximity. Living quarters are separate (the project consists of many low-rise buildings on a 24½-acre site), but more than enough common meeting grounds exist: three pools, a bank of tennis courts, a community building, and a park-like meandering of wide walks.

San Rafael, Southbury, and Marblehead are suburban in character, and the fact of suburban apartment community growth is real, expanding, and perhaps the strongest trend today in apartment construction. What's happening to center city and its periphery? Much the same thing, although in different forms, and rarely on undeveloped land.

Center city apartment communities are vertical, as a rule, due to the limited availability and high cost of land. In most cases, they are little more than conventional city apartments with amenities added. Typical is the Carlyle, a new 120-unit, high-rise building in Chicago. Condominium apartments in it are generously sized—from 1,780 to 5,130 square feet—and generously priced—from $55,000 to $175,000. Included are a roof garden, patio, sun deck, swimming pool, a ballroom-meeting room, and underground garage.

Other mixed buildings

Two more combinations are evident in the cities: the office-apartment and the hotel-apartment. The 100 Biscayne building in Miami, Florida, contains offices from the first through the 21st floor, and efficiency, one- and two-bedroom apartments from floors 22 through 30, all of which give an executive the potential opportunity to commute to work by elevator—rather an interesting concept.

A good example of the second combination is in Washington, D.C. On a ten-acre site along the Potomac will rise three cooperative apartment buildings, an apartment hotel, and an office structure (three buildings are up at this writing). Called Watergate and under one management, the complex will also feature a ten-store shopping mall, three outdoor pools, one indoor pool, and a health club. As the Watergate publicity puts it: "It will be possible to live, work, eat, shop, and play at Watergate."

Communities ringing the urban centers may well be the stage for the next wave of apartment complexes. Their location is favorable—close enough to city excitement to take advantage of it, yet distant enough to miss the brunt of urban ills.

One of the largest is in Bratenahl, outside of Cleveland (its high-rise is drawn on page 108). It is quite possibly the best example of how near-urban apartment communities develop. It is also a lesson on regenerating a

Estimates of several movers might be comparable (although generally they vary tremendously), but poorly trained men, difficulties in transit due to stairs, elevators, weather, and traffic conditions may cause delays and up the ante. (One of the delays is caused by the perennial problem of the lunch break in a local move. Where do they go and what do they eat that takes so long? No one, as yet, has found an answer.) In a long-distance move, the charge is for the weight of your possessions and the distance. These rates are controlled by the state for a move within a state and by the Interstate Commerce Commission for a move between states. (See box at right.)

The moving company representative will also estimate the number of cartons, barrels, boxes, and wardrobes you will need and supply them for you if you like. Other considerations that affect the estimate: Is there a piano? What about your appliances? Will the movers remove mirrors and other things attached to the wall? Some will, some won't. Although an estimate for either a local or long-distance move is only a guess, an experienced salesman from a reliable company can come astonishingly close, provided you show all. This is also the time to discuss packing and storage rates, both of which naturally boost the bill.

If the move is long-distance, plan to have the rugs cleaned and on the van. Many moving companies will do this, too. If it's a local move, have the rugs cleaned and delivered to the new apartment after moving day. This will avoid dirt from movers' shoes and cartons.

Attend, in your mind, if not in fact, to any reupholstering, furniture cleaning, floor scraping or staining in the new apartment. Whatever you can do to set things up at the new home will help.

If you've been avoiding the murky depths of your closets for many years, now is the time to plunge in. Rather than move the useless and pay the price, give away any outdated, outgrown or worn clothing. Get rid of extra wire hangers, all mateless clothing that requires mating, pictures you don't intend to hang, bibelots you'll never display, magazines you'll never read.

Think about insurance coverage. The mover is liable for 60 cents a pound for each article, but this standard liability set forth by federal and state regulations may not provide enough coverage. Ask your mover or your insurance agent about additional protection. On a long-distance move, the company makes a list of each article to be moved. Be sure to get a copy of this inventory. If there is any discrepancy, notify the company immediately.

New laws set by the Interstate Commerce Commission, January, 1967

- All estimates on long-distance moves now must be made in writing, and if an estimate is ten percent, or more than $25, below the actual charge, the customer must be notified at least 24 hours before the goods are delivered.
- If there is to be a delay of at least 24 hours in the delivery of goods, the customer will have to be notified by telegraph or telephone.
- Interstate household-goods movers no longer will be permitted to sell trip-transit insurance. Instead, they will be required to extend their liability to 100 percent if requested by the customer. Extended coverage is set at 50 cents per $100 valuation. However, the customer may not declare a lower valuation than $1.25 per pound of the shipment.
- Interstate movers will have to acknowledge all written claims within 30 days of receipt and will have to make a settlement offer or reject the claim within 120 days.
- Moving companies will have to report to the I.C.C. monthly all underestimates of ten percent or more. They also will have to report the disposition of claims and reasons for any delays in settling claims.

Take a position now on the big packing controversy. Decide if you're going to do it yourself, because if you are, and your possessions are many, start now. Against packing is the time it takes, the unimaginable fatigue of lifting, wrapping, and bending. There are the martyrs, of course and you might be one who like to tell how they packed every bit themselves—and some add that they never will again. It's a question of your family situation, your income, your disposition, as well as your strength and ti

For the weary or pregnant busy, there is the blessed comf of the professional packers— lg tough men with agile fingers a professional equipment who c do the whole job in a day l less. If you prefer to do part of yourself, they will finish wh you have abandoned even on e day of the move. All movers, ho ever, advise professional pack of fragile articles.

Here are packing suggesti for the hale and hearty: Reco should stand on edge, never fl in their jackets. ■ Pack tigh but don't overload. ■ 50 pou a container is all right no mo ■ Don't pack inflammables. Avoid packing liquids. ■ Don't big, heavy trunks or clumsy wo en boxes (they take more ti to handle). Light, compact, c rugated cartons are best. ■ not pack cartons above the t edge. ■ Seal with tape. ■ Pa lamp shades in separate carto ■ Do not use newspaper, as newsprint rubs off. ■ Clothes normally hang up should placed in full-length wardrobes they can be moved hanging ■ Wrap silver in tarnish-gua tissue. ■ As for books, clean the at this end: they are easy to pac and the post office has a speci low mailing rate for books. may pay you to mail your boo instead of moving them. Shredded or crumpled pap makes the best cushioning. ■ Co tainers should have lids that ca be secured with tape or twine static community. And last, a neat summation of just about everything that is fresh and imaginative today in apartment community planning.

A ten-minute auto ride from downtown Cleveland, Bratenahl is a three-mile-long sliver of land east of the city and facing Lake Erie. It is a surprisingly rural, tree-rich village locked into its site by the lake on the north and a high-speed, eight-lane freeway on the south. For over a century, Bratenahl has been the home of Cleveland's wealthiest families—the setting for houses on the scale of Newport and Palm Beach.

In the mid-1950's, residents began to grow concerned over some of the larger estates falling into disrepair, and the fact that heirs to much of the property were settling elsewhere. Determined to preserve the charm and refinement of Bratenahl, a group of landowners formed the Bratenahl Development Corporation, and as a first step, asked the Urban Land Institute in Washington to conduct a preliminary land-use study of the area.

A $30,000,000 development

To give you some idea of the complexity of an undertaking like this, the ULI study was made in 1958, and led to a second, more exhaustive study by planning consultant Carl Feiss, AIA, who handed the corporation his report in January, 1960. What followed was a gradual development of the area, essentially along the lines that Feiss recommended. The working "plat" (land-use development plan) was jointly drawn up by Nicholas Satterlee, AIA (formerly with Satterlee & Smith, and now heading his own firm, Nicholas Satterlee & Associates) of Washington, and John Terence Kelly, AIA of Cleveland. Then Satterlee and Kelly separately went to work designing structures within the community.

In September, 1966, three model suites in Bratenahl Place, a high-rise apartment, were opened to the public. And in May, 1967, the first townhouse group was shown to Clevelanders.

Nearly a decade has elapsed since the first stirrings of the Bratenahl Development Corp. In another decade, the $30,000,000 program should be completed. By then, it's more than possible that additional land within the village will be taken under the BDC wing. As it is, the corporation owns or controls approximately 300 of the 600 acres in the village (90 of which are used for schools, streets, a park, and the village hall). At present, this land is not altogether contiguous. The townhouse group, for example, is on a site approximately one-half mile from the high-rise buildings. This would be unusual for a suburban apartment development, but is not at all out of keeping with re-developing a near-urban community.

Most importantly, the character of the village has been maintained. The designs of both townhouses and high-rise buildings are in excellent taste, as are the contemplated plans for cluster homes, single-family homes and community buildings. The prices are commensurate. Rentals begin at $350 and run to $730 a month. Condominium apartments start at about $46,000, scaling upwards to $118,000. The range for townhouses is between $72,000 and $97,000. Cluster homes and single-family homes are expected to be in this pricing area.

The new Bratenahl, then, will be a total mixture of living accommodations. Residents will eventually have their choice of high-rise apartments; high-rise condominiums; townhouses; cluster homes (single-family homes clustered to permit larger green belts in common), and single-family homes. As of June, 1967, there were two high-rise buildings up—one a rental unit, the other a condominium—and eight townhouses.

Now consider the amenities. On the roof of the rental unit, 16 stories above the level of Lake Erie, is a glass-enclosed penthouse lounge with a small kitchen and bar. Residents may relax there individually, or reserve the space for a private party. Outside the penthouse are sun decks and an expansive patio. On the first floor of the rental building are a handsome restaurant, cocktail lounge, and bar, already in operation. Planned for the future is a grouping of small shops that will open into the building (a beauty salon, cleaners, specialty foods, and many others).

Outside the high-rise buildings, in a parklike setting, are the ubiquitous swimming pool and cabanas, a putting green, tennis courts, and a lovely brick promenade and gazebo along the lake front. Planned for the future: a marina and yacht club and a shopping center, and the corporation has even considered building a nine-hole golf course.

Auto parking for residents is heated and underground. On duty at all times, day and night, will be a doorman and a watchman, as well as a gatekeeper (the high-rise buildings have a private entrance).

Has this had a favorable effect on the village of Bratenahl? Although it's a bit soon to give a positive answer, the indications point to "yes." The surest sign is a rise in land values, and that has been happening.

While Bratenahl is in many ways unique, the prospects it offers for the good life make a forceful statement on the direction now taken—in many other forms, to be sure—by apartment developers throughout the nation. Your chances of living in a "Bratenahl" are getting better all the time.

Nor do all the amenities mentioned so far end the list. Young families were immediately attracted to Storybook Apartments in Houston, Texas, because a professionally run nursery school was right on the grounds—a part of the development.

Families on the move

Or consider the Colony, an attractive collection of low-rise apartments in Towsen, Maryland. Built by Multicon, a nationwide developer in Columbus, Ohio, the settlement is intended for families "on the move." A social director organizes bridge clubs, ceramic classes, exercise groups, great book discussions, and the like to bring together people transferred to the area—who quite likely will be transferred out within several years.

In the Washington, D.C., suburb of Burtensville, Maryland, a new high-rise apartment called Greencastle is built right on an 18-hole golf course. And Point East, an enormous development in North Miami, Florida, has its own bowling alley.

Is all of this a view of what will happen in the years ahead? In a word, yes. Demand for it is clear and unmistakable. And developers are as clearly hastening to respond to that demand. ■

We've heard it . . . maybe you've thought so too . . . Why does Wayside charge $1.00 for its catalog when most other nurseries give theirs away gratis? Well . . . if our catalog cost only a few cents each . . . we too, would be delighted to distribute ours without charge.

WHAT TO GROW WHEN YOU HAVE NO SUN

A magic world of unusual and interesting house plants awaits every person who dares to venture beyond the common greenery sold in stores. Summer and early autumn are the ideal times to purchase these plants, as there is less chance of harmful shock in the change from the grower's greenhouse to your home.

If you are looking for a large accent plant, one that may someday be a small tree, make your selection from these: araucaria (Norfolk Island pine), aucuba (gold dust tree), brassaia, cordyline, Appleleaf croton, dieffenbachia, dizygotheca, dracaena, fatsia, ficus (F. elastica, F. lyrata, or F. benjamina), monstera, palms (caryota, chrysalidocarpus, cycas, howea, livistona, phoenix, or rhapis), pandanus, philodendrons (P. eichleri or P. selloum), pittosporum, pleomele, and podocarpus.

The list of medium-size house plants to grow without sun includes many with colorful foliage, and several that flower. Consider: aechmea, aglaonema, amomum, anthurium, aphelandra, Aralia fruticosa Parsley, asparagus-fern, aspidistra, campelia, chlorophytum, clusia, ctenanthe, cyperus, English ivy, ferns (asplenium, cyrtomium, davallia or rabbit's-foot, nephrolepis or Boston, nidularium or bird's-nest, platycerium or staghorn, polypodium, polystichum, and pteris).

Also attractive are: guzmania, gynura, hemigraphis, homalomena, hypoestes, justicia, ligularia, neoregelia, ophiopogon, peperomia, peristrophe, most philodendrons, rhoeo, sanchezia, scindapsus, spathiphyllum, syngonium, tolmiea (piggy-back plant), and vriesia.

For a garden of miniatures in a well-lighted spot that receives little or no direct sun, select from these: adiantum (maidenhair fern), small-growing or young African violets, Aglaonema pictum, Bertolonia maculata, Caladium argyrites, calathea, chamaeranthemum, cryptanthus, most episcias, Ficus radicans variegata and F. repens pumila, fittonia, miniature gloxinias (Sinningia pusilla and Doll-baby), helxine (baby's-tears), Needlepoint English ivy, Maranta oppenheimiana tricolor, small-growing orchids (Erythroides nobilis argyrocentrus, Ornithocephalis bicornis, Paphiopedilum concolor, and Haemaria discolor dausoniana) Philodendron sodiroi, pilea, Polystichum tsus-simense, Pteris ensiformis evergemiensis, Scilla violacea, selaginella, and strobilanthus.

If you need shelf or basket plants that will provide a cascade of foliage, sometimes set with flowers, look for: aeschynanthus (lipstick vine), Campanula isophylla (star of Bethlehem), ceropegia, cissus (grape-ivy), columnea, episcia, chlorophytum, glecoma, hoya, pellionia, plectranthus, saxifraga, scindapsus, senecio, serjania, tradescantia, and zebrina.

Because there are begonias in sizes, shapes, and colors to fit practically every situation, they merit a separate listing. Kinds known to thrive in shade: Calico, China Doll, Dancing Girl, Glory of St. Albans, Her Majesty, His Majesty, imperialis, Iron Cross, H. johnstoni, Kathleyana, King Edward IV, King Henry VII, Lucille Closson, luxurians, President Carnot, Red Berry, Roxanne, Silver Star, Stitched Leaf, Tea Rose, and Winter Jewel.

pends to a large extent on your own enthusiasm and effort. Where lack of time or space presents a problem, one well-grown specimen may be more rewarding than several less prominent plants.

Temperature. The plants discussed here will thrive in the average temperature range of today's centrally heated and cooled homes. Generally this means a range of 70 to 80 degrees F. by day in winter, with a drop of five to ten degrees at night.

Light. While most flowering plants need a few hours of sun, these foliage types thrive in a bright place, protected from direct sun. The light requirements for each plant vary, owing to its age, time of year, temperature range, and the part of the country in which you live. Yellow, scorched, or burned leaves probably indicate too much sun; pale, spindly plants show a need for stronger light.

Humidity. Moisture in the air surrounding house plants has a lot to do with how they prosper. A range of 30 to 50 percent relative humidity is desirable. All tropical foliage plants benefit from a misting of the leaves with water at room temperature. Several plants in individual containers may be grouped effectively in a shallow tray of moist sand or pebbles.

Soil. The plants illustrated and discussed in this article grow best in a humus-rich, spongy medium. If you mix your own, combine equal parts garden soil, peat moss, and sand. Prepared mixes are the answer for most indoor gardeners. These have been pasteurized so that pest and disease are much less likely to occur. Transplant to fresh soil and a size larger pot when roots fill the old soil. Rejuvenate large plants in tubs or planters by removing a few inches of the old soil at the top and replacing with new.

Containers. Selecting suitable containers for your house plants can be one of the most enjoyable aspects of gardening indoors. If a container designed specifically for growing plants is not suitable from a decorative viewpoint, you can place the plant in a standard clay or plastic pot, fitted with a saucer to catch excess moisture. Slip this functional unit inside a slightly larger and more decorative container.

Watering. For some persons the mystery of when and when not to water takes the fun out of gardening indoors. This needn't be a puzzle. It's strictly a matter of common sense. If soil at the surface looks and feels dry, chances are it's your cue to water. Long, sunny days and warm rooms cause plants to need more moisture. Water evaporates through the walls of unglazed clay pots, so that plants in these need watering more frequently than those in glazed ceramic or plastic pots. Dryness to the point that leaves wilt is harmful. At the other extreme, very few plants can survive if the roots stand in water for long periods.

Grooming. Shower small plants in tub or sink; sponge off leaves of large specimens. Foliage plants indoors benefit from this treatment at weekly intervals, but once a month or each season will help. Remove yellowing and drying leaves regularly. These measures help prevent pests. In the event of insect attack, use a convenient aerosol of house-plant pesticide.

Feeding. House plants need biweekly or monthly feedings of a diluted liquid house-plant fertilizer. Apply to soil that is slightly moist. Mix exactly according to directions on the fertilizer container.

Vacation care. When you have to be out of town, and there is no one to water your plants, here are some ways to keep them growing: (1) Set containers of water above the plants. Run heavy cords from the water to the soil of each plant. (2) Another way is to place a plastic covering over the plants. This will retard evaporation so that water may not be needed for seven to ten days, but be sure the sun doesn't shine on the plastic. (3) A small collection of plants can be placed in a sink or bathtub that has been padded with several thicknesses of water-saturated newspaper.

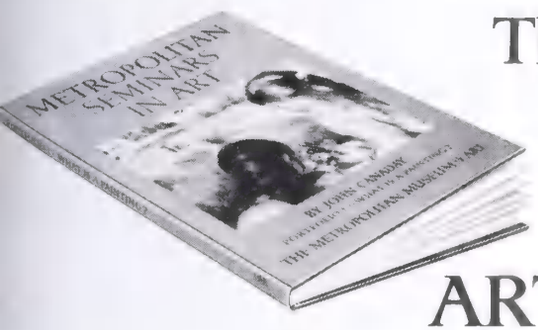
Are you one of many who admire the Mona Lisa for the wrong reasons?



MONA LISA by Leonardo da Vinci

PERHAPS, like so many people, you attribute the Mona Lisa's greatness to her enigmatic expression—to the fact that she "begins to smile," if looked at long enough. Or perhaps you are intrigued because her eyes seem to "follow you around the room" through some technique known only to Leonardo.

Both of these common reactions are discussed in the very first portfolio of the Metropolitan Museum's Seminars in Art as prime examples of the superficial fashion in which most people look at paintings. As the portfolio points out, anyone who admires a painting solely because of its technical competence or the appeal of its subject matter is probably missing what the artist is really trying to convey. A surprising number of otherwise cultivated persons have this blind spot when they stand before a work of art. Either they admire it for the wrong reasons or, if the work is the slightest bit "abstract," they are completely baffled.

Those who suffer from this form of bafflement probably have never had the opportunity to take a good art-appreciation course at a university or attend a clarifying series of lectures at a museum. It was to remedy this situation that the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York devised an unusual program of assisted self-education in the understanding and appreciation of art. The invitation below is made to acquaint you with the thoroughness of the program and its unique method of learning by comparison among great paintings.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art

FOR TWO WEEKS' EXAMINATION

THE FIRST PORTFOLIO OF

ART SEMINARS IN THE HOME

PUBLISHED AND ADMINISTERED BY BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, INC.

THE IDEA: A well-rounded and comprehensive course of lectures in the appreciation of art in which the whole family can participate. You learn by comparison among paintings, utilizing no fewer than 144 large full-color prints of great works. . . . It is like being conducted over a period of time through all the world's museums by experienced lecturers who make clear the fundamental things to look for in whatever paintings you may ever see.

EACH LESSON comes in the form of a portfolio, the core of which is the lecture. But in each portfolio is a pocket containing twelve large full-color reproductions. These pictures are provided separately so that they can be compared side by side with one another to clarify whatever points the lecture aims to illuminate. They have a great advantage, however, over reproductions thrown upon a screen in a lecture hall. They can be more faithful to the originals, can be studied for as long as one wants and can be referred to again and again. Another advantage is that members of a family can "take the course" either separately or simultaneously—husband and wife, parent and teen-age child. Reading each portfolio aloud, and examining the reproductions together, is like visiting a museum together, pointing out to one another something to be appreciated and enjoyed.

HOW THE COURSE OPERATES: One can enroll in this program of twelve portfolios just as one would enroll in a semester course in art at a university—with one important difference. You may, if you wish, drop out of the program at any point without proceeding with the complete course. The portfolios are sent consecutively—one every thirty days—but you may, of course, proceed at whatever rate you choose. The price of each portfolio is $3.75 (plus a small charge for mailing expense). This cost includes the twelve separate full-color reproductions, mat size 9½" by 12½", which come with each portfolio. In most retail stores each set of twelve would sell by itself, in comparable reproductions, for from $6 to $7.50.

If you love paisley, prove it.

Paisley neckties for your husband. Paisley headscarves for yourself. And once in an all-out burst of affection, a paisley blouse. Why don't you stop skirting the issue of your passion for paisley and cover your whole floor in it? There is nothing tepid about our black-and-white paisley rug. It is very paisley. And modern. And controversial. People will love it. Or change the subject.

If you want to get the conversation back onto your new paisley rug, you can point out that it's all wool. You can show them the fringe. You can say that paisley's origins are Persian. A they can get Lees Paisley for the either as a rug, or as a gorgeou loom carpet. And then you coul exotic dance. That would look nice on your new paisley.

That's why we made the CAROUSEL!

It's not an easy job for one organ to keep the whole family happy.

So how does Allen do it?

"Swinging Hammers!" An entirely new concept. And only the CAROUSEL has it.

Guitar, mandolin, harp, banjo—each one springs to life when played by Allen's patented "Swinging Hammers." Hold a note or a chord. The hammers do the strumming for you . . . or the picking . . . or plucking . . . or rolling . . . or twanging.

Then press the organ couplers—bring everything into play for the big happy sound that has everyone talking.

Play it like a traditional organ. You'll hear a new richness in all your old favorites—even classical and church music become more inspiring with Allen's authentic organ tone.

The CAROUSEL is beautifully handcrafted, in six distinctive styles. Why not send for more information?

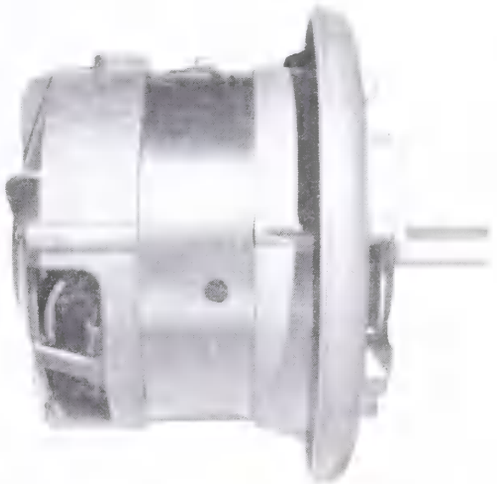
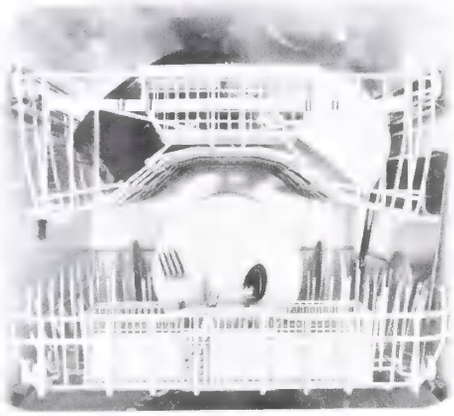
How to buy a good dishwasher.

ere are some things to look for if you're oking for a good dishwasher.

First of all, peek side and see hat washes the shes. Some dish- ashers use sever- spray gimmicks. it spraying isn't ashing. Water s to have just e right velocity, lume and mo- on to get dishes ally clean. (A itchenAid dish- asher uses a rdy wash arm, th water action effective dish- come out com- etely clean, without any hand-rinsing.)



Then check how it dries. Most dish- ashers have a simple heating coil that dries dishes the same as if you stuck them in a hot oven. All this concentrated heat could harm fine china and plastic- re. (A KitchenAid dishwasher has a parate heater and fan located outside e wash chamber that circulates hot air er, under and around each dish. It's very thorough and safe.)



Be sure to consider how long the dishwasher will last, too. This is hard to tell, but here are a few points to consider. Is the dishwasher made of durable materials? (For example, KitchenAid dishwashers have porcelain enamel on the inside and outside of the wash chamber.) Is the motor dependable? (Few manufacturers bother to design their own motors. KitchenAid does. And tests them electronically before assembly.) Is the dishwasher inspected after it's assembled? (Every part is thoroughly checked and every single KitchenAid dishwasher is hooked up for a test run before it leaves the factory.) Is the dishwasher made by specialists? (At KitchenAid it is. KitchenAid is built by the people who have made commercial dishwashers for restaurants, hotels, hospitals, etc., for over 80 years; home dishwashers for nearly 20 years. And many of these original home dishwashers are still going strong.)

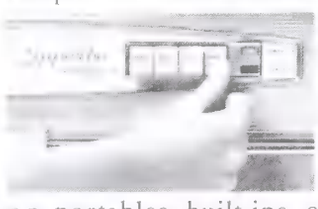
Another point. Find out how much the dishwasher holds. You'll probably get an answer in place settings. But look for yourself, too. If you see empty corners or notches cut out of racks, the dishwasher has a lot of wasted space.



But capacity isn't everything. A good dishwasher should be convenient to use, too. See if you can adjust the racks to hold big things like roasters and deep bowls. And you should be able to pull the racks all the way out so you can reach in the back easily. On a portable dishwasher, can you reach the lower rack without unloading or removing the top rack? And watch out if you have to load dishes in a certain way. This gets to be a pain in the neck.

One more thing. You shouldn't have to fuss with dials or knobs with a good dishwasher. So make sure the dishwasher works completely automatically, at the touch of a button.

And if you want your dishes and glasses to dry without any spots get a dishwasher with an Automatic Rinse Agent Dispenser. You'll find this is very important if you live in a hard water area.

Now, if you want to save some time before you start looking, here are two more things you can do. (1) Ask some KitchenAid dishwasher owners how they like their dishwashers. (2) Send this coupon to KitchenAid Dishwashers, Dept. 7DB-9, The Hobart Manufacturing Co., Troy, Ohio 45373. You'll get full details on portables, built-ins, convertible-portables and dishwasher-sink combinations.

KitchenAid dishwashers are products of The Hobart Manufacturing Company.

Some people have to paint their house every 3 years.

Others have aluminum siding.

The original finish on aluminum siding is so durable it lasts for years and years.

It never flakes, peels or blisters because aluminum doesn't absorb or transmit moisture. And, unlike other sidings, aluminum doesn't rot, rust, warp or crack.

To keep it clean, just hose it down. It'll look almost new again.

Aluminum insulates, too. It can help keep your home cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter.

And aluminum siding is beautiful. See for yourself. September is Aluminum Siding Month and your dealer has a wide range of decorator colors to show you.

Whether you choose aluminum siding for its looks, its durability or its economy, one thing is certain: once you put it up it can't get you down.

ADDRESS BOOK

Valuable names and places—for unique services—from our little black book to yours

By EPSIE KINARD

Anyone in your little black book who will pull from old herbals some botanical prints that I could frame and hang on my kitchen walls? asks an Ames, Iowa reader.

Walter Schatzki, 153 East 57th Street, New York City, supplies rare black-and-white woodcuts from first editions that go back to 1543. One notable collection is Leonard Fuchs' Kräeuter Buch, a 16th-century German herbal with 8-by-12-inch woodcuts and German text printed on mellow rag paper. Sharing honors with herbs are handsome old prints of cucumbers, mustard, onion, lentil, fennel, beets, and other vegetables and trees and bushes famous through the centuries for their aromatic tea blossoms. The price of these prints ranges from $7.50 to $12.50, and many are one of a kind.

Who will reweave a hole in an Aubusson chair seat highly valued as a family heirloom? writes a Trenton, New Jersey reader.

Doctoring ailing Aubusson and needlepoint chair seats, tapestries, Oriental and Aubusson rugs is the specialty of the European-trained Helen Madeleine Klemm, P.O. Box 60, Planetarium Station, New York City, 10024. She expertly reweaves tears and holes, repairs frayed edges and retufts threadbare areas, matching new colors and patterns to old with thread or yarn drawn from a valuable hoard she restocks in France. She will do the work on home premises, if the customer lives close enough to New York. If not, damaged chair seats (carefully removed from the chairs), tapestries and small rugs can be shipped by mail. Miss Klemm asks that customers write, describing their problem, before shipping.

Where can I have the nonfunctioning works replaced in two handmade silver pepper mills of Colonial vintage? asks a Houston, Texas reader. The Little Grey Fixit Shop, 108 East 96th Street, New York City, will take pepper mills apart, remove rust, recut dull cutting edges, repair or replace damaged gears. Reassembled, the old mill grinds like a new one. This shop will also spruce up a mill's exterior by removing dents, polishing metal bands and top, and oiling and polishing natural wood. Often by stripping paint and oiling the natural maple, birch, or cherry, hidden beauties are revealed. Estimate sent upon receipt of mill.

Where can I replace the glass liner for an antique silver ice bucket? writes a Duluth, Minnesota reader. Hormel Corporation, 20 West 47th Street, New York City, replaces glass liners in ice buckets, thermos jugs or bottles, and earns paeans of praise for taking on utensils of foreign make which present problems. Cemented in with plaster of Paris, broken liners in Italian, West German and English-made ice buckets, thermos containers and in unstandardized chrome pitchers from Japan have to be painstakingly cleaned out before new liners can be put in. Estimate will be sent upon receipt of utensil. ■

"If I were starting life over again, I am inclined to think that I would go into the advertising business in preference to almost any other. This is because advertising has come to cover the whole range of human needs and also because it combines real imagination with a deep study of human psychology. Because it brings to the greatest number of people actual knowledge concerning useful things, it is essentially a form of education...It has risen with ever-growing rapidity to the dignity of an art. It is constantly paving new paths...The general raising of the standards of modern civilization among all groups of people during the past half century would have been impossible without the spreading of the knowledge of higher standards by means of advertising."

Isn't it strange to find people in this country today who, in the name of everything Franklin D. Roosevelt stood for, criticize advertising and seek to restrict it? Well-meaning people who say that it is unfair competition for a big company to spend more on advertising than a small company. Ignoring the fact that it is advertising that helps small companies grow big . . . companies like Polaroid, Xerox, Sony and dozens more who have taken on the giants in the marketplace and won their niche.

These people think we should restrict the amount of advertising a company can do—just to be fair. But, of course, big companies spend more on research and development than little companies, too. And that's even more unfair because it helps develop new products the little companies don't have. So, perhaps, w should restrict research and developmen

People, Places, Pleasures

By DUNCAN MacDONALD

Widely known for her radio interview programs from New York, Miss MacDonald is an acute observer of the many worlds of esthetics, entertainment, travel, and the home.

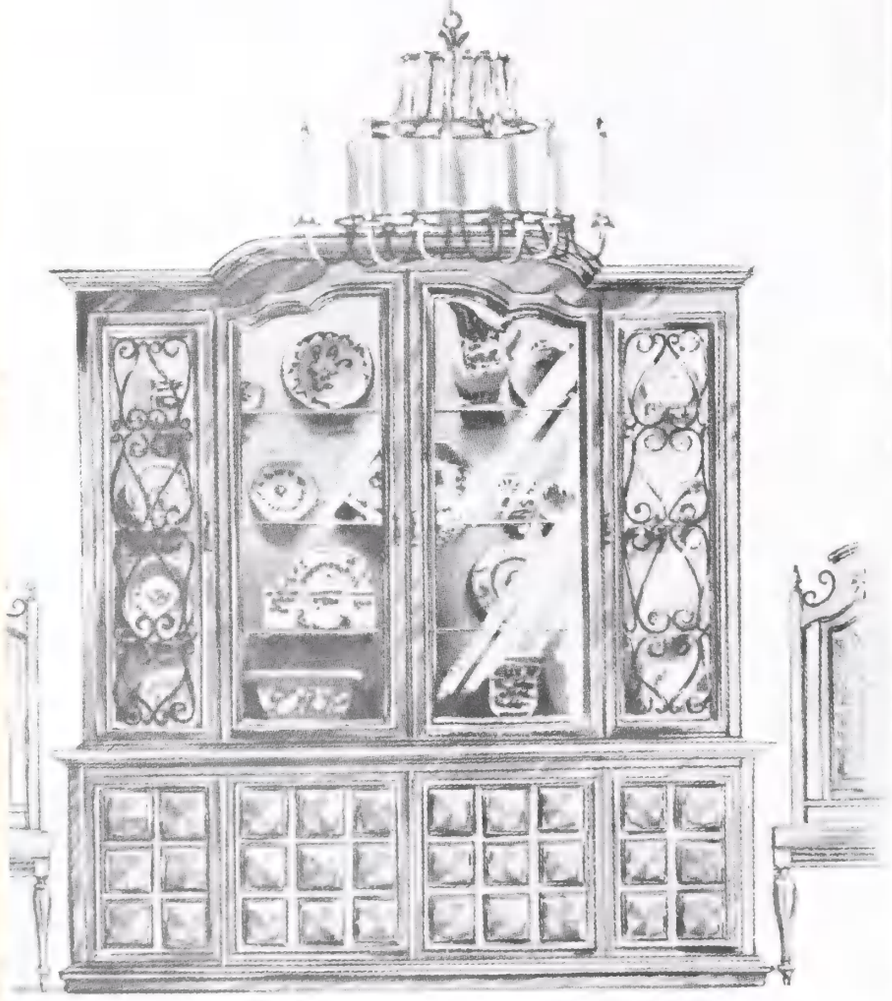
Autumn and spring are the cousins of our seasons and share a pleasing affinity. At both turns of the wheel, creative people seem to be explosively renascent, anticipating and sometimes projecting the future: William O. Douglas looks to the future of our conservation interests. John Diebold speaks of computers. Mildred Robbins sees women in a changing world. Andrew Hepburn and Moshe Safdie consider new directions for the architecture of our houses.

FOR THE NATION: Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas has long been in the forefront of the fight to preserve some of the present world's natural beauty for the world of tomorrow. He has written more than twenty books, several of them dealing with the preservation of our natural resources. One is A Wilderness Bill Of Rights; more recently, Farewell to Texas: A Vanishing Wilderness.

The Douglas prediction for the future: "We are going downhill very fast. Our rivers—the Missouri and the Merrimack—are nothing but open sewers. The fish are gone. The wildlife is gone. All the Great Lakes are threatened. Lake Tahoe is becoming a stench pool. This is happening all over the country in almost every river and every lake."

When I asked Justice Douglas what could be done, he replied, "I would like people in every state to do what we are trying to do in the State of Washington with the Wild Rivers Bill. This bill names the rivers that shall be forever wild . . . so we'll always have a river free of pollution. The swimming holes, the fishing, the canoeing will be there in 100 years."

INNOVATION: Moshe Safdie, the Israeli architect, took oversize children's blocks, piled them up into an apartment house that he calls Habitat 67 because it is part of Expo 67 at Montreal. This is an intimation of apartment-house dwelling in the future, he suggests, because the basic pattern is subject to infinite projection without loss of the original values.



If Moshe Safdie gives voice to the views of the innovators, one might expect Andrew Hepburn of Boston and Concord to speak for the traditionalists. Known as one of the great architects in restoration of Early American treasures, Mr. Hepburn is supervising architect of Philipsburg Manor, the Sleepy Hollow Restoration at Tarrytown, New York. He seems to cling to the values of the old, while embracing the new: "Architecture will come around, of course, but not in full circle. Rather a kind of spiral that will recover for us the classic proportions, though not necessarily the classic detail."

SENSATION: There had been some discussion of Moshe Safdie's cubes when the question was raised, somewhat irrelevantly, as to the possibility of people living under the ocean. Mr. Hepburn's eyes lighted up. "I don't see why not. It's possible, and would surely produce a new architecture influenced by tides and mean currents. Moshe Safdie's ideas might be especially applicable—you could just lower a room-size unit at a time, each fully equipped. Of course they'd be watertight, and divers could put them together."

Andy gave another smile as he said: "You will have fish

CASA de BLANCO is a fresh reminder that Spanish design is a newly exciting source of decorative inspiration. All the enchantment of Old Spain and New Spain comes together in White's numerous style variations and design motifs. Many pieces are richly ornamented like this elegant breakfront. Others reflect the simplicity and decorative charm of Country Style Spanish. Deeply etched carvings, ornamental black wrought iron, brass studded latticework, and the light, honey-hued finish present fascinating plays of color and pattern throughout the collection. Decorating with Casa de Blanco is like choosing individual, custom-designed pieces. See for yourself with illustrated booklet.*

feeders instead of bird feeders, sea ferns in your garden, and sea anemones in your underwater corral."

ORGANIZATION: All of the technological advances are certain to affect the status of women. Mildred Robbins, president of the National Council of Women, sees women moving into new positions of advantage. She stresses the increased use of able people in all areas. "People with special drive or skills may be detoured but not for very long deterred."

Millie Robbins feels that our international relations will become increasingly complicated. "With the communications satellite, our knowledge and understanding of each other will grow. Some misconceptions will be erased, but new ones will arise, for just as it will be easier to make known a point of view, it will also be easier to be misinterpreted."

AUTOMATION: If one wants a prediction about technological change and automation, why not talk to the man who coined the word—John Diebold. At the age of forty-one, he is a pioneer in the field, advisor to governments and to many of the world's most important business leaders.

A man who continually projects his thinking into the next century, John Diebold's concern is not with the machines themselves, but the human problems that will face us. He sees information technology producing enormous social change. "As the quality of life is changed, as the rate of learning, information, travel and communications all change, we will see a major change in living patterns, in hopes and desires; in short, a complete new environment will exist."

Mr. Diebold tells us that we are already living in an automated world where computers prepare our bank statements and examine our income tax returns.

Mr. Diebold speaks of "a device . . . a small television screen, a keyboard, and built-in copying equipment. You ask a question, you see the answer on the screen. If you want a copy of the answer, you simply push a button." He told me that by the early 1970's, such equipment would be routine for offices; equipment for home use would follow shortly thereafter.

Within a few years we will be able to dial a central agency to get information on just about any subject: medicine, nutrition, menus, and recipes. A central computer will be shared by numerous homes, following the procedure already in use at some of our major universities, where teletype machines and long-distance telephone lines take care of the needs of many thousands of people. The development of the time-sharing system will make it possible not only to obtain information on the spot, but also to figure household accounts or estimate repairs or project family budgets.

More and more, machines will participate in the details of everyday living, with instructions given to "turn on the air conditioning at 7 A.M., put on the coffee at 8 A.M., open the garage door at 9 A.M., and at 10 A.M., feed the dog." When a person is away from home, dialing a number will set it all in motion.

Mr. Diebold says: "We have left the push-button age. We are now in the age where the buttons push themselves."

Among the 30,000 computers buzzing away every day in the United States, there are those tied into a box-office network. Through a burgeoning business called Ticket Reservation System, it is possible to obtain reserved seats—whether for the theatre, symphony, or sports events—by stopping at one of their terminals coast to coast. If you are in the Midwest and plan to attend a theatre performance in New York, you will have a confirmation or refusal in 30 seconds.

GENERATION: Looking to the future through some knowledgeable and imaginative eyes, perhaps we can see, at least dimly, the broad outlines of the world of tomorrow. ■

(House Beautiful will be glad to supply further details on all items mentioned in the column.)

What is the difference between poule, poulet and poularde? Poule is French for the female of the common domestic fo (coq, of course, is cock); poulet is a young chicken (t diminutive of poule); poularde is a fattened chicken—mu like our capon; and poussins (also called petits poulets) are l tle chickens or what we, in this country, call squab chicke which weigh in at about a pound or slightly better. Poulaill French for henhouse, also poulterer, also gallery (theatre) the name of New York's newest restaurant: Le Poulailler, West 67th Street. Roger Fessaguet, one of the partners, a executive chef at La Caravelle, one of New York's few fou star restaurants, is a guarantee of high culinary standards.

When are the different pears in season? The bell-shape Ba letts, yellow or yellow with a red blush, start coming into t market in July and stay with us into November. Excellent eat out of hand, good poached, but they do not bake well. The litt brown, wrenlike Seckel comes along in September through D cember, giving you four good months to cook or pickle it. T winter pears arrive in November and last into May. TEN THOUSAND YESTERDAYS

Let the Irish legend of Waterford come alive in your home.

It was 200 years ago that Waterford first became famous for cut crystal. Each piece was blown, cut and made by hand, with heart.

This cherished heritage glows in the Waterford of today. Each piece is made by hand, with love, as it was two centuries ago.

combination with crystallized ginger over ice cream, or mixed with whipped cream and served over fresh gingerbread, it makes a delicious sauce. Next time you feel a cold coming on, use ginger brandy to make a hot toddy. It is as effective as any pill.

What are pomegranates like and how are they used? They're about the size of a big apple or orange, with a thin, tough rind which should be bright red, with crimson flesh. They have an enormous number of small seeds, each surrounded by a juicy pulp that has a spicy taste. In the Middle East the seeds are sprinkled over salads. If you want to try this, freeze the seeds to preserve them. Pomegranates are closely associated with grenadine, since the syrup was originally made exclusively from this fruit (grenade is the French word for pomegranate, and granada, the Spanish). They can be halved and eaten with a spoon; or the pulp and juice can be made into a syrup, perfumed with rose water, and frozen into a sherbet as is done in the Levant.

In choosing pomegranates, they should feel heavy for their size, have a thin skin, bright and colorful. Available from the end of September to November. If fully ripe, refrigerate and use within two to three days. To make pomegranate juice: Cut in half and squeeze the fruit on a reamer as you would to make orange juice.

What is the best way to make iced coffee? If you like iced coffee with lots of authority, freeze coffee in your ice-cube trays, then pour freshly brewed, but cooled, coffee over the coffee cubes. This is a thrifty way to use up any leftover coffee.

Fuller Explanation From a New Englander

In the April issue of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL we said that Red Flannel Hash called for either ground chuck or corned beef (depending on which authority you happened to be reading) plus cooked beets. Miss Winifred Stewart Tower, "by roots a New Englander," writes from Chicago to say, "Red Flannel Hash is the aftermath or end result of a boiled dinner. Traditionally, the boiled dinner was a Tuesday dish, for that was ironing day, and the huge kettle could simmer thriftily on the back of the stove while the irons occupied the front. Then about Wednesday or Thursday was the time for Red Flannel Hash, from the leftovers. The corned beef would be sliced cold, to go with the hash, not to go in it. The hash would be made of the vegetables and, as you say, beets are what give it the distinctive color; the flavor, though, is what makes it live in your memory. If the corned beef 'gave out,' poached eggs would be served on the hash. It is luscious either way." Miss Tower adds this further bit of information. "There is a definite method of preparing and hashing the vegetables and seasoning them, and it all ends in a plain but delightful meal. Traditional accompaniments are corn muffins, for texture contrast, and a fruity dessert, such as baked apples. And, of course, lots of creamy Boston coffee."

Miss Cecily Brownstone, Food Editor of the Associated Press and an authority on American cookery, bears Miss Tower out. She says, however, that in more recent times, meat was added to the hash, depending on the region. In Mrs. D. A. Lincoln's 1883 Boston Cook Book (she preceded Fannie Farmer at The Boston Cooking School), the recipe for vegetable hash is given as follows: "Equal parts of cabbage, beets, and white turnips, and as much potato as there is of all the other vegetables. Chop all very fine, add a little salt and pepper, put a spoonful of drippings in the pan and when hot, add the hash and cook slowly until warm through." Note, the beets are not cooked with the corned beef, but separately the day before and "pickled" overnight in vinegar. ■

SKYLIT ROCKET IN THE ROCKIES

A conical lodge, deceptively small against the glistening slopes of Colorado, houses five skiing families. During the green-thicketed summer, the lodge is a fishing retreat.

Roof. 30 feet high at its apex, is composed of 22 alternate panels of cedar siding and glass. At the left, a bridge and wood deck lead to the upper level. Tines projecting from chimney flue give it the appearance of an enormous pitchfork.

ART GORE

The lodge is brilliantly skylit in any season by triangular plate-glass windows that run the roof's full length. Here, at the upper level, is the fenced opening of the carpeted spiral staircase. Beyond, the hooded fireplace.

Planeport nudges carport at Sierra Sky Park, Fresno, California.

A PLANE IN EVERY GARAGE

By JOANN ROE

It's not surprising that no one believed four-year-old Grant Story when he first told his nursery-school class that jets landed in his back yard. The funny thing, though, is that he was telling the truth, because his home is only a few hundred feet from the main runway of the Sacramento (California) Airport in an aviation-oriented subdivision called Fullertown.

Designed to meet the unique requirements of flying families, Fullertown is laid out so that three sides of the rectangular development adjoin the airport, and special taxiways along these perimeters permit aircraft owners to bring their planes home. Thus, a resident can park his aircraft in a hangar or planeport at the rear of his home and go out his front door to a normal city street.

One of the most elegant homes at Fullertown was adapted to house people plus aircraft from plans published in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL in June, 1958, as "House of the Year, Mark 58," and looks like two attractive homes connected by a walled garden. Its owner, Evan Edwards, uses his plane to keep track of business interests that range from Canada to Mexico. A broad lawn just beyond dramatic wrought-iron fencing provides a buffer zone to the taxiway for Edwards and his neighbors and doubles as a football field, baseball diamond, and croquet green for the neighborhood children. Surprisingly, the noise level from the airport is low. As another flying resident of Fullertown, Jess Tucker, points out, there is less noise beside the runway than there is at spots farther away but in line with the air traffic pattern.

When one considers that there are almost a hundred thousand private aircraft in the United States (and, according to the Federal Aviation Agency, this figure is expected to double by 1977), it is easy to understand the flyer's desire to keep his airplane "in the back yard," just as boat owners design homes on shore property.

Real-estate developments catering to flyers do have special problems, of course. First, there must be a runway of turf, gravel, or asphalt, at least two to three thousand feet long, that will meet rigid Federal Aviation Agency standards. Then, taxiways to homesites must be provided. One of the most

Why don't you become a professional Interior Decorator?

It's a high-income field where a woman is in her glory. The demand for decorating services is at a peak, and opportunities are unlimited... even if you use only part of your time. You can train at home without interrupting your regular duties.

BY JANICE TRIMBLE

I DON'T THINK there is another profession today that offers more pleasure or greater rewards to a woman than that of interior decorating.

It is the ideal place to put your natural love of beauty to practical use. You can prepare for one of the many attractive positions available or decide to go into business for yourself.

Do you enjoy doing your own decorating? Have you ever helped a friend solve a decorating problem? Then you have the makings for success as a professional decorator.

Even if you've done no decorating, you may be one of many women with unsuspected talent in this direction—talent just waiting to be discovered.

You can now train for this work at home, in your spare time. No previous skills or experience are required for this training. Why not look into the many opportunities that interior decorating offers you?

A tremendously expanded field

It used to be that only wealthy people employed professional decorators. That's no longer true. Increasingly large numbers of homemakers now rely on the services of decorators. They know that a decorator can provide beauty and individuality—and can often save them money, too.

Your work as a decorator is varied and interesting. It frequently takes you and your clients into plush showrooms and exclusive shops filled with treasures. You move in a world of fashion, creativity and ever-new challenge.

Designing and furnishing even a single room can earn you hundreds of dollars; larger assignments can earn you much more. Many women do extremely well in just part-time work; their own homes often serve as showcases for prospective clients.

But decorators are busy in many areas besides homes. Their talents are employed in decorating hotel rooms, business offices, building lobbies, clubs and institutions. That's why the profession has grown so enormously.

What the LaSalle Course teaches you

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating has been prepared by experts to give you complete and up-to-date preparation for this most exciting of modern careers. Lessons come to you by mail; they are as fascinating as the professional work itself. Much of the study material included is absolutely unique in a course of this kind. For instance, you get an attractive, simple-to-operate slide projector with color slides that show interiors as big as life on your wall. You also get professional sketching equipment, coloring materials, stencils that make it easy for you to draw room plans and furniture arrangements, and much more.

Step by step, you are shown how to develop your creative ability. You are taught the principles of color and design and the historic background of today's decoration. You are trained in the selection and use of furniture, fabrics, accessories, lighting. You learn how to achieve beautiful settings that will delight your clients and build your reputation. Even before you have finished the course, you will be able to apply your new knowledge to glorifying your own home.

At each step, you are given practical assignments which are then carefully reviewed by your instructors and returned to you. You are coached with thoroughness for your work as a professional decorator.

The LaSalle Course in Interior Decorating is backed by more than half a century of leadership in the field of adult education. More than 1,000,000 people have trained for success through home study with LaSalle.

comprehensive plans for aviation homes is being implemented at Sierra Sky Park, Fresno, California, where Bill Smilie has constructed an approved airstrip, provided broad taxiways that double as streets, platted the homesites, provided a neat transient hangar and maintenance facilities for aircraft, and reserved sites for a luxurious Air-O-Tel with swimming pool, gourmet restaurant, and shopping center. In the not too distant future, airborne shoppers will be able to fly in, taxi to a parking space in front of the shopping center (with parking meters, do you suppose?), and walk across the street to shop.

by flying business and professional men, some of whom use their planes in their daily lives—like the farm-equipment dealer who visits outlying ranchers by air, landing on their ranch airstrips. Naturally, everyone uses his flying carpet on holidays and weekends to get quickly to Lake Tahoe, Las Vegas, the beaches, etc. Several innovations cater to the plane-minded community. The taxiway streets, for instance, are at least 80 feet wide, the width of a four-lane highway, so that two airplanes can pass without interference. It took special legislation in California, the first of its kind in the nation, to permit planes and autos to share the Sierra Sky Park streets.

To avoid mishaps, planes must restrict their taxiing speed to ten miles an hour. "The only trouble we've had so far," says Smilie, "is that the broad streets are almost irresistible to teen-age drag racers." Houses are designed with separate wings for carport and planeport; some incorporate the overhanging structure of multilevel architecture to provide hangar space. As planeport and carport, one futuristic home has twin free-form arches on the lower level of a multilevel home that soar out from a center section like raised eyebrows.

All street signs are under 30 inches high to allow wing clearance, and mailmen operate in a Buck Rogers world. In front of one house the mailman must drive over a triggering device that causes the mailbox to pop up from 30 inches to car-door level; at another the mailbox is counterbalanced, so that if an airplane wing inadvertently touches it, the box meekly folds down but pops up again after the plane has passed.

In a brand-new aviation development called Shady Acres, just south of Tacoma, Washington, homeowners automatically own a share of stock in Shady Acres Corporation when they buy lots adjacent to the airport. The Corporation then assesses its members for the cost of maintaining the airstrip and taxiways. Here the trend is toward separate hangars, much like the old-fashioned family garage.

As freeways become more and more choked with traffic, it seems inevitable that more and more weary commuters will explore the advantages of air travel and of aviation communities. ■

Introducing Mohawk's House 'n Garden. The indoor-outdoor carpet that's really carpet.

You probably think you've seen indoor-outdoor carpet before. But never like House 'n Garden. It's the first indoor-outdoor carpet to have the luxury of a pile like any living room carpet. Which means that for the first time, the same carpet that decorates your patio can run right into your living room or den. Without being a compromise in luxury.

A few facts about House 'n Garden will tell you why it's in a class by itself.

Like a 100% solution-dyed Acrilan® acrylic pile.

The sun can't fade it.

Stains can't stain it.

The materials used in Mohawk's House 'n Garden are the most impervious to outdoor elements or indoor hazards that a carpet can have.

And water can't be absorbed by it.

And yet there's no limit to where you can use this carpet. It was engineered and constructed for durability, but not at the cost of luxury. So it would be as much at home in the playroom, or wherever people live, as it is at your poolside.

So now you can forget what indoor-outdoor carpet used to be.

And see your Mohawk dealer for the only one that deserves to be called carpet.

Jamestown Festival Park: Serene against swirling mists on the James River are full-sized replicas of the ships that brought the first colonists to Jamestown in 1607. Stride their oaken decks—then go ashore to explore the reconstructed log fort and quaint thatch-roofed village. For miles around, too, the faces of Virginia are seamed with history. Colonial Williamsburg, the town that time forgot but you never will. Yorktown, where Revolutionary cannonballs are still imbedded in the walls of homes. Magnificent James River plantations, their 200-year-old bricks offset by the gallant green of boxwood. History lives—in Virginia!

TRAYS CAN SIMPLIFY YOUR LIFE

By BARBARA BANKS

All right. So you don't have a maid, cook, or housekeeper. Or even if you're one of the lucky few, you still find plenty to do around the house.

Don't despair. You have other assets. Assets that are neither vocal, nor transient, nor requiring salaries and social security payments. These assets are your imagination and ingenuity. And trays.

Combining these, you can save yourself all kinds of time and trouble. And endless steps.

Kitchen trays: Imagine yourself early this morning, just before breakfast. You're trying to get the family off to school and work. Bleary-eyed, you stagger back and forth from refrigerator to food preparation area.

Stop and think. Is this trip necessary? Not if you used a tray. Quick, find one. Approach the "reefer" firmly, tray in hand or balanced on your hip, and systematically put on it all the items you will need: milk, orange juice, eggs, butter, etc. If preparing school lunches is on your agenda, get out sandwich-makings at the same time. Take it all to the preparation area, and you've made only one kitchen crossing. At dinner time, too, a tray can save you many steps. Why not put all the spices or ingredients you need on a tray so they are all together before you begin.

ROUND THE WORLD BASKET AND GIFT SHOP N.Y.C.

Table-setting trays: While you're preparing breakfast, you can get out a table-setting tray. Between flips of the flapjacks, you can toss upon your tray all the necessities for your breakfast table: forks and spoons, napkins and coffee cups, glasses and plates. Be a bit sneaky. Leave it where the first family member who appears, eager for action, may see it. Then he will have something constructive to do with his restless little hands. Presto. Your table will be all set. So easy for him, with everything assembled. And pleasant for you. Remember to leave the tray near the table for transporting dishes back to the sink after the meal is over.

ROUND THE WORLD BASKET AND GIFT SHOP N.Y.C.

Repeat this process again at the dinner hour. A few happy appreciative sounds from you will help establish the routine. Table setter will be glad to earn extra Brownie points. And you'll be pleased and amazed at all the time and energy this simple procedure can save.

Hobby trays: Trays are a practical means of gathering together hobby materials before you get involved in a flurry of activity and don't want to tear yourself away to find additional items. If you enjoy arranging flowers, for example, assemble vases, shears, wire, putty, and drop cloth on a tray so that you can create on-the-spot arrangements. Or if you're a philatelist, you will want to assemble stamps, tweezers, magnifying glass, hinges, and album.

Shelf trays: Here's another way to save yourself table-setting steps. Keep some small inexpensive trays, like the bright-colored lacquered ones you can buy at Oriental shops, on your stemware shelves to hold your best goblets. Then when you're setting your table for a party, you can take the whole tray off the shelf and into the dining room, with six or eight glasses, instead of having to take them down laboriously one by one. Leave the trays by the sink for replacement on the shelf after the goblets have been washed. You can do the same with a tea set, or with items needed for a dinner party like your crystal ashtrays, bobêche, fancy salt and peppers, or any group of items you store on a shelf to use together.

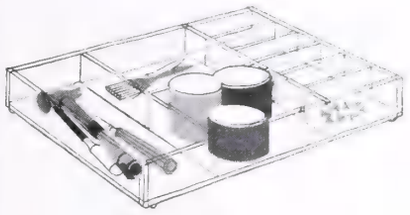
DRAWINGS BY ALICE ICHIYAMA

Condiment trays: Another shelf-tray idea is the condiment tray. A small round one with a handle in the middle is practical. On it go all the hamburger and hot-dog fixings: pickle relish, mustard, small jar of mayonnaise, catsup. Then when the weiners are hot off the barbecue, their seasonings will be ready.

The same idea applies as well to a tray for salad-dressing ingredients. It will make salad mixing a breeze.

SOURCE: N. GIFT AND FOOD SHOP, N.Y.C.

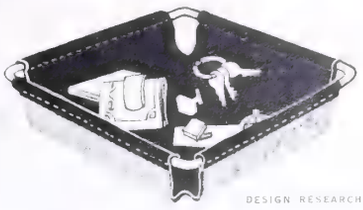
Family-meal trays: Likely as not, you've already used individual meal trays for weekend or supper guests. But have you thought of the fun of using meal trays for your own family? On days when you feel impulsive, restless, lazy, or struck by spring fever, you can get out meal trays for each member of the family. Adorn them with gay colored paper place mats and napkins, perhaps a posy. Everyone can help himself, take his tray wherever he pleases. Maybe on the patio, or before a blazing fire when it rains, on the lawn in summer, in front of the TV football game in fall, or collapsed happily in bed on a lazy Saturday. Your family will love the spontaneity of it all, and life will be be much simpler for you.



VINCENT [illegible] N.Y.C.

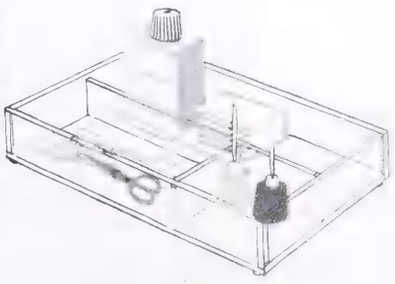
Laundry trays: No doubt you'll think of many other ways to save steps with trays in the kitchen area. What about tray ways to save yourself on washday? Again put out a tray for each family member. As you fold clothes from the ironing board, place each person's clean laundry on a tray. Then your daughter or son can pick up and put away his own clothes. On cleaning day, too, a tray is handy for carrying soaps, rags, etc. from room to room.

BONNIERS N.Y.C.



Fix-it trays: A divided tray, the kind you can pick up at the dime store, can stay in a drawer to keep assembled all your implements for picture-hanging and small repair jobs: hammer, pliers, nails, picture hooks, screw driver, measuring tape. When you want to hang a picture, put up a certain rod, or fix something, everything will be handy.

HAMMACHER SCHLEMMER N.Y.C.



Or use a divided tray for gift and package wrapping materials: string and ribbons, scissors and Scotch tape, labels, and stamps. Do the same with sewing necessities, and take the tray to the TV set while you're mending. Birthday party decorations such as crepe paper, balloons, and wrapping materials can also be kept neat and handy in a tray.

Bureau trays: On top of a dresser bureau, a small tray keeps such items as keys, money, cuff links, and watch from being misplaced or from falling behind the dresser. This tray is leather, a handsome accessory as well as an efficient one.

DESIGN RESEARCH

Manicure trays: Here, too, trays can save time. This idea will appeal to the working wife and mother, to whom small segments of time are particularly important. Keep a small tray handy on your dressing table or in the drawer for manicure and grooming items such as nail file, scissors, nail polish, cotton, tweezers.

HAMMACHER SCHLEMMER N.Y.C.

Then when the phone rings and a friend's voice says "Do you have a moment to chat?," you can say "Just a minute," grab your manicure tray, and be all set. Phone cradled on shoulder, you can finish a whole manicure in the course of one conversation. ■

You can tell a lot about furniture quality by simply opening the top drawer. If you see the manufacturer's name there—a name you recognize—you can be sure of all this:

That the furniture is built to last. So you're not just making a buy for today, but a sound investment for the future. You can be sure the style and design are authentic, too. And you'll know you're getting good, honest value for your money.

A brand name means quality and integrity. It's the manufacturer's way of telling you that he stands behind his product 100%. With furniture though, you have to snoop to find the brand name. It may be tucked inside a drawer. Or on the underside of a table. Or hidden beneath the cushions of a sofa. Or on the end of a mattress.

That way, the brand name never detracts from the furniture's appearance. But it does add greatly to your confidence and satisfaction.

GROWING UP IN A GARDEN

By LÉONIE BELL

"To live in the garden had been our dream. The love it held grew with the years, the children, and with each season, a new bloom." A mother tells the story of her seven children and their many "gardens."

Some of us grow up in houses or apartments, some in the street, some on farms. A fortunate few grow up in gardens. Very special gardens, these, not the quarter-acre plots of the suburbs covered with expensively kept lawn, and "landscaping" with perhaps a few Red Emperor tulips and annuals, but something more.

They must have age — trees old enough for another generation to have climbed, shrubs grown to thickets, a certain wildness blended with design and cultivation—if children are to feel at home in them. They should have size, though nothing excessive. On a half acre, if the house is close to one boundary, there are vast possibilities for feeling far from home, essential to children. And the planting of long ago must have been done with thought, to provide shade, bloom, fruit, and privacy for so long.

We have such a garden. It is a right triangle of exactly one acre; the hypotenuse is road frontage, the sharpest angle is almost filled by the house. The half-acre beyond the house is what is usually meant by "garden"—borders, lawn, small areas highly planned—but the broad second half, our back field, is orchard and rough grass, with a verge of walnut, mulberry, and cherry, at the far boundary.

New to us years ago, it was already crowded with fruit trees, climbing roses gone wild, hundreds of "pineys" and phlox (P. paniculata), many of which had to be removed. Yet the division between cultivated and wild was apparent then, and we found it a good proportion to keep, for while flower borders alone might please little girls, they would have said silently "Keep out!" to boys. And boys we did have — three, after four girls.

As we slowly imposed some order on the garden, there developed spots that held special appeal for each child. I cannot say that each has taken to gardening, however. Regina, 18, has proved impervious to the good earth, except for the crop of mammoth sunflowers she once grew and still boasts about. Yet she spends many hours outside reading and sunbathing, and long ago made lovely sand cakes and pies.

Our oldest, Miriam, is just the opposite, a born gardener. Her weakness has been to find some small, unloved spot for her summer project. One year she settled on a dry wall that was indeed neglected. Later I discovered growing on it pilfered baby plants from the border, new patches of sedum and sempervivum, rescued clippings stuck hopefully deep to root. She is my star flower arranger—the smaller the flowers, the better, like this one in June: chartreuse stars of alchemilla (A. mollis), gray filigreed tips of artemisia (A. pontica), apricot viola (V. cornuta), a few Boston Yellow daisies, and two or three blooms of that delightful rose, Little Darling, in a small, lustrous copper pitcher.

Every family of girls has one who loves horses, birds, and all wild things. Lauren is ours. I don't believe she has ever made an "arrangement" in her life, yet she brings back tree flowers or pads of moss or attractive seed pods from every walk. Her own garden lies beneath a ground-sweeping crab-apple tree. She has made a sunken path, lined and paved with stones, from one opening in the branches to another. Flat stones lying near it mark the graves of many small creatures, ducklings, downed robins, and most beloved, two white King pigeons and a homing pigeon. Ferns grow here, pale blue violets, lilies-of-the-valley, early bulbs. It is Lauren's retreat.

The child with the best ear and memory for botanical names is our youngest girl, Elaine. Once during a prolonged convalescence of mine, when, in spite of everything, the bloom chart had to be kept up with, I recall writing in the April sun while this chubby blond three-year-old ran back and forth, reporting everything she found opening. "Don't forget the biburnum!" she cautioned, meaning viburnum (V. carlesi). Ten years later she is so observant that we have a strong rapport over the plants here, their locations and behavior, and combinations to try.

Often girls are not alone in their preference for flowers and arranging. David, seven, has a keen eye for form and color, and enthusiastically fills containers until their shelf threatens to tip. He chooses from a large collection of small pitchers, jiggers, flasks, cigarette cups, cheese pots, and revels in deciding which is exactly right. I have had to give him three rose bushes to keep him in supply—and away from rare things. His sand cakes are masterpieces of decoration, ringed with beads of grape-hyacinths, petals of the Harison's Yellow rose that turn the ground to gold, turquoise and violet berries of ampelopsis (A. brevipedunculata), little apricot crab apples. Yet for all his dexterity, he can shinny up the tree rope faster than anyone, digs unbelievable holes, and causes the most mischief.

Because David's birthday comes in April, his presents include the annual supply of sandbox equipment. We avoid flimsy, painte sand toys and buy instead inexpensive kitchen implements the five-and-ten. Porcelainwa and aluminum pots, colande muffin pans, ring molds, siev and pancake turner just abou last the summer. Our sandbox actually the old foundation of small, long-gone garage. We fi it with cubic yards of coars builders' sand, for my husban and I dip in for our own uses The girls once played there a contentedly as do the younge boys and their friends now.

Another shared activity is pick ing. Children have an absolut compulsion to pick, and one o the charms of a proper old gar den is the multitude of flower there for the taking. During ou first spring here the girls wer ecstatic when they discovere countless blue spires of grape hyacinths (Muscari botryoides) back among the raspberries Soon I had glasses of them every where and even found forlor bunches forgotten on the lawn or stripped of their puffed sleeve florets. So began a long succes sion of bouquets. The boys d the same thing now, and it wil be a sad spring when I do no get those first handfuls of blue

We wondered what the brigh green "grass" was in the dra March lawn, only to discover, o May Day, constellations of stars of-Bethlehem. Though they clos at sundown outside, we found they remain open indoors in arti ficial light. Next, violets of every shade of purple and blue, al Viola papilionacea to be sure bu no less treasured because plenti ful. Its bicolor form, Confederat Violet, was here, too, broad and beautiful, earliest to open. Want ing to deflect attention from my growing collection of one-of-a kinds, I began patches of other colors of papilionacea—magenta rosy-eyed white, marbled blue— until we now have seven distinct kinds of Dooryard Violet alone.

Apple blossoms, forms of Nar cissus (N. odorus), including one known in the South as "Gold Dollars," self - sowing Johnny jump-ups, milky violet phlox (P. divaricata) — once established, these cannot be picked to de pletion. By June the picking pas sion abates, for when cherries and strawberries ripen, flowers lose their attraction.

Two-year-olds must be shown how to pinch or pull a stem near its base, not to tug at the neck. Dandelions are ideal for practice. The spring Nicholas discovered how to get long stems, he picked for two hours, often out of sight in the unmown grass.

A very special picking occurs in June, when we harvest the old roses for potpourri and syrup. Each morning the oldest preschooler and I go out, he with a shopping bag into which go the freshly opened flowers. We return with pecks of them to dump on a tray for depetaling. What a sight, that mound of rose-red and every shade of pink. Any child can hold a stubby stem (sticky with glands that add a second, piney odor to the marvelous fragrance of attar) and pull the petals off. It is fast, delightful work. Those in school envy us, but they all sample the results.

Still other pickings happen. Though we have no formal herb garden, herbs can be found everywhere here. Each boy knows where the best mints grow, to nibble, or to rub on arms and neck to frustrate mosquitoes. The yellow and red spring tips of creeping lemon thyme taste very good; so does the lush green of angelica. If I need chives or cooking thyme or lovage when cooking, I send one of the boys for it. But their favorite "green" takes some looking: the young, glistening bronze of copper fennel's thready foliage is almost invisible—a necessary protection, for they find its licorice flavor irresistible and eat the plant to death. Tarragon shares this to some extent, but its location is my secret. The children are never tempted to sample leaves or berries indiscriminately.

Boys love anything edible. George had only learned to walk when he discovered tomatoes and lay in the shade to consume them. Now he grows his own in the vegetable patch. Each spring sees a frenzy of seed sowing. He has been through peanuts, watermelons, popcorn, pumpkins and string beans, but his year-after-year favorites are sweet corn and cantaloupe. We enjoy three or four meals each summer of his Golden Cross Bantam, and by late August, dozens of that prolific melon, Rock O' Honey. I have showed him how to raise each on a pillow of straw, and to sniff for ripeness. The first to mature must be cut into eight or nine pieces! It is amazing how much heavy work a ten-year-old will do for food.

Many good things to eat grow here with little attention. Earliest is rhubarb, of which we have huge clumps. It has petioles thick as a child's wrist, not bright red but superbly succulent. The boys help their father, whose jealously-guarded patch it is, to collect, trim, and cook it, an annual all-male affair.

Next come sour cherries, weighting branches halfway to the ground. Even with friends to help, we have never yet harvested them all. By July, in the alternate years it blooms, the Yellow Transparent ripens the best apples for sauce that ever were, and the easiest to prepare. Boys come to blows over who mashes these through the food mill. Later there are plenty of others—fragrant brown Grimes Golden, the hard-fleshed Winesap, rose-streaked Smokehouse. Last are grapes that mature just as school begins. Old Concord perfumes the air increasingly through October, as characteristic of fall as burning leaves.

Most of our fruit is in that remote half-acre which has become a haven for boys. There, apple trees with cascading branches, caves of green coolness, hide excavations and "traps for Heffalumps." One supports a treehouse ever in the process of improvement. Another shields from view the "fort" of older boys, made of odds and ends but with a solid roof and real door—off-bounds to seven-year-olds.

Fifteen years ago my husband and I fell in love with this garden. We bought it for ourselves, not particularly for the children, most of whom had yet to come. We would continue to enjoy working in it even if none of them caught our enthusiasm. But sharing it with them, helping them find satisfaction in hard work, watching their divergent interests emerge, has made it far more enjoyable for us. Unconsciously they have absorbed impressions of odor, texture, and color that should make them highly sensate adults. We expect their children will find it quite as good for growing up. ■

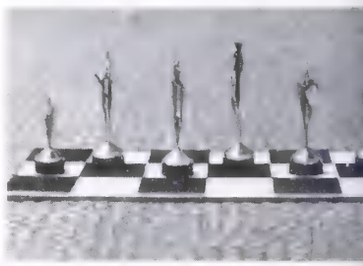
TOMORROW'S DESIGNERS



By EPSIE KINARD

Talent explosions, set off by student-design competitions, give us happy glimpses into what the future holds for the home. Ablaze with fresh, vigorous ideas, designs bring new blood to old skills performed with needle, shuttle, bobbin, and the silversmith's chisel and hammer. As 1967 prize winners below show, designs point to a trend to create the beauty that comes from the perfect expression of a function, whether it's a sterling teapot with a removable pipkin handle or a silver chess set sculptured in miniature to make less clutter on a table.

In a move to discover and foster talent, industry sponsors many competitions that design schools offer. When a student's design is accepted for manufacture, he rightly feels that a flight-platform is the superprize won.

Opposite is a partial list, completed as we go to press, of 1967-1968 competitions for students of design and architecture.

A sterling-silver chess set, made in miniature by Gus Ivory, Drake University winner—to rival jewelry, to make game easier to play, to take up less table space.

Bold geometrics of canvas-stitchery design for chair, pillow, rug won Jean Prokos, Art Institute of Chicago, award from Needlework and Textile Guild.

Sparse, functional design for gold-lined sterling teapot won Richard Johnston, Cranbrook Academy of Art, Sterling Silversmiths Guild of America prize.

KitchenAid introduces the Super Disposer.

It's made by the same people who make KitchenAid dishwashers.

It does everything a fine disposer should do. For example, it pulverizes steak bones and chicken bones. Even grinds stringy things like corn husks. Extra-thick insulation makes it quiet.

If it jams, it eliminates the jam automatically.

And in every way, it's built to last. Stainless steel grind wheel. Automatic reversing doubles the life of the cutting edges. Special heat-fused epoxy and Teflon*-coated components are super-resistant to wear and corrosion.

Like to find out more? See your KitchenAid dishwasher dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages. Or write.

with BENJAMIN FLAYDERMAN

Is it genuine? Is it worth the price? Should I scrape it down and refinish it? These are three typical symptoms of Antique Buyer's Doubt. There is a cure. Look at the piece from the dealer's matter-of-fact point of view and leave emotion out of it. Attitude is important. So is knowledge. Despite the vast libraries of books containing all the information needed to be a real antiques expert, you can easily learn certain secrets of the trade, secrets that will enable you to judge antiques as a dealer does.

These so-called secrets are really a set of basic principles. For the sake of conciseness, I will deal with furniture, perhaps the commonest and most expensive type of antiques, but the same lessons apply in great part to antiques of other materials.

A dealer judges an antique on four basic points: originality, pedigree, patina, and quality.

1. Originality means that the piece is genuine from top to bottom, inside and out. The finish or decoration should be well preserved. None of the ornaments should have been replaced. Any refinishing, replacement, or restoration immediately alerts the dealer to other things that may be "wrong."

One of the worst forms of desecration of antiques is the total refinishing many Americans indulge in. It destroys value. Most finishes in poor condition can be improved by hand-rubbing with oil and other methods. Conversely, refinishing is a convenient method of hiding extensive repairs and replacements. It is often preferable to buy a piece "in the rough" and restore it yourself than to buy at a high price a piece that hides a multitude of sins under its gleaming new varnish.

2. Pedigree includes many things. For example, the original 200-year-old bill of sale; the original cabinetmaker's label; a letter from the last owner confirming that the piece was in the family for a hundred years or more; a copy of an auction catalog illustrating and/or authenticating the history of the piece. Don't expect a full pedigree with every piece, but many expensive pieces do have pedigrees. The interesting tale your dealer spins about the origin or historical association of this or that piece is part of the pedigree. If the story is true and adds cost to the piece, you will want to have the pedigree in writing.

Museums and certain dealers who also act as appraisers help establish pedigrees of able pieces. One sure metho to deal only with reputable ers. If you are planning subs tial investments in antique would be wise to have one or dealers you trust negotiate the "big" pieces. They will glad to buy for you on a com sion or other equitable basis.

3. Patina is particularly portant. People can age wel badly; so too with antiques. antique that comes through ravages of time with that cer beautiful luster only the y can impart is said to have a patina. In fact, many an anti becomes more beautiful with This is not only the deeper and mellowing of the finished faces. The patina will suffuse entire piece. It will exist in unfinished and inside parts well as the highly finished terior parts.

Some people say that only expert can tell true patina. so. It will take you a little t to develop your eye. To has the learning process, here some imple exercises. Visit seums with exhibits of the thi you want to collect. Then stores with similar reproducti

Philip Flayderman's family has been in the antique business for three generations. In 1930 and 1931 the Philip Flayderman and Benjamin Flayderman Collections were sold at auction; the price-annotated catalogs of those auctions are still being used as references by dealers.

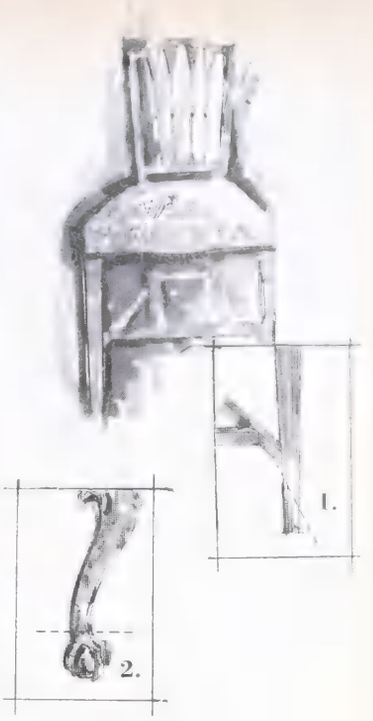
And inside, the heart of it all — Holland Maid Innersprings with their 4 Vital Values. Available at moderate prices in regular, Queen, and King size sets, of course.

r, if you are lucky to find one, n antique dealer who also has line of reproductions. The signs f gentle wear and true patina hat bespeak the genuine antique annot be missed once you start ooking for them.

In museums, of course, you will ot be allowed to look undereath and inside the furniture. With moderation, you can do this n stores. At home and at the omes of fellow collectors, you an open, turn over, tip back urniture to your heart's content. Remember: Never judge a piece n its exterior alone. The patina f the unfinished inside parts is ust as important, if not more imortant. If there has been tampering, it will usually show up most learly on the unfinished parts. Once you spot the fresh marks of aw or sandpaper, or the glistenng of a new machine-made nail, ou will be on the trail of restoations that would cost you money ad you not spotted them. One elpful tool for this work is a imple flashlight. The dark interiors of furniture shops and ome dealers' shops make the lashlight an aid that will save you time and expense.

4. Quality involves such distinctions as rarity vs. common types: a plain country piece made with common woods such as pine or maple vs. sophisticated city pieces made of rare or more expensive woods; fine examples of a period vs. odd pieces that unsuccessfully combine several styles.

You will not become an expert in styles overnight, but there is a lot you can learn, and rather quickly. The museums are one of the best starting points. Their collections usually include only the best examples of all periods. Few dealers can boast comparable assortments. However, the city dealer will have many pieces that are only a degree or two below museum quality. And the country dealer is likely to deal principally in country styles of local origin. A visit to all three sources, therefore, will give you a good review of the range of styles and qualities. Constant observation and some homework in the reference books and guides will fill in the gaps.



Actual cases

You find a piece of furniture you want to buy. What do you do? What do you look for?

Examine the piece in good light, preferably daylight. Take a good long look from three to six feet away. First impressions are most important. You should judge the piece for style, proportion, color, patina. If the piece still interests you, then go on to the inspection of the fine points at close range. Here are the kinds of things to look for:

Chairs. To check upholstered chairs, make sure to look at the inner frame. It may be totally replaced, or, worse still, completely worm-eaten. There is also the possibility that the chair was originally high-backed but was cut down to conform to modern taste. If there is a bottom dust cover, ask to have it removed. If the owner objects, your only choice is to buy blind or pass up the piece.

On many chairs, especially those made before the Victorian period, it is common to find the legs cut down, replaced, or otherwise tampered with. The most frequent cause is wear and tear. On the other hand, short legs may be found restored to their original height. Figure 1 shows a typical oblique splice used in restoring a straight leg. Figure 2 shows a horizontal splice that may be used for ball-foot legs. The variations are infinite. Check sofas and couches for similar problems.

On Windsor-type and other carved or wood-back chairs, the most delicate parts are the splats, dowels, carving, etc. All these should be examined most carefully. Replacement parts give themselves away either in patina or in proportions that don't match.

This book says that

t she should not reach middle age till she is seventy. And that she l not lose her ability to attract men until she is well past ninety— E WILL ONLY BECOME AWARE OF THESE FOUR GREAT NATURAL CES OF PROLONGED YOUTH, COMPLETELY OVERLOOKED BY OF AMERICAN WOMEN!

xample:

hese Simple Postures The Key To Victory Over Time Itself?

. ingenious way to re-arrange the way you r face and neck, for ■ few incredibly- minutes every day, that virtually melts ars from the appearance of the skin of tire upper body. (You'll learn why this osture works such breath-taking wonders aragraphs below.)

new way to breathe—that purifies your of the internal poisons that keep you con- half-ill today, and that eat away your ke acid.

new way to achieve truly deep sleep— harges your body like a battery every nd keeps accumulated exhaustion from you old.

d perhaps most important, and most . of all, ■ new way to fight the never- g forces of gravity that cause the muscles face and body to sag deeper and deeper y.

posture alone—this simple, 4,000-year-old "Effortless Exercise" that actually reverses the effect of gravity on your body, and causes it to firm up your muscles instead of collapse them —can give you a slimmer, younger body overnight, and for the next fifty years to come. You'll understand why when you read the paragraphs below.)

Welcome To A Whole New World Of Physical Magnetism, Youthfulness, And Incredible New Feminine Appeal!

These, then, are the startling, almost-unbelievable promises this book makes to you. But you must realize that to gain these benefits, you must first discard every idea about your body that you have been taught since you were ■ child—and be prepared to look at "age" and "youth" and "health" and "beauty" through entirely new eyes.

In essence, what you are going to learn, in your very first reading of this fascinating book, is this:

Over 4,000 years ago, in the Far East, some of the wisest men and women who ever lived discovered that "old age" was nothing more than ■ disease—actually just another ill of the body, to be fought as any other ill.

To do this—to fight this "ageing-disease"—they developed a series of age-delaying techniques called Yoga.

Yoga means Youth. Yoga techniques bring back youth, and prolong youth.

You can see living proof of these facts every day in India, China and Tibet. There Yoga believers have used these techniques to live to fantastic ages (close to 100 years), and still retain virtually the appearance of young women.

These women have achieved "Super-Femininity." At the ages of 60 and 70 and 80, they have more physical magnetism—are far more attractive to men—than the hordes of "half-feminine" women who may be 50 or 60 years younger.

Once again, this book gives you the techniques these women use—but now adapted and simplified for Western women, with all the religion and philosophy that were evolved along with them stripped away.

And now ready to go to work for you—overnight—to take each part of your body in turn, and repair the tragic damage done to it by strain and time.

Like this—

The First Step: To Give Your Face Back Its Youthful Bloom.

This book says that there is ■ very simple reason why the skin of your face and neck becomes thin, drawn, pale and wrinkled after thirty:

Because once you reach that critical age, your heart can no longer automatically pump enough nourishing blood uphill to your face, to keep it as smooth and plump and young as it was when you were a teen-ager.

It's exactly as if you stopped feeding water to a potted plant—and then watched the leaves of that plant crinkle up and begin to die.

No beauty parlor on earth—no face cream no matter how expensive—can ever correct this lack of internal nourishment. But Yoga can. It does ■ in a few exhilarating minutes every day—by showing you an ingenious way to re-arrange the way you hold your face and neck, that automatically causes your body to pour nourishing blood into every fiber of your face.

This simple posture is so easy to accomplish that, for the first few days, you may not be able to believe that it can really be doing you that much good. But then—when you wake up one morning and find your husband studying your face in silent admiration—you will realize the incredible potency of this "youth-restoring technique" practiced by two hundred generations of Eastern women.

And it's just the beginning . . .

How To Sit Your Way To A Beautiful Body

Now you begin the re-education of every contour-shaping muscle in your body—and the elimination of the ugly and deadly fat that has plagued you for years—but this time without such extreme measures as crash diets, sweat boxes, back-breaking calisthenics, or pills or other artificial devices of any kind.

In essence, what you are going to do with this book is learn a series of "Effortless Exercises" (many of which take less than a single minute each). These, again, are simple postures and rhythmic gestures that re-charge your energy bank every morning rather than exhaust it . . . and that beautify the feminine contours of your body, without creating a single bulging muscle (as Western exercises do) to make you look like ■ man.

One of these postures, for example, (done simply by sitting in ■ special way on the floor) firms your legs, calves, inner thighs—all in the same moment.

Another lifts and preserves the bust. Another flattens the stomach and slims the hips. Still another prevents flabby arms.

And (in our opinion, the most important) still another takes the "old-age stiffness and perpetual ache" out of your spine, and gives you the cat-like grace and freedom to enjoy the life of a young girl.

And—at exactly the same time—

Vital Health Centers Of Your Body That Have Slept For Years —Are Now Gently Massaged Into Blazing New Vitality . . .

Now these "Effortless Exercises" begin to work their magic—for probably the first time in your entire life—on the internal glands and organs that either keep you young 'til ninety (if you keep them healthy and strong) or (if you allow them to wither up from disuse) turn you into an old woman at thirty.

For example:

Here is an incredibly gentle posture that virtually doubles the amount of circulation that reaches the vital nerve centers in the back of your head and neck—and thus puts you to sleep faster and deeper than you have known in years. (You'll be amazed at the energy with which you bounce out of bed the next morning.)

Here is ■ one-minute technique that turns ordinary air into the most potent revitalizer in the world. (Try it for exactly 60 seconds when you're exhausted from housework; see how ■ enables you to out-dance your teen-age daughter till dawn.)

Here's how to flush internal poisons right out of your body. Clear your complexion. Purify your blood. Get overnight relief from those vague aches and pains that drain youth like ■ dripping faucet.

Here is a special posture for the woman who is beginning to lose her animal attractiveness. Whose husband is losing interest in her. And who wants him to gasp in delight just ■ few short nights from the time she first opens this book.

Read It From Cover To Cover Entirely At Our Risk.

One final word of warning: If you expect a huge, weighty, philosophical tome here, you are completely mistaken. This book has been carefully cut down to the bare practical essentials. There is not a word in it that does not give you a physical benefit immediately. Therefore, even in the special deluxe version we send you, it is only 128 pages. You can finish it in ■ single weekend. The new youth and beauty and physical attractiveness it gives you will last a lifetime.

The complete cost of this book is only $5.98. It is a book for women who mean business about restoring and preserving the most priceless possession they will ever have—their youth. If you mean business, why not send in the No-Risk Coupon today.

THERE ARE 70 COATS OF ARMS LISTED HERE...

THERE ARE OVER 500,000 MORE COATS OF ARMS IN THE ARCHIVES OF SANSON INSTITUTE

READ HOW THE SANSON INSTITUTE HAS PRESERVED THE RECORDS FROM OVER 20 EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

In 1860, Mr. William Hubert Seddon of Sheffield, England began a library of coats f arms. This collection of books, written in the mediaeval language of the "Heralds", as brought to the United States and from this collection the archives of the Sanson nstitute of Heraldry in Boston was begun. Representatives of the Sanson Institute re constantly searching for still older sources and additional reference volumes in rder to revive interest in the art of heraldry and its meanings. A trip to Holland, a hance find in Brittany, a visit to a small village library in southern Italy . . . all have ontributed to the compilation of what is recognized as one of the most complete leraldic libraries in existence. The Sanson Institute research staff has been trained to ranslate carefully and correctly the mediaeval heraldic language and to interpret uthentically the meanings and descriptions of these Coats of Arms. Modern techno- ogical advances were called upon to execute the monumental task of attaining the ability to research, draw, and catalogue over 500,000 names and Coats of Arms, as well as their interpretations and reference sources. Many of our reference books are centuries old (some dating back as far as the 1600's). The Sanson Institute, through its knowledge of heraldic practices can determine by accepted formulae a coat of arms applicable to a surname exactly the same as yours or an older form of that surname from which your present name may have emerged. Utilizing their highly skilled and specialized personnel to give meaning to the knowledge which has come down from the Middle Ages, the Sanson Institute can now offer you a most decorative and colorful coat of arms which was earlier granted to a distinguished person whose surname was the same as, or an earlier form of, your family name . . . a replica of an antique that will be a welcome addition and conversation piece in every home.

COAT OF ARMS SEARCH

You receive a photostatic copy with the coat of arms individually hand coloured. Upon receipt of your order, the combined efforts of nine trained persons at the Institute are put to work. Our research staff, expert in translating the mediaeval languages of foreign references, check the name for its original root spelling, possible mutations, and then record the arms in proper heraldic terms. After our research is completed, expert artists, trained colourists and professional craftsmen take their turn in preparing especially for you a replica of a badge of merit bearing the name such as yours. SERVICE FEE IS $5.00 ($2.00 of this fee may be applied toward the purchase of any item containing the same coat of arms).

NOW YOU CAN START TO

SHED POUND AFTER POUND QUICKLY AND EASILY

—THROUGH THE MAGIC OF "PUSH-BUTTON" SELF-HYPNOTISM!

HERE—FOR THE FIRST TIME—IS A SIMPLE, SAFE, SANE WAY TO REDUCE AND CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT!

YES, your weight problem is solved! an amazing method has been devised to rid your body of excess weight as no amount of pills, Turkish baths or starvation can. Called "Push-Button" Self-Hypnotism, this remarkable method helps your body use up excess fat—SO YOU LOSE WEIGHT WITHOUT MEDICATION OR EXERCISE!

And once you attain your normal weight, there's no diet to stop, no chance of gaining it all back again. You stay slim — naturally! It's as simple as that!

HOW TO REDUCE AND CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT THROUGH SELF-HYPNOTISM

This book gives you 3 simple "Push-Button" steps that enable you to achieve a deep state of self-hypnotism in a matter of seconds.

In this state you are able to give yourself a special suggestion that helps your body use up excess fat for the rest of the day!

In as little as one day you start to see results! And—because this is an automatic "Push-Button" process, you need no special abilities of any kind!

What this means to you is this: though you still eat and drink a wide variety of delicious foods and beverages — you never gain an ounce!

SIDNEY PETRIE, pictured at left, is a world famous hypnologist and consultant to doctors. He recently appeared on a CBS documentary on hypnotism, and has lectured widely to professional and lay audiences on the uses of hypnotism and autosuggestion. He perfected the remarkable technique of "Push-Button" Self-Hypnosis after 8 years of private practice involving difficult obesity cases referred to him by physicians and other medical specialists. For nearly 20 years, he has been helping thousands of people to master unwanted habits such as excessive drinking and speech defects. He is a member of the International Association of Hypnologists.

Robert B. Stone is a noted author with over 30 books to his credit. He received his B.Ss. degree from M.I.T.

THE MIRACLE YOU CAN PERFORM IN ONLY A FEW MINUTES A DAY!

It takes only a few minutes to perform the magic of "Push-Button" Self-Hypnotism. Yes, it's as simple as A-B-C.

That's why I say that in only one or two days you'll see:

- How to have youthful slenderness without strict dieting, exercise or heavy smoking!
- How to smoothe away aches and pains!
- How to relieve tensions and seemingly rejuvenate every muscle, gland and organ in your body!
- How to put new drive in your legs, new spring in your step!
- How to eat and drink practically anything under the sun without upset stomach or excess weight!
- How to resist colds, flu and respiratory troubles!
- How to restore muscle and skin tone, wipe away wrinkles! . . . and much, much more!

In less than a quarter of an hour you may start to perform a miracle in your life!

You will be more alive, more erect, more attractive to the opposite sex, able to do all that needs to be done during the day with energy and ambition to spare! You'll boast a splendid physique—and, though you eat all you like, you'll never gain weight!

AMAZING TECHNIQUE HAS HELPED THOUSANDS

For example, in this book you'll see how:

- Jean J. lost all her excess weight after pills, exercises and hospital care had failed. She says, "It has all the earmarks of a miracle."
- David O., a 47-year-old editor, writes: "Losing 10 pounds was like losing 10 years off my age."
- Rev. Charles W. lost 100 pounds easily!
- Wanda D. went from 320 to 135 pounds — has never once had to pass up a morsel of food!

SPECIAL NO-RISK, MONEY-SAVING OFFER!

Yes, you can now read this exciting book entirely at our risk for 10 full days — and save $1.50 if you decide to keep it! Ten days is the amount of time required to see for yourself that there's no limit to the weight you can safely lose this way — and keep it off! And if you act now, buy now, you can enjoy it for only $4.95 — a dollar less than the regular price. What's more, we'll pay for the postage and handling, too — saving you a full $1.50 in all. After 10 days, if you do not want to keep the book and safely lose weight, simply return it and your money will be instantly refunded. Or, if you would rather charge it, we'll bill you later at the regular $5.95 price, plus postage and handling. Whichever way, it's yours to keep free for 10 full days. Fill out coupon now. You have nothing to lose but weight — everything to gain!

Special Reward Feature!

This method will do a lot more for you than just help you lose weight. It gives you:

- A more dynamic, commanding personality!
- Sharpened eyesight and hearing!
- A steel-shutter memory!
- Improved speech!
- Rapid learning . . . and much more!

SAVE $1.50 — MAIL PAYMENT TODAY!

Initial shipments dispatched to U. S. A., now await delivery at introductory prices per offer below.

Actual size: 3" by 4½" by 1½". weighs less than 12 oz.

Memocord's XJE IV, the self-contained, sub-miniature voice recorder has taken Europe by storm. Now it's yours to try, to have and use absolutely FREE. No purchase necessary.

THE XJE IV, at long last, is within the reach of most U.S. executives. The price—about $100 not too long ago—is now reduced to only $79.95. And the world-respected Viktor Stuzzi MEMOCORD unit (the original pocket voice recorder) is now better-performing, easier-operating, more ruggedly-durable than ever before.

Best of all, you can now TRY THIS REVOLUTIONARY "MEMORY CELL" FREE, before you even consider buying it.

Only a trifle larger than a pack of cigarettes, the XJE IV is a completely self-contained "thinking dynamo"—just a whisper away from your most important, most profitable thoughts and ideas. How many times have you forgotten something that would have made you money? Or would have prevented you from losing money?

How often have you wished you had verbatim notes on this or that meeting or business conference? What executive hasn't had to live through the tangled nightmare of some costly, confusing misunderstanding—which could have been prevented if adequate records of who said what (when, where and how) were available? When was the last time you "lost" an opportunity simply because you had no convenient way to record its concept and anatomy? Who hasn't suddenly come up with "the answer"—while driving along an express highway at 60 mph? And lost it by the time the next stop rolled around?

GREAT FOR HOME USE, TOO!

Yes, every member of the family will find lots of good uses for the XJE IV:

- ✓ MOM, for recipes, menus, messages, shopping lists, club minutes.
- ✓ SIS, for theme ideas, important dates, style notes, daily checklists.
- ✓ BROTHER, for homework assignments, phone conversations, sports data.
- ✓ DAD, too, can use it at home for business notes hn won't lose or forget!

Why didn't you save time by phoning long distance for that list of specifications — too long to "take down"? No sir, not if you own an XJE IV. (Yes, it comes complete with its own super-sensitive induction telephone mike which picks up both ends of any phone conversation!)

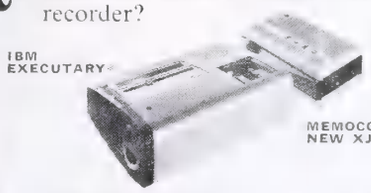
"SECRET WEAPON" IN YOUR ARSENAL OF SUCCESS

Andrew Carnegie, the steel multi-millionaire, was once advised to "list" everything that needed doing, every day, and then set about getting things done in order of their importance — carrying over undone tasks, adding new ones, periodically evaluating his progress toward a pre-determined goal. This simple system, said Carnegie, allowed him to be more productive, more directional (and therefore more successful) than his toughest competitors. Imagine what old Andrew could have done with an XJE IV Memory Cell!

A recent university study of alumni who succeeded in business, in professional work, in government, revealed that the major common denominator of "money success" was the knack of "organizing" information so that (1) it didn't have to clutter up busy thought channels, and (2) it could be retrieved immediately. Following a close second was the ability to communicate facts and ideas accurately, quickly, simply, to associates and especially subordinates.

In realistic terms of career advancement and income escalation, don't you owe it to yourself and your family to at least try the MEMOCORD XJE IV. It could be your "secret weapon" of SUCCESS!

"Extremely pleased. . . . appreciate your sending to us three more if still available."
—MILTON KAPLAN, Laurel Planning & Redevelopment Corp., Laurel, Md.



"The Memocord just saved a client by 'nailing down' one single vital detail, which otherwise would have been neglected."
—WM. ARCHENHOLD, Flesher Adv. Agency, Denver, Colo.

"Skeptical . . . I very seldom order by mail. But am more than pleased with XJE IV. Especially this miniature unit's performance. Unusual to get such good voice reproduction from a machine so small, at a price even smaller."
—EARL BRENN, Huntington Laboratories, Inc., Huntington, Ind.

SEND NO MONEY! TAKE NO RISK! INCUR NO OBLIGATION TO BUY!

"Can I be your little girl, now?"

Late one night, four-year-old Nan Mi was rescued from a blazing fire that destroyed her home in Seoul, Korea.

But her mother and father both perished in the flames. Neighbors took her in, but they are too poor to keep her.

When our Overseas Children caseworker arrived, she found Nan Mi wandering near the rubble of the burned house, her eyes full of fear.

Her first words to our worker were, "Can I be your little girl, now?" Orphaned and alone, she desperately needs someone to belong to.

To help children like Nan Mi, Overseas Children (formerly Christian Herald Industrial Missions in China) opened an orphanage in China, many years ago. And after the Communists forced us out, we moved on to Hong Kong, Formosa, then Korea.

And it seems we always have more orphans than sponsors.

This is very dear to my heart. I have held children like Nan Mi in my arms and prayed that God would bless them—innocent victims of a world full of tragedy.

Will you help youngsters like Nan Mi belong? Help them find the love and security all children should have?

I urge you to sponsor a needy child. The cost is small, only $12 a month. Besides the child's love and gratitude, you will receive his or her picture, life history and the chance to exchange letters.

Please—sit down right now, fill out the sponsor application, write your check for $12 and send it airmail. The need is urgent. A child is waiting for your love. Will you help? Today?

God bless you.

$25.00. BUT WE'LL TAKE MORE IF YOUR CONSCIENCE BOTHERS YOU.

It's just that we skimped on this one. . .on purpose. We wanted to make an uncomplicated floor lamp that could stand by quietly in any living room. One that would blend with any decor. A lamp that's there but isn't. The 57" stem is chrome or brass. The base is black metal. The 14" shade is also black. It takes a 50-200-250 watt 3-way bulb. There's a lot to this not-much lamp.

Your child must memorize all his multiplication tables to pass in NEW MATH

TWO WEEK FREE TRIAL
Just send name—no money!

Musical Multiplication Records

teach all the tables from 2's through 12's as easily as the words of a song!

Help your child do better in arithmetic—especially in the New Math—by getting him these new multiplication records. Modern Math teachers insist on children memorizing their tables. Now even children of pre-school age can easily learn all the tables from 2's through 12's simply by playing these records.

No urging needed from parents. Children love these records. Each table has its own catchy tune and jingles. And the man on the record quizzes your child so the tables stick in his memory. He must know his tables to learn long division, fractions and decimals.

Send No Money. Just send coupon and the records will be mailed to you postage prepaid. If returned within two weeks after receipt, you owe nothing. If kept, pay only $9.95, price in full. Bremner Records, Dept. N-41, Wilmette, Illinois 60091.

School Principal writes: "Your records have a unique teaching approach and a good one. Our pupils are taking new interest in their tables. Excellent as a home-tutoring aid."

A. Blair Owens, Principal, Lewiston Elementary School, Lewiston, Pa.

Parent writes: "All three of my children used your records and in 6 weeks had learned all the tables from 2's through 12's. Best investment I ever made."

A. J. Perez, Parsons, Kansas

3 TROPICAL PALM TREES $2

These exotic palms are available direct from the Caribbean only once a year. Act now to bring tropical glamour to every room in your home—your patio and garden.

You've seen these lush palms in fabulous hotels and office buildings — in luxury homes and apartments—and used by famous interior decorators. And you know they sell for up to $10, $25 and more. But now you can get them direct from the Caribbean's largest nursery at this amazing low price. These beautiful "Butterfly Palms" (areca lutescens) were selected by horticulturists as ideal for indoors or out. They thrive anywhere—sun or shade — with minimum care. Their graceful green foliage adds tropical glamour to any room—brightens the dullest corner. And in warm weather they bring a touch of the tropics to patios and gardens. These rare palms are now up to a foot and a half tall, will grow up to ten feet if desired. And for just $2 you can get a cluster of 3 palms growing in a pot with simple instructions. All are shipped direct from the Caribbean and guaranteed to arrive in perfect condition. But this is the only time this year you can get these exotic palms. Order now and be the envy of every gardener for miles around.

Send just $2 for 3 palms in a pot. Only $3.50 for 6 palms—2 pots . . . or get 9 palms in 3 pots for just $5.00. All on unconditional money back guarantee. Send cash, check or money order to:

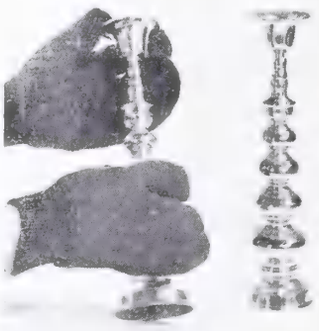
ANTIQUES

For 45 years the collector's magazine for the latest news of antiques and art

In September: American art glass, English silver, and Rhenish stoneware in public and private collections; ornamental ironwork in Mobile; rarities in American furniture; and an exciting book preview, illustrated in color, from Colonial Antiques by Marshall B. Davidson.

In coming months: an important exhibition of three centuries of Connecticut furniture; Continental decorative arts at the Chicago Art Institute; an entire issue devoted to paintings, with emphasis on the new Princeton University museum; Bermuda silver; nineteenth-century China Trade porcelain; and a choice collection of American furniture in Texas.



In every issue: something for most collecting interests—reports of museum acquisitions and exhibitions, antiques shows, reviews of the latest books in the field, and a listing of historic houses open to the public.

BONSAI SECRET IS YOURS NOW!

Coming from the historic and exotic East —this Oriental secret process of Bonsai is yours now. Exciting thoughts of Temples, snow-capped mountains and multi-colored floral gardens will stream through "minds-eye" as you observe the growth of this beautiful miniature Blue Spruce tree on your coffee table. An ornamental conversation center! Ordinary "garden variety" type of soil is recommended for this SNOKIST Colorado Blue Spruce (Picea Pungens) tree. Complete instructions for planting and dwarfing, or bonsai treatments (root clipping to control growth) with each individually packaged living baby tree. Guaranteed to grow.

This beautiful SNOKIST Colorado Blue Spruce tree can be planted indoors or outdoors.

Outdoors it can be grown as your own picturesque Christmas tree—or, trimmed as a hedge—or, let this SNOKIST Blue Spruce attain its full height of 30 feet as a shade tree.

The SNOKIST living baby Blue Spruce tree makes an ideal gift of long remembrance of your thoughtfulness. $1.98 each, or three trees for $5.50. Send check or money order, sorry no C.O.D.'s We ship postpaid in the U.S.A. For our illustrated catalog of unique and handcrafted gifts send 50¢.

HONEY and EGG FOR WRINKLES

Quite by accident, laboratory chemists stumbled upon a fascinating new skin discovery. By combining the skin-smoothing properties of egg with natural bee's honey, they perfected a 10-minute "facial" that smooths and tightens skin. Completely non-synthetic, this new skin research discovery works wonders on crepey, wrinkled skin on neck and face. Instantly, skin tingles with a refreshing coolness as wrinkled skin tightens. Applies easily in seconds, yet rinses off instantly with clear, cool water.

The research discovery is sold under the name of Donnatelli Honey and Egg Creme. Its intoxicating fragrance is reminiscent of the queen bee's essence of nectar.

Send $3.00 for long-lasting 2 oz. jar (two jars, $5.00); $1.00 deposit on C.O.D.'s you pay postage. Money back guarantee, so send today sure.

Tables. Look for shortened or replaced legs. On some early tables, you may find an old top and an old bottom that don't quite match. This is called a "married" piece. Thin table tops and drop leaves are subject to warping. The most common form of restoration is complete replacement. Also, the inventive cabinetmaker may add drop leaves to a table that never had any. The best guide in all these matters is the comparison of patina of the finished and unfinished surfaces. Be sure to inspect tables upside down for this purpose. Check all hinges and joints for renovations.

Bureaus. Small bureaus are very popular today. A common "restoration" is to take a bulky chest and make it narrower or smaller. This will usually show up inside the drawers, all of which will have been cut down on one side. The marks of recent tampering will be quite evident. The patina of the inside wood will always give such reconstructions away. Another bureau to beware of is the one constructed out of the top of a highboy whose bottom is missing. The proportions will usually tell you that the piece is "wrong." New legs may also have been added. Figure 3 shows two bureaus. The one on the top is genuine. The other was made out of a highboy top. Note the overlarge frame on the top. Its malproportion is the first clue to the bureau's original source.

On all furniture with brass pulls or other metal ornaments, check the metal parts for originality (described above). In addition to an eye for patina (metal acquires a patina, too), you will need some training in the details of styles. The reference books will help greatly here. Remember, too, that the brasses may have been changed years ago when changing styles dictated the alteration. But new brasses often require new holes. Always check inside drawers to see the back of the pulls. New holes, or bolts with less patina, indicate such changes.

The catalog of repairs is endless and infinite. But once you get the hang of things and have observed antiques in all states of preservation or restoration, you will develop a sixth sense that will come to your aid when confronted with something unusual.

To supplement your practical experience, you should own several general reference works on antiques, and several other specialized works on the things you collect. Your local librarian can best recommend the ones you need. Antiques by Ann Kilborn Cole, illustrated (Collier Books, $1.50) is a fine example of a general work in a handy size to be carried with you when out in the field.

The last question for the collector who has found just the piece he wants—he is watering at the mouth to own it—is the question of price and value. Is it a bargain, or is it overpriced? The answer to this symptom of Antique Buyer's Doubt is not simple, but there are several ways to cure it. Comparative shopping is one. On big investments, it may be worth your peace of mind to get an outside appraisal. Or you may simply handle all such major acquisitions through a dealer intermediary; this is a time-honored tradition of all the great collectors. In addition to these methods, there are myriad price guides, lists, and catalogs currently in print. To cite one example of many: Antiques Price Guide (E. G. Warman Publishing Co., $6.95).

Armed with all this information, you are now ready to go back to your dealer and buy. But you can also learn from him. He is probably one of your best sources of information—all you have to know is how to approach him. Like you, he loves antiques. His pleasure is to share his love of the beautiful with an appreciative customer. Once he knows that you, too, are a lover of the beautiful, he will share with you other "secrets of the trade." ■

VENICE, THE FOREVER CITY

About a traveler's treasure that never seems to wear thin, the place where beauty waits inexhaustibly, shimmering timelessly between the sea and the sky

It is true that there are motoscafi and vaporetti and a traffic light for gondoliers, and a bus at the Piazzale Roma that carries you to the airport.

But Venice remains Venice—timelessly. It is always, in essence, the same stunning surprise, the same seeming anomaly—stone that floats on water, a giant jewel box suspended between sky and sea.

Among professional tourists—and Venice has been a tourist magnet ever since this gilded city of the doges rose out of the Adriatic marshes—it creates an uneasy sense that there's so much to sight-see and so little time for cramming it all in. There are churches by the dozen, not to say the jeweled wonder of San Marco, the cynosure of Venice, where you can see the treasures of the ages—Grecian bronzes, Byzantine mosaics, and a filigreed sampling of artistry from East and West. There are Titians, Tintorettos, Tiepolos, Canalettos, Carpaccios, Bellinis, and a guidebookful of patrician palazzi lining canals like point de Venise frozen into moonstone. (Continued on page 185)

from the forthcoming book

HELEN MARCUS

by Dorothy Rodgers

Breaking precedent, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL here prepublishes a book . . . believing that whatever Dorothy Rodgers might decide, select, innovate, or write about her new house would be of supreme interest to our readers. Therefore, as the house in her head has progressed—from idea to paper model to floor plan to ground-breaking to rooftree to final furnishing—HOUSE BEAUTIFUL has been there with a camera. A fascinating progress. She has written a remarkable journal as she has built a remarkable house. A double task which could have been undertaken only by one of such sure selective taste, vitality, imagination, resources, and consuming interest. Only, we suspect, by Dorothy Rodgers.

THE HOUSE IN MY HEAD

by Dorothy Rodgers

Beginning the three-part story of the house built by Mrs. Rodgers and her husband, composer Richard Rodgers. In this first installment: The big decision to build . . . finding the site . . . choosing the architect . . . planning, planning . . . to the drawing board at last

The house in my head is not only real—it is practical, comfortable, beautiful, easy to maintain, and it works. While I realize that few people build from the ground up as Dick and I did, I hope you will be able to make use of some of the ideas we found helpful—even if you are only remodeling a kitchen. The House in My Head is about the present and the future. I'll be writing it as it happens and, unless I cheat, I won't know how it comes out any more than you will.

The decision to sell Rockmeadow, the big Colonial house in Southport, Connecticut, that for 16 years had been home in the country for Dick and me, was a terrible wrench for both of us. But its numerous beloved rooms and enchanting gardens required huge amounts of tending. It had simply become too much to cope with. I had always wanted to build a house, and suddenly I felt sure that this was the moment. Sensibly, someone else might have given up guests or allowed the gardens to de-landscape themselves. But these were part of our Rockmeadow life, and we couldn't. For us, starting over was the only solution.

For Dick, as for most men, change is at best uninviting, even when the end result is an improvement. Giving up Rockmeadow seemed to him like selling one of our daughters, and for weeks he went around looking like a wounded deer.

From the first, I seemed to know what I wanted the new house to be. Sitting in the garden that fall of 1965, I thought, sentimentally, how beautiful Rockmeadow was with the leaves beginning to turn, and I knew there was one trap I would have to avoid: that of trying to build another Rockmeadow. We needed a place that would be much easier to run, less dependent on live-in help, one we could open and close for winter weekends without having to have a year-round caretaker. And, since this was to be a house to enjoy, I didn't want to postpone living in it one unnecessary minute.

At any rate, there—already begun—was the house in my head. I discovered that parts of plans existed on paper; and I found a notebook, dated July 1963, with random entries: "Eleven-foot ceilings and tall doors and windows where possible. . . . Why must rooms be squared off? Why not pentagonal or hexagonal? Perhaps it might work for an entrance hall or a passageway. . . . Think in terms of areas. Entertaining. Sleeping area with access to service area. . . . Dick's bedroom, workroom (?)"

Although I have always been drawn to indigenous materials — the travertine in Rome, the white marble of Greece, Jerusalem's honey-colored stone, the rugged fieldstone of New England—strangely, perhaps, I had never given the house in my head a specific "skin." As far as shape was concerned, I could survey the Connecticut countryside and see a great deal of what I didn't want in the rising crop of Colonials and saltboxes. For me, contemporary architecture's freedom to design for a way of living without conforming to any preset style has always had a much stronger appeal. So, in my 1963 notes, the rather tentative statement, "Would love to have it look a little like a Palladian villa," was followed by a very important "but": "but I want to start with the inside." What I cared about most was having a place that not only looked beautiful but worked with the least possible day-to-day care—from me or from anyone else. And while I realized that building it would be expensive, the reduced cost of its upkeep would be tremendous, in terms both of money and of personal wear and tear.

Time was important, the location of a site imperative. We had, of course, pictured a place with magnificent trees and a great sweep of view—but not if finding it meant leaving the Southport-Fairfield area where we had come to feel at home and liked and trusted people: our doctor, the plumber, the television man, the storekeepers, and our wonderful gardener, Paul Heetmann.

In the ensuing search—led by a real-estate man who knew every inch of local land and whose soul was nine parts caution and one part glint in the eye—we toured and trudged along the Connecticut coast. Then, after following many false leads and covering hundreds of acres, we found our land —barely four miles from Rockmeadow. We were terribly lucky. Unlike a wealthy friend who says, "I always buy to the horizon," we would have only ten acres of farmland, protected on one side by a wildlife preserve which would remain leafy and undeveloped forever. We would have our trees—among them some beautiful old oaks: it was comparatively high ground—350 feet above sea level: and, since this was farmland—three meadows divided by trees and stone fences—the ground was already adequately cleared.

From first look, I thought it wonderful: but any decision, Dick and I agreed, should wait until our architect, John Stonehill, had seen it, too. Only an architect can tell you whether the house you hope for will actually fit the property you've found; and if so, where it should be placed and which way it should face.

Our choice of John Stonehill as our architect was in every way a fortuitous one. Friends had assumed we would use a "name" architect. Yet it seemed to us that a name would, of necessity, have to put his stamp on whatever he designed—whereas we wanted only our own. In my 1963 notes, these words appear: "I would enjoy working with John Stonehill, if he would be willing. He is gifted, young, flexible, and we have great rapport." "Gifted" is an understatement: a graduate of the Yale School of Architecture, John had won the Prix de Rome, spent a year at the American Academy there, and eventually joined forces with a senior partner, Oliver Lundquist. Although John had never done a house, I felt sure he would do ours superably. And, at the risk of being accused of nepotism, I felt that his being my cousin was nothing if not an advantage. John had visited us in the city and at Rockmeadow since he was a boy. He knew us and the kind of life we live. Furthermore, when he agreed to undertake the house, he was careful to remind me that I would have to work very hard, too. That was music to my ears. I was much too involved to be satisfied with expressing a few desires and then retiring until bill-payment time.

To return to the land, there was one other opinion besides John's that I felt we should have: that of Alice Orme Smith, who was responsible for all the magnificent landscaping at Rockmeadow—aside from such impressive accomplishments as helping to design the gardens at Dumbarton Oaks and landscaping Connecticut's Stratford Theatre.

John and Oliver Lundquist considered the land ideal for us, and Alice Orme Smith said it would indeed be possible to "slip" the house in among some particularly lovely trees, just as we had hoped. We decided to buy.

We required only one more helping hand —a contractor's. As a rule, the architect completes his specifications and lets them out for bids before a builder is selected. With all the subcontracting estimates involved, it's a process that takes many months, and would have precluded the remotest chance of our getting into our new house the following year. Again, we were lucky. Mike Sochacki had built a house for friends of ours, and done one outstanding remodeling job for us at Rockmeadow. With John's and Oliver's approval, I took Mike to see the land and, to help us, he agreed to do a most unusual thing: He would start building from drawings, even before final specifications were drawn up, thus taking advantage of warm fall weather. If, he said, he could get the foundation in before frost, we would have a house to move into the next summer. For Dick, as for me, this news brought the project to life and induced a profound sense of exhilaration.

All that summer the air was full of house talk. We talked to each other, to friends, to John and Oliver. In the midst of it all, I was doing considerable talking to myself. I asked myself questions, wrote myself notes, made lists and lists of lists. Wherever I went, a notebook and pencil went, too. And when I turned out the light they reposed on the table by my bed in case thoughts should go bump in the night —which they often did.

Interior designers love to say—because it's true—that to decorate a room successfully, a woman must know herself. It's the same, only much more so, when you're building a house. Too often people rush into building before they are really aware of how they want to live. While a house can change your life, it cannot make one for you. Shape and line and color are important, but the essential self-knowledge—when it comes to building—has to do with the way you like your house to run. All the storage and lighting and laundering and a thousand other necessary functions have to be considered. And it's impossible to marshal thoughts in order of importance. As you watch, they go bounding wildly from bathroom to garage, from icemaker to clothes pole: all you can do is to try to get them down.

Although there were many things we wanted to repeat from Rockmeadow, there were also—as in all existing houses—any number of things we did not: for instance, the uninsulated dressing room I could never dress in because it steamed in summer and congealed in winter. The object was to sort out our favorite things and find better ways of providing for them.

We began with the number of floors. Instead of three, in the new house we would have one—which would mean no stairs to clean, or to climb carrying luggage or Thermos bottles or laundry. We did think it might be interesting to vary the level a few steps here and there. I wanted those high ceilings and tall doors because I think they add a sense of space and elegance. Especially, I wanted a high, airy look in the living room and the feeling, everywhere, of a house flooded with light and closely related to the outdoors. And I wanted an entrance hall, like Rockmeadow's, that would say, "Come in: we're glad you came," not just a place to pass through.

The living room would be larger than the one we were leaving behind, with space for a dining area that could be closed off while tables were being set or cleared. I wanted a wall of books—we didn't really need a separate library. To save waxing, we'd have tile floors, similar in design throughout the living area for the sake of harmony. But I also wanted the room to have the beauty and warmth of wood. I pictured a pale honey-colored fruitwood paneling—not pickled or bleached, and not painted, which requires so much washing and retouching. Besides, waxed wood has a lovely glow. We would use it for the bookshelves; for a fireplace wall in which the Hi Fi and television would be concealed; and for a storage wall between the dining area and the pantry. This marvelous wall of mine would provide a practical, graceful way to serve buffets.

"A swimming pool that would really be part of the architecture . . . a flagstone terrace that would neither bruise nor need mowing."

Hidden behind folding doors, a long serving counter with built-in warming trays to keep platters and casseroles hot would be accessible from both the pantry and living room. It would be surfaced with the best-looking, heatproof, stainproof, wetproof material we could find. At each side would be enough electric outlets for coffee pots, grills, and such. And inside the wall would be meticulously planned storage space to house all the paraphernalia a buffet needs, including two-way cupboards for china and glasses so they could be moved from the dishwasher into the cupboard on the pantry side and yet be accessible from the dining area when it came to setting tables. On the pantry side, there would be slotted space for trays; shelves designed for serving dishes, bowls and sauce boats; and very shallow slide-out trays for table linen (the deeper the drawer, the more mussing, since what you want is always on the bottom). On the living-room side would be space to store table tops and folding chairs for a large party. Somewhere near, for drinks: a serving surface, a small disguised sink with running water and a small icemaker-refrigerator to provide constant cubes and store a supply of chilled beer.

The outdoor dining area would be part of a bigger indoor-outdoor room, part screened and part unscreened, but shaded, a place where we could spend a great deal of daytime sitting around the pool. I hoped it would be possible to have glass panes and heat in part of the space so that we could use one of our nice old French pieces there and perhaps an upholstered love seat and chairs rather than be restricted only to outdoor furniture.

Both the indoor and outdoor sitting and dining areas would face the swimming pool, which would really be part of the architecture of the house. The pool itself would not be surprising in shape, since Dick and I don't care much for swimming in kidneys or violins. But I'd heard of a number of schemes to make a pool less work to live with: a self-vacuuming system, for example, which would save many man-hours of work, and a marble dust that could be sprayed on and around a pool to provide a safe, semirough surface that would never need to be painted. A flagstone terrace, furthermore, would neither bruise nor need mowing—an improvement over the grass and garden borders around Rockmeadow's pool.

One garden, I reasoned, should be sufficient for both cutting and looking; and the hanging baskets, the flowering shrubs and great tubs of flowers I visualized all around would require less meticulous tending than the old formal borders. There would be a greenhouse, and Paul Heetmann to make it flourish, a potting shed, a tool shed, and a cool place for flowers to "harden" overnight in a big pail of water (before the trip to New York), a place to store summer furniture, a shelter for garden machinery.

and enclosed spaces where firewood could be stacked and cases of empty bottles sit until the return trip to the grocery.

We would have to plan for some kind of night lighting scheme: it would be protective, of course, but it seems to me that when garden lights are well done they also add a pleasant kind of mystery—almost like that in a surrealist painting. Besides, as John Stonehill accurately observes, "Most city people waste the country after dark. Without garden lights, they might just as well sit in an apartment in town."

I planned to plant permanent irrigating pipes underground for the croquet field and, except for that area, to have the land covered in meadow grass—allowed, in fact encouraged, to look informal.

We also decided on some kind of permanent surface for the driveway—because the loose gravel at Rockmeadow took two days a week just to rake—and a border, perhaps, of dogwood trees.

If things worked out as we hoped, weekend guests would drive up to a door close to their rooms, so that carrying luggage would be little or no trouble. Aside from comfortable furniture, the guestrooms would have built-in bookcases (a few shelves to provide a choice of mystery stories, poetry, a recent novel, humor or—for serious types—philosophy) plus storage space for clothes and luggage.

My room would be blue and white—as it always is—and have a fireplace. This time there would be a dressing room I could really use, with, in addition to a marvelous drawer and hanging space, a long rod for airing clothes. Dick's bedroom, as before, would have space for reading and television-watching, a desk to work at, a bath, and the most beautiful view possible.

Any woman who has kept house will understand when I say that one of the real satisfactions about the new house was planning its backstage mechanics—unraveling traffic snarls, shortening carrying routes for groceries and laundry, and cutting out some cleaning chores entirely. Doorknobs of pewter, ebony, or brushed chrome would not need shining, and all the furniture brasses would be lacquered so they wouldn't require hand-polishing to keep them bright. Throughout the house, the first principle would be to try to locate storage space for supplies and tools as close as possible to the place where they would be used. Built into the sleeping area, for example, would be a linen closet for Dick's room and mine and another for the guest bedrooms; there would also be space close by for storing cleaning materials so that polishes, dust cloths, and mops wouldn't have to be lugged to and from a kitchen closet every morning; and there would be shelves in or near the bathroom to store extra necessities. In the powder room and pool dressing rooms would be cupboards and shelves for soap and extra towels and a supply of lendable bathing suits and caps.

Behind the low stone wall is the entrance courtyard, with the front door at the very center.

But the major part of this behind-the-scenes efficiency planning was focused on the service area and its center, the kitchen. Basically, this included the kitchen itself, with a maid's sitting and dining area off to one side. (In my dreams of the occasional winter weekends we might spend at the house, this would be a comfortable place for Dick to sit while I cooked: I wouldn't need to be exiled every time I fixed dinner, as I had been at Rockmeadow.) Beyond the sitting area, separated from the kitchen by a counter over which food could be passed, would be two maids' rooms, a bath, and closet space, including one for the uniforms and coats of maids who might come in to help.

The kitchen itself would be the most beautiful in the world, in the sense that it would work with utter perfection. The appliances would be marvels. A big ice-cube-making refrigerator, gas surface burners (so easy to regulate), and two of the miraculous new electric ovens that actually clean themselves. I wanted a ceramic-tile broiler—the kind that makes steaks and chicken taste as though they'd been done over charcoal. Margot Larsen had told me about some wonderful warming drawers that keep hot foods crisp or moist—without cooking them any further—for up to six hours after they've been removed from the oven. Sunk in one of the counters would be a motorized mixer base for snap-on attachments designed to beat, whip, chop, grind, and handle every kind of time-consuming kitchen chore. There would be a chopping block, a marble-topped table, a small desk with a white blackboard above it and—in both the kitchen and pantry—double sinks, each with one deep side for washing big roasting pans. There would, of course, be dishwashers in the kitchen and in the pantry. I would store pots and pans in a large closet. And in addition to the pantry, near the kitchen would be a larder (a walk-in closet with the kind of cool, dry climate that's best not only for canned foods, but for storing vegetables, fruits, even eggs) and a wine closet, also uniformly cool.

I'd want a utility room with a hamper, a washing machine, a dryer, drying racks, and ironing boards; storage space for soap and clothes-cleaning things, and a comfortable, well-lit spot for mending and sewing.

At first I thought the floor-waxer, vacuum, and mops should be housed here, too; then I decided they would be handier in a closet of their own nearer to the main part of the house. At the same time I decided to stage a revival: I remembered an old-fashioned convenience with an ugly no-nonsense name. It's been years since "slop closets" (closets with deep tubs set at floor level to make wringing out mops and filling and emptying pails easier) were part of the best house plans. But, it seemed to me, they still made a good deal of sense because I have never liked rinsing floor mops in the kitchen sink.

We would have a back porch like the one at Rockmeadow: a drying yard in spite of the indoor dryer because laundry hung out in a breeze smells so fresh and wonderful; a rubbish-collecting area; parking space with a shaded spot so that guests' cars would stay cool in summer; and a three-car garage with direct access to the house. That completed the list.

We also did a good deal of mental wandering. We remembered the best-loved houses we knew: Edna Ferber's "Treasure Hill," with its lovely stone house, its magnificent view, and its peaceful farmland; the Alex Lewyts' Sands Point place, a fascinating system of small contemporary houses linked by closed passageways; and the Leo Godowskys' on a point in Connecticut, with its Japanese-inspired lines, pebbled gardens, and a swimming pool that is filled by the Sound. All these added large and small ideas to our store. But just because each place, recalled or visited, was so right for its own family, it followed that none was exactly right for us.

It was the same with the houses in the books on architecture for which I scoured the stores and libraries. There would be a wonderful floor in one picture (I was particularly taken with comblanchien, a light beige French stone, and with the shapes of Spanish tiles), an interesting window treatment in another, a roof line or a series of terraces that we thought attractive in another. Yet nowhere was there a whole house of which we could say, "There it is—that's what we want."

Strangely, I seemed to find all this more exciting than discouraging—it simply served to reinforce my feeling that the house in my head existed nowhere else; and that if we were ever to live in it, we, with John and Oliver on the professional level, would have to create it ourselves. There was nothing I wanted to do more.

And I was having a glorious time. In architectural magazines, I studied ads and articles that told of miraculous new materials and contraptions. For example, one remarkable gadget was said to whisk away the dust of a whole house at the flick of a switch; though I couldn't figure out exactly where the dust would be whisked to, I decided we would certainly have to have that. There was also a system of vacuum ducts that eliminated dragging a clumsy cleaner around.

But the masterpiece was a scheme for a kitchen floor I dreamed up all by myself. It started off conventionally enough: I'd use one of the new no-wax vinyl coverings with a cushioned backing which would surely be comforting to the feet. (The new vogue for carpeting kitchens and bathrooms makes me very uneasy.) But then my design took a new slant (literally): I planned to have the whole floor slope almost imperceptibly from the outside edge toward a central drain so that a hose could be attached to faucets in the baseboard, and the whole area flushed clean in minutes. Then I had another vision—of a cook with wet shoes or bare feet; I abandoned the plan forthwith.

There were still all sorts of points to be checked. Since we would not have heavy draperies or carpets in the living room to deaden sound, I wanted to find out about the effectiveness of acoustical plaster. It was important to keep the tone of Dick's piano rich, but not too lively. Dick had tried the Lewyts' piano in their Long Island living room—which also had tiled floors—and thought it sounded fine, so I would probably start my research with the sort of surface they had used.

There were questions and questions—and very few with answers attached. An electronic garage door? Snow-melters under the driveway surface? A built-in fire-fighting sprinkler system? Was there some plastic finish that didn't give wood that nasty varnished look so I could consider having some wood floors? Should we have indoor planting? Could we plant herbs between the flagstones of the terrace? And since the pool would be so close to the house, wasn't there some way to keep the water warm in winter so we wouldn't need logs floating on top to prevent the pool from cracking? Jeremiah Goodman—the talented man who had done the drawings for my earlier book, My Favorite Things—said he thought we should have the living-room draperies disappear part way into the walls at either side of the windows, so that, when the curtains were opened, they wouldn't cover large areas of glass. Mike Sochacki told me that in some houses he had installed insecticide tanks in the basements with outlets around the outer walls, so that a touch on a central button was enough to release a 50-foot fog around the house that was death to flies and mosquitoes. Still, desirable as the immediate result was, it was the kind of thing I was really afraid to fool with—Rachel Carson's brilliant book, The Silent Spring, had made me leery of anything that might put nature off balance.

Meanwhile, John and I, armed with pencils, pads, and lists and my scribbled notes, began setting down everything that seemed relevant to planning the house, from the linen closets to the croquet field. Generally, John's sheets were divided into four categories. First came "Adjacencies"—a rundown of rooms and areas to which any given space should be accessible. The living-dining room, for example, should be adjacent to the entrance hall, the pantry, the porch, the patio, and the pool.

"Storage" was the next item, and here again lists were (Continued on page 181)

"There would be a greenhouse, a potting shed, a tool shed, and a cool place for flowers to 'harden' overnight before the trip to New York."

THE PROSPECT BEFORE US

Explosive theories... accelerated acceleration... new values, new sensations... these House Beautiful is reaching for in the next 40 pages. First, the thoughts of six catalytic men of our time

Social Critic LEWIS MUMFORD says of man:

"... in the depths of the individual soul we must attempt to transcend the limitations of our time and our place by seeking what is eternal and divine—addressing ourselves to possibilities still unplumbed and to ideals that have still to emerge. There, and not in rocket trips into outer space, lies the New World that has still to be discovered and domesticated by the spirit of man."

City Planner CONSTANTINOS A. DOXIADIS says of architecture:

"... 'visiting time' is over so far as architecture is concerned. We must look on architectural creations as objects not merely to be visited but to be lived in. Architecture must not be looked upon as one of the sights of the city, as a monument of the past or even of the present."

Futurist MARSHALL MCLUHAN says of communication:

"Electric circuitry has overthrown the regime of 'time' and 'space' and pours upon us instantly and continuously the concerns of all other men. . . . The circuited city of the future will not be the huge hunk of concentrated real estate created by the railway. It will take on a totally new meaning under conditions of very rapid movement. It will be an information megalopolis."

Inventor BUCKMINSTER FULLER says of invention.

"Fortunately, the do-more-with-less invention initiative does not derive from political debate, bureaucratic licensing, or private economic patronage. The license comes only from the blue sky of the inventor's intellect. No one licensed the inventors of the airplane, telephone, electric light, and radio to go to work. It took only the personally dedicated initiative of five men. Herein lies the unexpectedly swift effectiveness of the invisibly generated and inexorable design-science revolution."

Master Architect LE CORBUSIER on the new world:

"Let us draw up the human and poetic plans of the new world. Let us reconstruct everything: the roads, the ports, the cities, the institutions. The page has turned. . . . Between belief and doubt, it is better to believe. Between action and vacillation, it is better to act."

Historian-Philosopher C. P. SNOW says of the future:

"Ever since men began to think introspectively about themselves they have made guesses about those parts of their own nature which seemed to be predestined. It is possible that within a generation some of these guesses will have been tested against exact knowledge. No one can predict what such an intellectual revolution will mean, but I believe that one of the consequences will be to make us feel not less but more responsible towards our brother men."

FOR THE NEW HORIZON: A SCULPTURED PROFILE

Rising out of green New Jersey farmland, these white-stuccoed geometric forms light up the landscape and clearly express a house that hints at tomorrow. Architect Richard Meier forecasts an exciting future with this orderly interplay of rich curves and precise rectangles, but he presents far more than an exercise in pure sculpture. Designed for Mr. and Mrs. Harold Renfield, these blending shapes are each a reflection of the living activity within, and they create interior spaces (shown on the next four pages) that break completely with the past.

WILLIAM MARIS

Based on an undistinguished 30-year-old house, this remodeling reveals hardly a glance backward. A disparity of parts is now an eloquent whole. The exterior is stucco, one of the oldest of building materials, newly used because of the fluidity of the circular forms. Set into the textured roughness of the stucco are sleek rectangles of glass, unseen skylights, and towered windows to admit streams of daylight.

The exteriors, seen here, are beautifully cool and calm. Above, the outdoor pool, a dominant element in the design, and, beyond it, the curving end of the wing that encloses the indoor pool. Seen on the opposite page, climbing 20 feet into the sky, is a cylinder, sliced sharply in half, that defines the dining space.

ELIZABETH [illegible]BEYEFF

Despite their bursts of color, the interiors never compete with the achitecture. They are, in fact, an integral part of it, a natural result of the collaboration of Mr. Meier and Interior Designer Elaine Lustig Cohen.

The morning room, above, is a quiet, private world, with one sweep of glass bringing in the landscape. A room for reading, television-watching. The built-in couch has a car-design seat covered in suedecloth, piled with bright flag-patterned pillows. Desk top is wrapped in red vinyl. Beyond, the double doorway leads to the living room, opposite. The billiards room, above left, is in the Victorian mood, its windows retained from the old house.

The master bedroom, left, has only two pieces of furniture, these designed by Mr. Meier and Mrs. Cohen. The desk, which serves as a room divider, has storage units at each end and backs up the bed as a headboard.

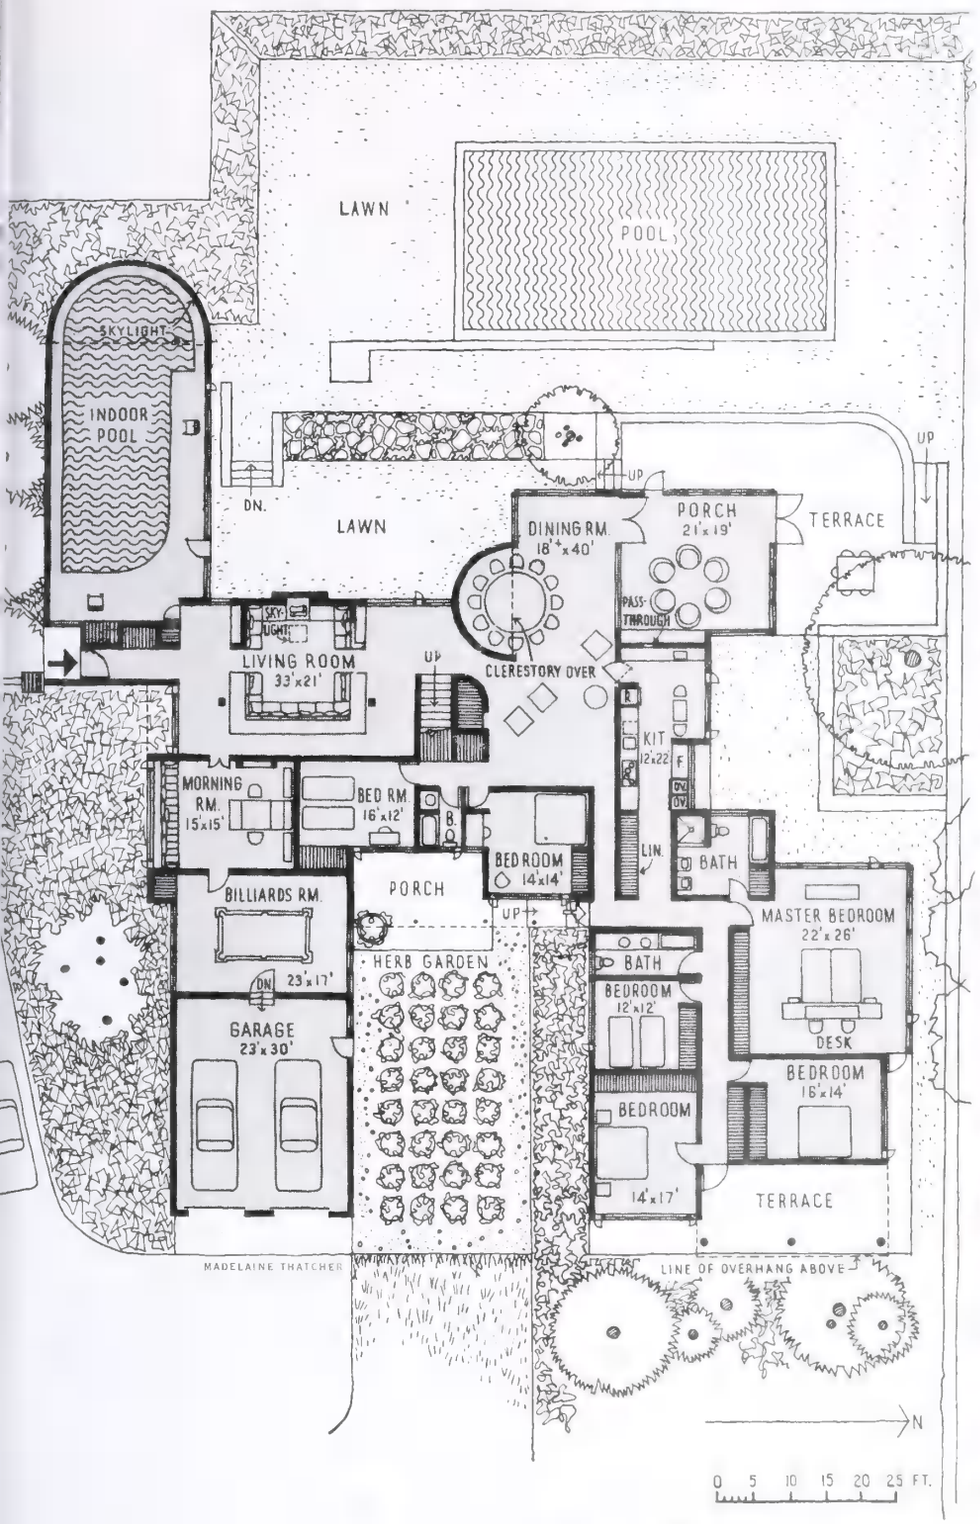
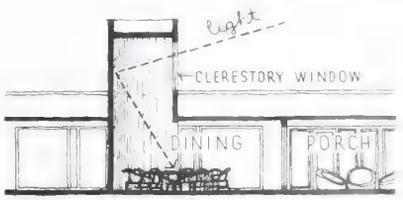
Nonconformist, the living room, above, has furniture flowing out of the architecture—fireplace, walls, and sofa are all of stucco. The sofa is comfortably cushioned in stripes and plains, and, against its back, a casual line-up of patterned pillows of Indian design. Light slants down from a skylight and from fixtures built into sofa niches. Tables were fashioned from an old beam.

Dining table, left, has a rotating center. The three large sculptural bases in the background are also functional: for serving, storing, and keeping food hot (one has warming ovens).





FOR THE NEW HORIZON

Architect Meier has given the Renfields a house of marvelous choices —for their own enjoyment and for the entertainment of their guests. The solitude of a secluded area or the sociability of a conversation group. The pools, for a swim indoors or out. The casual living, deep within the house, on the openable porch, or on a terrace under the full sun. The dining room, above left, its table a perfect fit within the curve of the half-cylinder, is flooded with light from clerestory windows, placed in the cut half of the cylinder's majestic, 20-foot rise (see drawing opposite). Beyond, a glimpse of the screened porch, and further, the sun terrace. The porch, a pleasant shelter from the beat of the sun—or the rain—is furnished sparely with circular chairs of woven cane. Used often for lunch or cocktails, the porch is connected to the kitchen by a pass-through. Another view of the living room, left, below, seen from the dining room. Its rough-textured brick-paved floor is a warm, natural foil for the disciplined, pristine surfaces of the stuccoed seat and walls. Entry is beyond. The indoor pool, below, a refreshment available no matter what the weather or the hour, is illumined at its curving end by a skylight. The unobtrusive pale carpeting of the pool's deck is a soft contrast to the brilliant sparkle of the water and the stark, utterly white exterior.

PROPHECY!

Two new currents rising. Springing from the infinite sophistication of neutrals in close harmony. Enormously exciting tactile, antithetical emphasis in both. One buttery smooth suede. Shags soft as a lamb's coat. Waxy woods. Bleached burl, oak, fruitwood, pecan, walnut, ash. All upholstered whitely. The other, steel. Black glass. Gunmetal. Lead crystal. Aluminum. Coat-of-mail. Magic, medieval, modern. On the following ten pages, see these new directions in décor emerging.

WHITE-ON-WHITE, ITS OPTICAL SURPRISES

Paul Rudolph, architect, designer, educator, in redesigning his apartment in a converted Manhattan river house, exploits the mysterious color that is born when light encounters pure white. The living room, shown here, is an almost total white entity, an interplay of textures—opaque and luminous Plexiglas sofa platforms, glossy vinyl, matte walls, the rug of satiny kidskins. But as the nature and sources of light change, the eye may see this white-on-white room not as a total whiteness at all. Instead, it becomes an ephemeral palette of pale and tenuous tints, suggesting straw gold, champagne, shadow on sand, and the twilight gray-blue of black pearl.

In morning sun, *top opposite, the room's whiteness is washed in palest gold, shadow-patterned by a curtain of nylon-threaded mirror discs. By night, bottom opposite, these tiny mirrors reflect the room in diamond-blue dazzle. Ice-cream-parlor chairs excepted, all furniture floats—a cantilevering of Plexiglas slabs, invisibly supported by metal braces. Lucite tabletop, water-clear, appears to float through the window wall. River-hanging terrace is an airy structure of subway grating painted white. A topographical model covers one wall like a bas relief. THE INVENTIVE SHAPES OF PRESENT AND FUTURE

By MARION GOUGH

In a suburban Baltimore woodland, on a site steep as a ski slope, sits a house of dramatic, controversial form, surely a foretaste of what inventive, untrammeled architecture can bring to the future. Most importantly, in its owner's view it is an unqualified success as shelter and esthetic satisfaction. J. William Ilmanen was the designer, given carte blanche by his client, a well-traveled and astonishingly nonconformist grandmother. Her only insistences: no trees to be felled in this flickering beech grove; for the living room, a cathedral ceiling, a fish pond, and a two-sided fireplace to be shared with the dining room; a guestroom with its own outside entry. These stipulations excepted, the house, rather like a Pinter play, started with no conclusions but became what it is as its plan went freely on its logical way—providing the practicalities of living space as it solved the problems of this most irregular 30-percent grade. Swerving around precious trees, skirting boulders, preserving a long lake view, while still keeping tiny vignettes of the wild, woody glen, trapping all possible light in this leafy green shadiness, the house evolves as a two-part structure—a trapezoidal, double-story living room and a rectangular sleeping-guestroom-garage building, both linked at ground level by kitchen and dining room, the roof of which became the entry terrace. More

The plan of this present-day house in a forest appears—on a flat sheet of paper—deceptively simple. In actuality it has called for complex engineering of the structure over a variety of levels, as the photographs show, nature always taking precedence. Storage space above the garage is ready for future conversion to a guest suite.

This two-part house is split at second-story level, above, by a sandstone deck which serves as entry court to both wings of the house while it roofs kitchen and dining areas beneath. A sandstone bridge, steel banistered, spans the uneven terrain from road to house.

Trapezoid living room, nostalgically board and batten, below, is painted gray, its deep-framed door white, contrasting with the russet-brown Peruvian cypress of the bedroom-guestroom wing. To light the two-story living room, its slanting wall is slashed with three great glass panels, sky-patterned by day, subtly lit at night by exterior fixtures.

Master bedroom, left, almost walled in sliding glass, seems to float in a leafy, ever-changing sea of treetops. From here there is a view to a nearby lake and easy access to a great deck. Like giant free-form sculpture, two-sided fireplace, below, warms living and dining room, is in fact devised around a heat-circulator. Slate hearth and lighted glass shelves display favorite bibelots. In living area, plant gardens, aquarium, and banquette seating are built in under the sloping wall.

A spiral stair descends from the entrance of the lofty two-story living room, opposite. The balcony, extending the room's length, creates a cozy sense of enclosure for a seating group, while the rest of the room soars skyward, shadow-patterned and lightened by its dramatic glazing.

Flowers you never planted before

News of the flowers of tomorrow, in colors that may dazzle or soothe, now being cultivated in hybridizers' workshops the world over

By ELVIN McDONALD

This fall, for the first time ever, you can plant a peony that will unfurl satiny golden-yellow petals next spring. White formal daylily makes its debut this month, along with a snowy, frilly daffodil called Trillium. In October you can bring home a pink-and-white variegated poinsettia that will stay beautiful until spring.

Look to 1968 in your garden and envision boxes of bright, true yellow petunias on the patio, a bed of honey-scented marigolds nearby; and for color in the garden with lots of flowers to cut, three fabulous zinnias in the Burpeeana class—Senorita, an attractive coral-pink, Aztec, a glowing bright orange, and New Snowman, a pure white. For a partially shaded, moist, cool place, imagine the excitement of growing the new red and white polka-dotted tuberous begonias! These may be either red or white with contrasting spots. Other color combinations will follow soon.

By 1970 you can plant a camellia that has the pleasing fragrance of the sweet osmanthus. The flowers of Fragrant Pink are of loose peony form, dark pink, and the blooming season extends from early December to late June. Meanwhile the search continues for a yellow camellia.

In the next two years, hybrid strains of hardy garden lilies, like the smoky First Love (shown in color, opposite page) will bring a whole new range of color and vigor to the home garden. There will be the richly colored Purple Perfection, a trumpet lily, and out of breeding work with Lilium speciosum x L. auratum var. platyphyllum, has come a breathtaking new variety, as yet unnamed—the strongest growing and most beautiful lily of hundreds of thousands.

The great awakening to the spring-flowering bulbs will continue in the near future, but very soon we will be planting specially treated tulip bulbs for flowers in five weeks at practically any season. This means that the spectacular—and often elusive—colors of tulips (for example, Apricot Beauty, shown in color, opposite page) can be used in ways never before possible. We will find tulips (and also hyacinths) as cut flowers at florists' all year round. Soon there will even be tulips bred and selected specifically for gardens in the deep South.

Many of the differences in tomorrow's flowers will be subtle—a slight change in the way a petal furls, a barely perceptible change in hue that forecasts a new color for the future. The feeling today is that it is possible to achieve what would have been thought impossible only a few years ago. Gardeners in another era could dream only of pink daffodils and delphiniums, yellow peonies, and lavender roses. Now these are dreams come true, so we look forward to a pure yellow African violet, an orange gloxinia, and a blue begonia. The person who discovers that first pure-white marigold will be paid $10,000 by the W. Atlee Burpee Company.

A true blue rose is the greatest dream of all. Now even the conservatives are beginning to have hope. This year a rose of "ageratum-blue" color was introduced in England, and U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists report they are making progress toward a cornflower-blue rose.

One significant development in the area of annual flowers will be here in 1968—annual, seed-grown geraniums. Three of the eight new colors for next year have already been made All-America Selections. These geraniums come true to color, have hybrid vigor, grow compactly without topping or pinching, they are free from virus diseases, and—best of all—the flowers come in profusion.

Petunias, already so refined that it is hard to imagine anything better, are being bred for larger and larger flowers on more compact plants. Already in trial grounds there may be seen new varieties half again as large as anything presently being cultivated. Pale yellow petunias are common, a true yellow is here now, and it is safe to predict that before many seasons there will be a bright orange.

The waist-high four-o'clocks of another generation have been bred down to dwarf sizes for the gardens of tomorrow. In cultivation now, to be introduced soon, are miniatures that grow to only eight inches. In keeping with nationwide use of Daylight Saving Time, we can only guess that these up-dated varieties will be called "five-o'clocks."

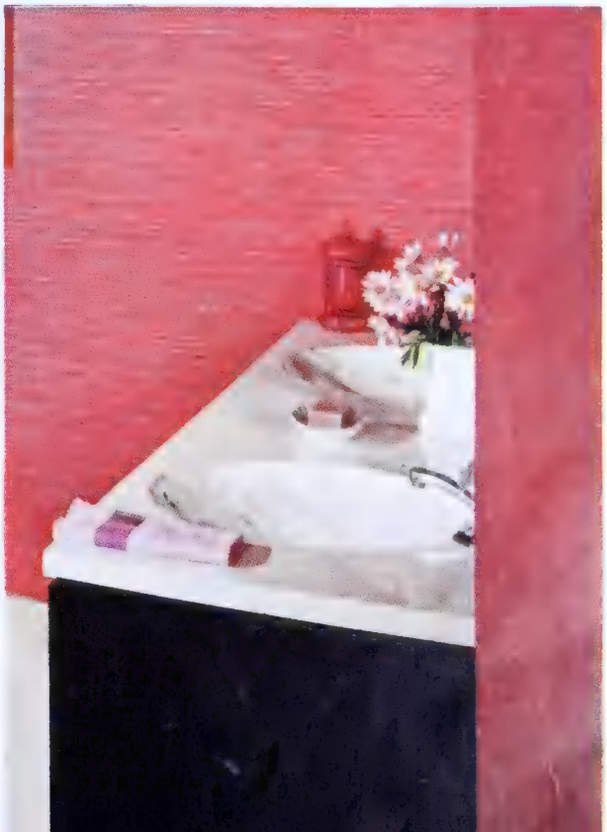
A LONG STEP AHEAD FOR BATH FIXTURES

Beautiful, and styled in a fresh way, the bathrooms opposite illustrate a new wave of fixture designs produced with man-made materials. Working with sophisticated plastics—in most cases reinforced with fiber glass—manufacturers will now be able to alter the shape, shade, or pattern of a fixture almost as easily as a cabinetmaker turns a desk leg. Until recently, style changes for fixtures came along slowly. (One reason was the high cost of making a new mold for cast-iron or vitreous china fixtures.) Basic—and important: The surfaces of these plastic materials are easy to clean, long-lasting, and highly resistant to impact. Designs and range of colors will be practically unlimited.

Direction 2000 is the appropriate name for the unique collection of plastic bathroom fixtures opposite, conceived by the staff of Associated Design Group in Salt Lake City. American Standard will have them ready for sale before the end of this year. Aside from being marvelously attractive, this bathroom is probably easier to keep clean than any yet designed. There are practically no seams. For example, the counter and bowls in the photographs at right are cast as a single unit. This is also true for the floor and toilet pedestal. Beneath the toilet cover is a standard oval seat.

Scallop-shell and diamond patterns for lavatory bowls, sketched below, are two of a number of interesting shapes available, and clearly indicate the wide flexibility of designs possible in plastics, with no loss of surface cleanability.



ALICE HIGHYAMA

Graceful oval tub, opposite left, is also formed as a single unit, available in either a five- or six-foot length. The tub is three feet deep, about four inches deeper than standard tubs, and this, combined with a gently sloping back, permits you to take a luxurious deep-water bath. All the units are available in two marble tones: white on sand, and gold on white, plus two solids: fawn biege and regency blue. In addition, there are 15 colors and five marble tones available on special order. All surfaces are satin-smooth, warm to the touch.

THE NEW FACES OF BRICK

Broad River black, treebark, Kingston Sequoyah, desert rose, French gray may sound like romantic names on tubes of oil paints, but they are really labels for some of the bricks you see on the opposite page. And what a change! A dozen years ago you could walk through a new neighborhood and expect to see three or possibly four variations in brick colors: red, buff, pink, and in some areas "antique" or used brick (like the brick immediately below the bright orange brick in the photograph). Now, as you can see, there is a rainbow of colors available. More than that—a choice of new and fascinating surface textures. And still more—a range of mortar colors that match the brick.

You'll find many of these colored and textured bricks in local building-supply yards. What you don't turn up is probably fired in a kiln less than a day's delivery from your home. (Nearly all brick is produced regionally.) And bricks that are unavailable locally or regionally can easily be shipped cross-country, if necessary.

In the past, the clay (from which the brick was made) determined its color. In each area the clay had a distinctive cast. For example, residents in Atlanta or Charleston could buy few but the red tones, since clay in Georgia and the Carolinas is red. But today, by mixing in color additives or giving the brick a sand finish, regional brick companies can turn out just about any of the unglazed shades.

Not as many kilns bake glazed brick in the bright colors seen in our photograph. Represented here are the Belden Brick Co. of Canton, Ohio, and Boren Clay Products Co. of Pleasant Garden, North Carolina. More companies may begin making it, however. Until recently, architects have selected glazed brick primarily for commercial and institutional work. But glazed brick is increasingly finding its way into homes—as a single wall of accent color in a kitchen or den; as a panel or strip of color in a bath; as a bright splash of color in an entryway. We even discovered two custom-built homes in Denver that were given an exterior veneer of off-white, glazed brick.

WESLEY BALZ

There has usually been more than one size of brick available (see photograph on page 178), and masons could always select from half a dozen or so variations of the "bond"—the pattern made by the joints when the brick is laid up. But not until recently has there been such a wide choice of colors and textures. In fact, when worked out on a computer two years ago by the brick industry, the number of separate colors, shades, and face textures amounted to more than 10,000. What this does, of course, is to give you and your architect enormous design freedom with a product that has traditionally been considered rather static. And that's all to the good.

Colored mortar has come on the scene in the last few years and makes a happy alliance with the new bricks. The mounds of powder blue, cream yellow, chocolate, and black mortar in our photograph are produced by Medusa Portland Cement Co. of Cleveland, and represent only one-tenth of the colors available. Most of these mortar shades match the popular hues in brick, ranging from pale cream through the buffs and rusts to dark browns and black. The bright pastels probably won't be stocked locally, but they'll be shipped quickly if you want them.

Textured brick and unglazed brick in colors that vary from what is normal in your area are going to cost more than so-called "common" brick (which in some regions means a structural brick used in backing up a masonry wall, and in other areas refers to the lowest-cost face brick). For example, in much of Ohio, common brick runs around $60 per 1,000, delivered to the building site. "Per 1,000" is the universally accepted way for pricing brick. One thousand brick, laid up in a wall, will cover 70 square feet. Or about 16,000 brick will completely veneer the exterior walls of a home 50′ long and 30′ wide. Also in Ohio, textured and colored, unglazed brick ranges between $100 and $125 per 1,000, while glazed bricks can go as high as $225.

Taking the 30′-by-50′ house as an example, the difference between using common face brick (Continued on page 177)

TODAY IN INDUSTRY, TOMORROW AT HOME

Industrial construction is the proving ground for many of the new materials and methods that will soon make (or have already made) the transition from industry to home building. Here's a preview of what you can expect in the years ahead.

By JOHN H. INGERSOLL

LAWRENCE S. WILLIAMS, INC.

Reflection of the surrounding countryside on the glass façade of this newest Monsanto building in St. Louis is significant beyond being merely pretty. Glass, called Reflectovue, and made by Pittsburgh Plate Glass, turns away 70 percent of the sun's heat and glare. An office worker seated near the window is as comfortable as someone located away from the glass. This product definitely appears to be headed for the private-home market.

Roofing is punished by weather more severely than any other part of a structure—office or house. Moreover, new architectural shapes, such as the roof of the Famous-Barr department store in St. Louis, above, call for more flexible, adaptable materials. One that has proved remarkably weather-resistant covers this roof. The membrane is T/NA 200, a Ruberoid product, sheathed with Tedlar, a polyvinyl fluoride film developed by DuPont.

Most of the remarkable new products that will build the house of 1977 and 1987 are already in use. Not in homes, but in schools, restaurants, industrial plants, and high-rise structures. For it is in commercial building that most new materials for the home begin life.

Consider kitchen linoleum. The original material was a dark, heavy-gauge floor covering for plants, offices and laboratories. Then a way to add color was discovered, and soon thereafter linoleum became a covering for residential floors.

Or think of plastic laminate countertops. In 1913, this now ubiquitous material was being produced by a new company (Formica) as insulation for electric motors. Products that have more recently bridged the gap between industry and home include plastic pipe and epoxy paints and adhesives.

What, then, is waiting for us next year? Or two decades ahead? While no one can be sure, we can make educated guesses by examining today's industrial and commercial products.

A plastic-enclosed environment for house and grounds is on its way. Like huge, transparent cocoons, domed structures with acrylic canopies are already making this possible for commercial greenhouses, public (and private) swimming pools, dealer showrooms, and, most outstandingly, the United States Pavilion at Expo 67. Acrylic is no stranger to homeowners, of course. It is commonly the material for "bubble" skylights, installed often over an interior bath or kitchen. Below, you see the application of a domed, acrylic skylight expanded somewhat—in the form of a 9½'-diameter cover for a center well in a Kansas City, Missouri, home. But the concept of doming over one's entire property to maintain a constantly enjoyable temperature and humidity level beneath it may well be next.

When house roofs become as free-form as sand dunes, plastics will cover them. They will because, just as the word plastics implies, these materials are more flexible, more adaptable to unusual shapes than conventional roof materials. And most of these new man-made roof covers last longer. Essentially, that's why commercial building owners are willing to pay the premium for plastic (it is definitely more expensive). These businessmen are often more concerned with the cost of maintenance than with first cost, and that's where durable plastics pay off.

Typical is the smooth, curved roof (photograph, opposite page). The white surface cuts down on heat by reflecting the sun, fades very little, and is even resistant to chemical attack. Also being applied today to non-residential roofs: butyls, liquid vinyls, liquid urethanes, DuPont's Neoprene/Hypalon, and GE's silicone rubber compound.

These materials have been applied to conventionally shaped roofs, but not too many, since low-cost shingles perfectly suit the simple, pitched roof. But we think curved residential roofs are coming. From a structural standpoint, the dome has always made more sense than the pitched roof.

There will be more glass in tomorrow's home. The glass-clad skyscrapers in our cities have taught us that we can enjoy a full view of the scenery without (Continued on page 182)

Tree-limb veining against a winter sky seems almost within reach above the center well in this contemporary Kansas City home. But the owner is completely protected from cold and snow. In the opening is a semispherical, acrylic cover, 9½' in diameter. A Plexiglas dome by Rohm & Haas, it is an ideal example of a product's transition from industry to home. As you may recall, Plexiglas formed the protective "bubble" over the gun positions in the World War II "Flying Fortresses." Today, acrylic skylights are commonplace, and the material is increasingly used as a canopy over pools and greenhouses, may soon cover your house—or your town.

NEW STARS ON THE KITCHEN STAGE

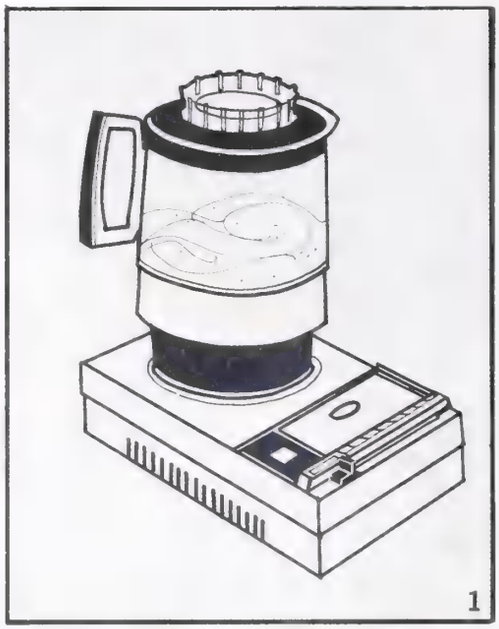
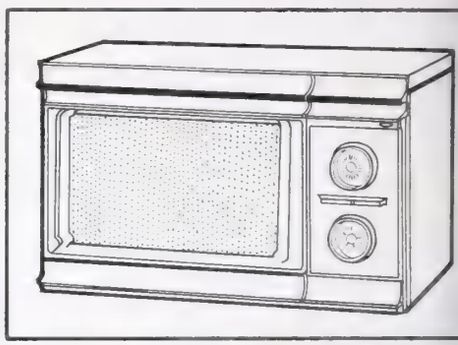
TODAY'S BIG FEATURES

1. "Cookbook Blender," in gleaming chrome with wood-grain accents, has the wonderful efficiency of the future with an "auto-spatula" that stirs, as part of the blender operation. By Hamilton Beach. About $60.

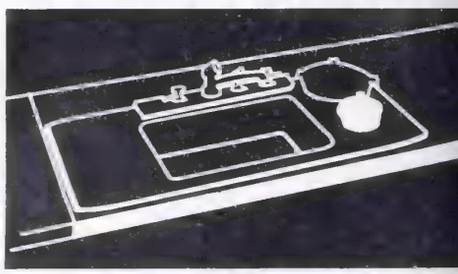
2. Ice water is instantly available with this under-sink unit that may be connected to a separate faucet or the regular cold-water line. Elkay. About $225.



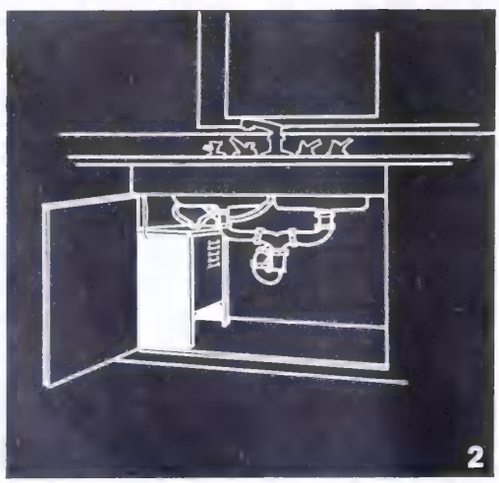
3. Warming shelf of tempered glass with embedded electric elements is part of this 30-inch "Gallery" range by Tappan. It keeps hot foods at serving temperature and makes a great spot for heating plates. About $290.



4. The wonders and speed of electronic cooking can be had in the portable "Radarange," by Amana. It plugs into the standard 110-120-volt house current, measures 23" by 15" by 17". Available this fall. About $450.



5. "Cuisine Décor," a stainless-steel sink, has a high-rise ceramic faucet deck in silver mist with gold trim. All faucets and fittings are above the splash zone to stay clean. There is a wide choice of models, including conventional sinks, corner sinks, and sinks with stainless-steel aprons or drainboards. A hardwood cutting board and vinyl-covered vegetable-rinsing basket are included. By Elkay. Prices range from about $180 to $240.



6. "Citrus Juicer" by Braun extracts juice equally well from a large grapefruit or a small lime with no squeezing effort. When fruit is held on the cone, the juicer turns on. Available by October. About $30.

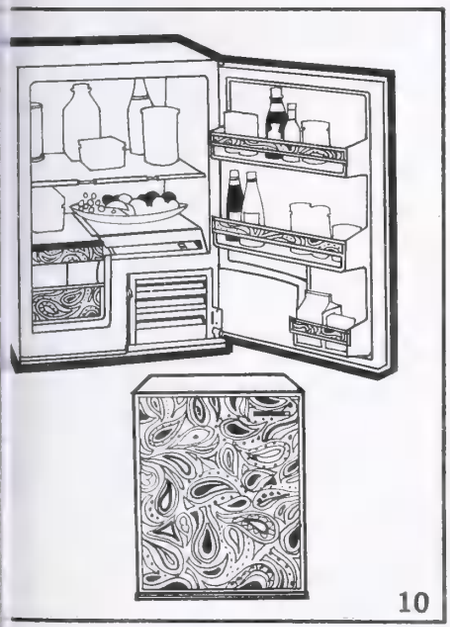
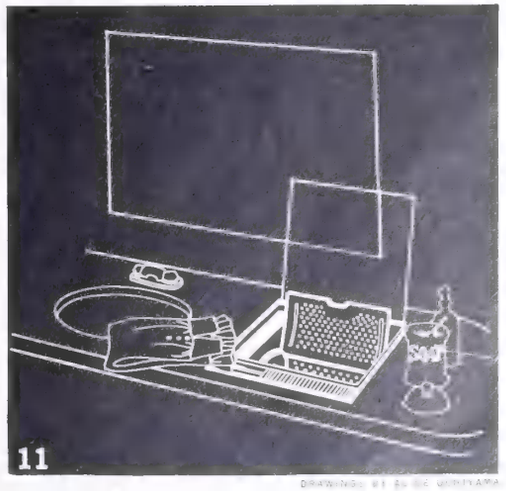
COMING ATTRACTIONS

Special preview from Kelvinator of an exciting experimental program of appliances, "Intro 70," for possible 1970 introduction.



7. Everything's under control with the "Electro-Sonic Service Core." There's closed-circuit television, a food disposer, and a one-at-a-time dish-cleaning device. For full loads, a conventional dishwasher. When not in use, cutting board covers all mechanical details.

8. The "Art Galley" food-keeper has swing-out shelves for fresh and frozen foods, with horizontal storage and work shelf above, all protected, when open, by an air-wall. Alongside, a wine cooler. Closed, the units are hidden by a wall of textured cork.



9. "Gourmet Cooking Center" will allow you to cook even a company dinner effortlessly. Control panel will switch a refrigerated roast to electric-oven cooking, and turn it off when done. Other marvels: a separate electronic oven that will bake frozen food in minutes; a vented charcoal grill; four glass cooktop elements and two standard copper ones.

10. All-plastic molded refrigerator permits use of any pattern or texture—wood-grain, alligator, or the paisley shown. The under-counter model is lighter than its present-day counterparts. Other sizes will be available.

11. The "Personal Laundette" will make it easy to wash and dry the smallest of loads in bath or dressing room. As free and breezy as the future itself, it may be used as either a portable or a built-in.

FOODS FOR TOMORROW

from the new American larder

By HELEN McCULLY

The new American larder. A far cry even from the generous bounty available 20 years ago. To find out what's new in it now—and what's coming—House Beautiful talked to food producers from one end of the country to the other. We mixed the mixes, boiled the bags, squeezed the tubes, cut the boxes. We unfroze the frozen. Hydrated the dehydrated. We found out that American ingenuity was alive and well—flourishing in the test kitchens of dozens of manufacturers. The difficult-to-cook is now instant, and the impossible takes only a few minutes longer. But more than that, we found that many of the new foods have a foreign accent, appealing to new tastes acquired in our travels. And we found that calorie-counting continued to be one of the games people play, with industry finding new ways to join the game. Here's a quick summary of the new foods and drinks on, or coming on, the market.*

* Not all products are nationally distributed. Some are regional, some in test markets. Our sources of information, beyond the producers' shared secrets, included New Products Digest, Progressive Grocer, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Gorton of Gloucester's Swordfish in Lemon Butter, Scallops in Lemon Butter, Filet of Sole in Lemon Butter, Fish Sticks in Pizza Sauce with Cheese, frozen, ready to cook, are all new. Taking a leaf from the English, Red L has just introduced frozen Fish & Chips. Soon, Crest Eastern Corporation will introduce Maripac Frozen Whole Lobsters, from the cold waters of Nova Scotia. Currently, Crest African Rock Lobster Tails, small, white, very tender, imported from Mozambique, are new in the market. Frozen Icelandic Lobster Tails in pound packages are available for the first time. Sau-Sea now puts out Clam Cocktail and King Crabmeat.

Fruits, preserves, condiments, and oddments

Ratcliffe Bros., Ltd., is sending us, from England, a new marmalade, Ratcliffe's Honey Marmalade. The House of Lawrence now has available three unusual products: Hawaiian Luau, Marinated Eggplant Salad, and Marinated Artichoke Salad. The new Baker Lekvar Prune Butter ("lekvar" means filling) can be used as a spread or as a filling when puréed prunes are called for. Sunsweet Cooked Pitted Prunes, packed by Duffy-Mott, are new, too. Mott's, aware of the calorie problem, has brought forth Artificially Sweetened Strawberry Preserves (three calories a teaspoon). Birds Eye Fruits Continental, frozen, in pouches, new and interesting, are as follows: Sélecte Strawberries, Cherries Suprême, and Peach Combinâge. Instant Apple Flakes come from Valley Evaporating and Ermey Vineyards.

Vegetable preparation cut to the core

New in the vegetable world: General Foods is marketing Birds Eye Deluxe Vegetables (baby broccoli spears, baby peas, sweet white corn, whole mushrooms), all frozen in blocks. Green Giant follows right along with frozen vegetables in sauces (both broccoli and cauliflower in cheese sauces, green beans in mushroom sauce, onions and spinach in cream sauces, shoe-peg corn in butter sauce), all in cooking pouches. Also from Green Giant, canned baby whole sweet potatoes in syrup. Cohen's Potato Dumplings (kosher) are also new, as are Golden Potato Pancakes. French's Country Style Mashed Potatoes (flakes that call for liquid only to reconstitute) are brand-new. Also, French's Scalloped Potatoes, Potatoes au gratin and Potatoes Orleans, all in foil pans. Just add liquid and bake. Pillsbury's new Sour Cream Mashed Potatoes Mix comes in four versions: Topped with almonds, combined with bleu cheese, topped with Cheddar cheese, combined with herbs. Mrs. Paul's frozen Eggplant and Zucchini Parmesan are both ready to heat and serve.

As for rice, from Holland a first: Wesson Dutch Mill Rice in cooking bags, and from Italy under the Knorr label, instant Risotto (with saffron, with tomatoes, with mushrooms, or with peas). French's steps into the rice picture with French's Instant Rice (beef or chicken flavor, fried, and Spanish). Spice Islands' Curry Seasoning for Rice, Herb Seasoning for Rice, Chicken Seasoning for Rice, and Spanish Seasoning for Rice simplify flavoring rice.

Jalapeño Bean Dip, Refried Beans with Bacon, Tomatoes with Green Chilies, and Sliced Jalapeño Peppers are all new in the Patio Foods line of Mexican foods. Ortega, a new member of the Heublein family, packs these Mexican foods: Green Chile Salsa, Hot Peppers, Whole Chiles, Tacos Sauce, Whole Pimientos, and Snap-E-Tom

The shape of the "birds" you eat is up to you Today, chickens and turkeys are available in every conceivable form. Witness: Best Foods' Cacklebirds, a new frozen line of Grade-A birds that includes roasters, unstuffed; ready-to-cook stuffed breasts (four varieties based on French recipes with compatible sauces); rock Cornish game hens; and capons. From Texas, frozen Plantation Beauty Young Turkey Breasts and Young Turkey Wings processed by Plantation Foods. Armour's frozen turkeys, injected with butter, eliminating basting. Also Armour's frozen Star Boneless Turkey Roast, all white meat or mixed light and dark. Swift's Butterball Premium Turkeys, ready to cook, are available frozen with an old-fashioned stuffing; and their two-pound boneless Butter Basted Swift's Premium Turkey Roast with pats of butter inserted between the skin and meat. For dark-meat turkey lovers, Shenandoah is first to introduce Shenandoah Fully Cooked Boneless Turkey Rolls, all dark meat, frozen, weighing two pounds. Stouffer's frozen Chicken Pies and Turkey Pies, in real cream sauce.

No need now even to make your own stuffing. Pepperidge Farm's new Cubed Stuffing is seasoned and ready to tuck into the bird. And General Foods takes more of the work out of work with its Good Seasons Shake 'N Bake Seasoned Coating Mix for chicken or fish. Mazola Tasty Fry, also a seasoned coating mix, is good with chicken, veal, pork chops.

Sauces: ready to serve, ready to mix

New, meaning "not existing before," is what Pet says about its canned sauces developed especially to cook with meat. Called Compliment, the sauces are for meat loaf, casseroles, chicken, Swiss steak, and pork chops.

Patio Foods includes among its Mexican sauces the following new members: Taco Sauce, Enchilada Sauce, Salsa Ranchero. Kraft Foods has recently introduced nine sauce and gravy mixes: Spaghetti Sauce Mix, Cheddar Cheese Sauce Mix, Brown Gravy Mix, Hollandaise Sauce Mix, Barbecue Sauce Mix, White Sauce Mix, Onion Gravy Mix, Sour Cream Sauce Mix, Chicken Gravy Mix. Just add liquid. Cresca is importing three Knorr-Swiss Dehydrated Sauces: Mushroom Sauce, Bolognese Sauce, and Hunter Sauce. New on the market: McCormick's Beef Stroganoff Sauce Mix and Sloppy Joes Seasoning Mix. Spice Islands is right there with its Spaghetti Sauce Mix, added to a basic tomato sauce. Lawry's has Goulash Seasoning Mix and Meat Loaf Seasoning Mix. Milani's gives us Spaghetti Sauce Mix with Mushrooms.

Soups—hot, cold, and foreign

La Choy, makers of Chinese foods, is introducing two new soups—Won Ton Soup and Egg Drop Soup. Campbell's has recently added a Golden Mushroom Soup and a Chicken Condensed Soup. Pepperidge Farm has two new cold soups—Consommé Madrilène and Vichyssoise—and Crosse & Blackwell has two new hot ones—Petite Marmite and Tuna Creole. Howard Johnson's introduces a new Manhattan Clam Chowder, a Chalet Suzanne and a Cream of Gazpacho. Milani's new powdered bouillons, instantly soluble, include: Consommé Bouillon, Chicken Consommé, and French Onion Consommé.

Spread it thick or thin

Riding a popularity trend, Shedd-Bartush Foods, Inc., has ingeniously swirled peanut butter with jelly to make Shedd's Peanut Butter 'N Jelly, thus saving mothers from opening two jars. Kraft, on the other hand, has combined clover honey and butter to make Kraft Cinnamon Honey Butter, a hot-toast spread. They've also stuck to their last by introducing Cracker Barrel Stixpaks, aged natural Cheddar cheese, five two-ounce sticks (mild, mellow, two sharp, extra sharp). Lever Brothers Company, with its eye on weight watchers, has introduced a new soft margarine, Diet Imperial. National Biscuit, with its eye on biscuits, has put pasteurized process cheese spreads called Snack Mates (Cheddar, pimiento, American) in pressurized cans—the spreading is done without any pressure on the cracker. Cresca has conceived Cresca's Complete Dips (onion, garlic, bleu cheese, bar-b-q) which call only for milk or water to turn them into "dippable" form.

"Noshers" are in luck Keebler has a whole raft of noshing fare that includes: Cheese Toast and Potato Piffles, Sesame Sillys and Caraway Crazys. Not to be outdone, Pepperidge Farm puts its money on Tomato & Cheese Goldfish Dippers, Cheddar Cheese Goldfish Dippers, and Lightly Salted Goldfish Dippers. Pillsbury's Munchums, toaster fare, with various fillings, are all-purpose snacks. Their refrigerated Hot Snacks (cheese, onion, and Italiano flavors) can bake while the cocktails are mixed. Quinlan is first with Frozen Instant-Toasting Soft Pretzels. Patio Nachos (corn chips with cheese and jalapeño pepper) come frozen, ready to toast. More new foods, page 183

THE NEW CHEMICALS MAKE THE GARDEN BEHAVE

By STANLEY SCHULER

Author of the forthcoming book, "America's Great Private Gardens."

Ever since man began to cultivate the earth, chemicals of one kind or another have been a mainstay of the gardener. Now they promise to eliminate—or at least minimize—the chores of weeding, pruning, disbudding, lawn edging, and watering.

Clearly, we are in the midst of a horticultural revolution. Why, then, haven't we heard more about it?

The answer is that, while chemicals that control plant growth are not new, most have been restricted to the agricultural and commercial world. Today, more and more of these growth regulators are reaching the garden stores. Here are the important specific chemicals, or groups of chemicals, that you will be hearing more about:

To inhibit plant growth. The proper name is maleic hydrazide, but this chemical growth regulator is more commonly known as MH. Developed by UniRoyal, Inc., in 1947, it sells in huge volume to highway departments, electrical utilities, parks, airports, golf courses, and tobacco growers; but the only way the homeowner can get it is to ask a garden store to place a special order.

MH is a harmless translocated chemical that halts cell division in grass, trees, shrubs, and vines but does not interfere with cell expansion. This means that while it slows the elongation of grass blades and woody branches, foliage continues to grow thick and lush.

Plants that can be controlled with MH include well-established, three-year-old grasses (except St. Augustine grass) and nonblooming trees, shrubs, vines, and woody ground covers. (Used on flowering plants, the chemical inhibits bloom as well as growth.) The response of plants varies according to kind. Conifers generally show the least reaction.

Treatment is made by diluting MH, which is a liquid, in water and spraying the solution on plants. This needs to be done when a twelve-hour dry period is anticipated and when plants are growing vigorously. As a rule, spring treatment is recommended, although northern grasses can be sprayed in the fall.

Because MH does not inhibit the growth of all grasses to the same degree, treated grass may have a hummocky effect; and for this reason you should not use the chemical on lawns except to keep the grass short and neat in a narrow strip around the edges. But for meadows, orchards, and other rough-grass areas, the chemical is excellent. If these are sprayed in the spring when the grass is two to four inches tall, the grass will not exceed a height of six to twelve inches by the end of the fall and will not need to be mowed more than once, if that. For a few weeks after the grass is sprayed, it turns slightly yellow, but it recovers completely.

When woody plants are treated with MH, they should first be pruned to the proper shape and slightly less than the desired size. The spray is applied a week or two later, when the leaves have expanded and the stems have put on a couple of inches of new growth. Hedges managed in this way remain trim and compact for the rest of the year and do not require clipping except to eliminate occasional long shoots which the spray did not reach.

Since it is necessary to hit a branch with MH in order to keep it from growing, you can control the growth either for an entire tree or shrub or any part of it. For example, you can discourage a tree from growing upward by spraying the top; or you can keep it from growing outward by spraying the sides. Whatever your objective, the spray must penetrate deep into the plant in order to prevent inside shoots from growing out through the inhibited outer branches.

To retard growth of flowering plants. Three regulating chemicals known as "growth retardants" may be used to limit stem elongation between the internodes. This produces more compact, bushier plants, which require less pruning. Flowering is stimulated.

Our sterling owes its smoothness to an island volcano and Kenneth Glenn.

Every year we import a ton and a half of pumice from the volcanic islands around Pompeii.

Pumice has been polishing things for centuries. It works beautifully on sterling. But for us it's only a start.

We're not satisfied unless Kenneth Glenn does the finishing.

He uses a special buffing wheel made of 64 polishing cloths. 35 large. 29 small.

First he works each piece of sterling against the large cloths. Along handles. Around spoon bowls. Up and down fork tines.

Then he works each piece against cloths so small they can reach into curves. Around swirls. Even in between petals.

When Kenneth Glenn gets through, every inch of our sterling is glass-smooth.

Even in corners your fingers never touch.

Only then are we satisfied.

Only then is sterling worthy of our "IS" maker's mark.

You'll find that mark with the patterns you see here. And you can take advantage of special savings over open stock prices when you buy a basic service for 4, 8 or 12.

NEW CHEMICALS MAKE THE GARDEN BEHAVE

Mobil Chemical Company, is the only one of the chemicals that is now in garden stores. It is used primarily on chrysanthemums.

Cycocel, by the American Cyanamid Co., is widely used by commercial growers to produce the handsome, stocky poinsettias and azaleas that have replaced the taller, more open specimens of yesteryear. It can be used in the same way by home gardeners.

B-Nine, from UniRoyal, can be used to limit the size of almost all flowering shrubs and trees, and at the same time to improve flowering. It also produces stockier annuals and perennials. A valuable side effect of the chemical is its tendency to increase drought resistance in plants.

Like MH, B-Nine is a liquid which is diluted and applied as a spray on a dry day in spring. Woody plants are sprayed after they have been pruned and when new growth is well started. A single application is sufficient. Perennials are treated a month or two after they start growing, and repeat applications may be made up to a month before flowers form. Annuals are sprayed just as the tops of the seedlings begin to stretch rapidly. They, too, can be treated once or twice after that, if necessary.

To disbud plants. Disbudding is a job familiar to all gardeners. Its purpose is to promote the growth of side branches while preventing undesirable top growth.

Now USDA scientists have found that efficient disbudding can be done with chemicals and at a great saving of the gardener's time. The chemicals cause the terminal buds to turn brown and die but do not damage the important side or lateral buds. About two out of three kinds of plants respond to treatment. Included among them are annuals, perennials, vegetables, semi-woody plants such as hydrangeas, and woody plants ranging from azaleas to weigelas.

Conversely, Department of Agriculture scientists have now found that a naphthalene-base oil in emulsion form, sprayed on chrysanthemum plants after the terminal buds are completely formed, causes partly formed lateral buds to stop development. Because of the way the plant grows, the terminal bud forms first and is not affected by the oil if it is applied at the proper time. Big showy chrysanthemums result, the same as if the lateral buds had been removed by hand.

To control transpiration. Several chemicals under study at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station in New Haven are used to reduce the amount of moisture that plants give off through their leaves. These are called anti-transpirants, or sometimes anti-desiccants. Their net effect is to slow the rate at which plant roots take up moisture out of the soil, thus conserving water.

Anti-transpirants are not new, of course. Liquid plastics are also used to retard transpiration, and they generally perform well. But the amount of plastic required to coat the stomata on the undersides of all leaves of a plant is so great that the use of such material is economically limited to selected trees and shrubs.

The new chemicals give much more extensive coverage. This means that when they are perfected, it will be feasible to reduce the water consumption of plants throughout your entire garden. This will help not only to protect the plants against drought but also to reduce watering chores and the water bill.

A bevy of potent weed killers. Selective herbicides—chemicals that kill certain kinds of weeds without damaging desirable plants alongside—have been in widespread use in gardens since the advent of 2,4-D. The most recent to attract attention were the pre-emergence and post-emergence crabgrass killers. Now there are herbicides designed primarily to control weeds in flower, vegetable, or fruit gardens, shrubbery borders, areas of ground cover, and around trees.

Five problems in the use of these new weed killers have discouraged their general promotion: (1) None is safe to use indiscriminately around all kinds of plants. (2) Relatively few are safe to use around edible plants. (3) All must be applied in precisely measured quantities. (4) Just as there is danger that a 2,4-D spray may drift in the wind and kill desirable plants, so there is danger that when a new pre-emergence chemical is sprayed or dusted on the soil, it will be carried to another part of the garden by rainwater. (5) Some of the chemicals build up a long-lasting residue in the soil. This may kill the plants that are next planted in a treated area.

Despite these difficulties, six of the new weed killers are now in garden stores. (One has been available for several years; the others are recently arrived and are not available everywhere.)

DCPA, or Dacthal, a product of the Diamond Alkali Co., came to light several years ago as an outstanding crabgrass killer for lawns. Testing has since proved it effective against other undesirable annual grasses and a few annual broadleaf weeds, and safe to use around many herbaceous and woody plants and some newly seeded or planted annuals and perennials. Limited use in vegetable gardens is also permitted if the herbicide is not mixed with chlordane or 2,4-D (as it sometimes is). The only drawback of DCPA is that its effect is short-lived; therefore, it needs to be applied frequently.

Amiben, produced by Amchem Products, Inc., was developed to control weeds in soybean fields. It now has government approval for use on lima beans, pumpkins, squash, tomatoes, peppers, seedling asparagus, and assorted annuals, perennials, shrubs, and trees. It kills a dozen kinds of small-seeded annual grasses and broadleaf weeds.

Trifluralin, brand-named Treflan by Elanco Products Co., is recommended for the control of crabgrass, goosegrass, barnyard grass, annual bluegrass, stinkgrass, foxtail, carpetweed, chickweed, knotweed, pigweed, lamb's-quarters, and purslane around roses, many shrubs and trees, and flowers two to three inches high. Elanco specifically warns against the chemical's use on ground covers. For continued weed control, a second application should be made six weeks after the first.

Bensulide, or Betasan, and EPTC, or Eptam, are products of the Stauffer Chemical Company. Bensulide is used to keep crabgrass from getting started in lawns, and also controls seven other common weeds around flowers, shrubs, trees, and ground covers. EPTC is effective against weeds in flowers, ground covers, and around large woody plants.

Dichlobenil, or Casoron, produced by the Thompson-Hayward Chemical Co., controls annual weeds and grasses around roses and most popular evergreen and deciduous shrubs and trees.

The label on a typical herbicide package is detailed and complex, filled with advice and warnings. Explicit instructions help to assure proper application of these weed killers, but further ways to simplify their use are under development. The resulting products are expected to reach the market within the next few years. Most promising are several clothlike materials developed by Dr. L. L. Danielson, of the USDA, and a black or translucent, plasticlike material developed by the Baldwin-Montrose Chemical Co. In all cases, the material is evenly impregnated with carefully measured amounts of herbicide. All the gardener does is spread the material on the ground that requires weeding and then wait for rain. The material disintegrates within a week or two, leaving the herbicide in the soil underneath.

"These materials were developed specifically with the home gardener in mind," Dr. Danielson says. "They minimize the possibility of overtreatment. The chance of ingestion by humans and animals is lessened. And spray drift hazards are eliminated." ■ and a rugged, dark-textured brick would mean a difference in price of only $700 to $900. When spread out over the life of, say, a $25,000 mortgage, the extra cost practically disappears.

Moreover, prices vary enormously over the country. Consider the same three categories in central Texas. There, common brick costs about $39; textured and colored unglazed from $60 to $80; and glazed brick from $145 to $160. Why such a price gap between Ohio and Texas? As we mentioned above, brick is a regionally manufactured product, and its price is controlled by the cost of local labor and locally mined raw materials. The prices of brick in your community will probably not be higher than the Ohio costs or much lower than the figures in Texas, but the spread between prices for common brick and the newer materials will be about the same, proportionately, everywhere.

Brick has always enjoyed a

reputation for durability. Fired under today's methods, brick walls easily outlast the house you build. Even the sun-baked brick of ancient civilizations was amazingly long-lasting. On exhibit in the Museum of the General Shale Corp., in Johnson City, Tennessee, is a brick taken from a Neolithic settlement beneath the biblical city of Jericho—complete with the thumbprint of its maker and over 9,000 years old.

Be cautious, however, about buying genuinely old brick to reuse as siding for your home. The lighter shades, tending toward salmon or pink, often denote an underfired brick that was used originally within a wall, as a back-up brick. When exposed to the weather, this unit may crumble after a time. The cure: Begin by buying new "old" brick. Kilns now manufacture hard-burned, long-lasting brick with exactly the surface appearance of the 40- or 50-year-old product.

Is it all right to paint brick? Technically, yes. Use a latex paint, some of which is labeled especially for use on masonry. (And in recent years it's become fashionable to buy plain brick and paint it.) There is still, however, a sizable fraternity of designers who frown on the notion of covering up the natural appearance of brick. Moreover, unless you paint the brick yourself, you aren't going to save money over buying colored brick. The cost of labor for painting will wash away your savings. And one more point: While brick itself needs no maintenance at all (the mortar joints may occasionally require "pointing", or filling), painted brick must be repainted.

Have swimming pools been built of brick? Thousands. For the mason, it's no trick at all. He can build a square, rectangular, round or completely free-form pool of brick, with a rounded brick coping and a brick terrace. Even the plain, rectangular pool looks striking when done in brick. It's remarkable that we don't see more brick pools, particularly when you consider that a properly reinforced, double-wall brick pool costs less in most areas of the country than gunite or poured-concrete pools. Having the job done by a single contractor may be difficult in some areas of the country. Not all brick masons are geared to build a pool completely—that is, with pumps, filters, drains, underwater lights, diving boards, and covers. The picture is changing, however. In the Carolinas, especially, masons are becoming full-fledged pool contractors. Where this isn't so, you could ask the mason to be a general contractor or hire a general contractor to take over.

Are there any problems with brick paving? Outside your house, only when the base is poorly prepared or an interior quality of brick is used. In any region where there is alternate freezing and thawing in the winter, you must specify SW (severe weathering) brick. Then this brick will have to be set over a base that is well drained and firm. A sand bed is practical and popular in any climate. A mortar bed ought to be reinforced in any locale north of the 40th parallel.

There's no need to seal the surface of brick paving used outdoors. Rain, sun, and abrasive wear will clean away dirt and most stains. Whatever soiling that remains can be removed with a stiff brush and a strong detergent or scouring powder. Even an unusual stain—spilled paint, for example—can generally be wire-brushed away.

Since brick used as flooring indoors isn't exposed to natural weathering, you may wish to apply a masonry sealer, or a thinned coat of low-solid content wax. Brick can be laid indoors over a concrete slab or a well-reinforced wood-joist floor. Many people prefer to put down a mortarless brick floor more easily done inside than out-of-doors. But it's just as possible to put the brick down in a conventional mortar bed.

Are homes built today wit solid brick walls? Yes, especiall in the Southwest. They go u with either a 5½″-thick, structu al brick (photograph on th page), or with two rows of maso ry and a solid insulation fill b tween, known as a cavity wall.

However, the vast majority what we call brick homes a really wood-framed, covered wi insulating sheathing and a "v neer" of standard four-inch-thic brick, or thin, Nailon brick (also shown in the photograph this page). Brick veneer provide your house with the same lon lasting, extremely low-maint nance exterior surface as a soli brick wall. The solid wall specified where brick has a co advantage over other materials

What's up ahead? If the cu rent excitement over new bric colors, textures, and sizes is an indication, brick will be used homes well into the 21st Centur In short, the oldest of man-mad materials has turned modern.

NEW STARS ON THE KITCHEN SCENE

Only the surface of a miracle world of appliances has been scratched. What seems like tomorrow's dream is today's fact:

Cooking equipment

- Jenn Air has a compact 30" electric countertop that is unique in its combination of two heating elements, a barbecue grill, and a ventilating system at the center that ducts down and out of doors, eliminating the need for a hood. Cooking odors and fumes are quickly dispelled.
- Thermador has just introduced the first self-cleaning ovens that have gasketless, self-sealing doors of black glass.

Refrigerators and freezers

- Frigidaire's solid-state control refrigerator-freezer has three separate zones of cooling: a freezer with automatic icemaker, the usual dry-cold cooling, and a third section where humidity and temperature are precisely controlled. Here, uncovered, unwrapped foods, and leftovers can be stored without transfer of flavor or odor.
- Three-door refrigerator-freezers are new. One from Sears has a compartment that converts from refrigerator to freezer and back again with a temperature variation of 29 to 41 degrees.
- A Montgomery Ward model has a separate compartment for the automatic icemaker so the entire freezer isn't exposed to warm air every time you want an ice cube (See page 45).

Portable mixers

- Latest innovation is a Hamilton Beach mixer that comes with its own well-designed storage case, to be wall-hung or rest on the counter.
- Did you know that nylon beaters are available to fit most portable mixers? They will not damage even Teflon-lined utensils. By Club Aluminum.

Blenders

- New solid-state blenders provide more uniform speed than ever before. Westinghouse has a pushbutton model.
- Oster's Cyclomatic unit may be set to any desired speed and will cycle on and off automatically to prevent overblending.
- Rival's newest model is completely automatic, with two controls that permit you to dial its speed and time to the exact second.

Other portables

- Knapp-Monarch's Gold Crown collection includes a handsome Trimline toaster only 2½ inches in depth.
- Salton's HoTray, that marvelous aid to entertaining, has been updated with colorful domes of heat-retaining fabric.

Cookware

- Revere's new line for gourmets who like to cook is called "Paul Revere Limited Edition." The pans are classic in design and have the timeless appeal of the old French copper with the advantage of stainless-steel linings instead of tin. Their new "Neptune" line of stainless steel with porcelainized knobs is handsome enough for dining-table use.
- The new Colony House porcelain-finish line by Enterprise comes in bright apple green with a thermofused Teflon lining that metal can't harm.
- Descoware has some handsome new porcelainized cast iron in antique gold with white lining and white ceramic handles.

Floor care

- Hoover's new "Floor-A-Matic" floor conditioner is a versatile and efficient mechanical servant. It dispenses cleaning solution, power scrubs the floor, and picks up its own scrub water. It can apply wax and polish hard-surface floors, shampoo carpets, and even damp-mop floors.

Miscellany

- A new concept in kitchen work surfaces is Corning's Counter Saver, a material of the Pyroceram family. It may be used in an entire section of counter or as an insert, providing a cool satiny-white nonstick surface for dough or pastry-making, a place for hot pans, and an area for cutting or carving. You can't harm it, and it's easy to clean.
- A new look for kitchens comes with Tappan designer-cabinets. Doors have panels that can be turned about for a change of color scheme or design. In addition to stock decorator panels, those of your own choice may be substituted, using anything from plastic laminate that matches a counter to fabric or grill inserts.
- A tiny Wine Thermometer by Gaydell can tell you when the wine you select is at proper serving temperature—"cellar" or "room." Wine chart is included. ■ introduced a few years ago. Hybridizers continue intensive work in this field. Now there are kinds and colors at every height—beginning at five inches, up to three feet. The classic snapdragon shape has been changed into several others, the most attractive being the open face, or trumpet shape, such as Bright Butterflies.

The hardy perennial flowers are best represented by the daylily or hemerocallis. No other flower performs so well in gardens everywhere. Recent years have brought lovely pink, red, and lavender hues to join the molasses and sulphur colors of yesteryear. The elusive pure white is almost here—and probably will be introduced by 1970. A true-blue day lily is the next goal, achievement predicted in ten years.

A fire-engine red, tall, bearded iris has been sought for many years, and a leading hybridizer is so close that he predicts The Red will bloom next year in his seedling patch.

Four new ornamental shrub varieties were released to commercial growers by U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists early in 1966 and should be available to homeowners by 1968 or 1969.

The new viburnums are called Mohawk and Cayuga. They adapt well to areas as far north as Ithaca, New York. Both have abundant early flowering and are resistant to bacterial leaf spot and powdery mildew.

Shawnee, the new pyracantha, was developed to combine the desirable characteristics of several varieties. It produces glossy, clear-yellow to light-orange fruit as early as August, and maintains this color until midwinter. The plant is resistant to both scab and fire blight.

Vulcan, the new hibiscus, is a semitropical shrub with heavy, leathery red flowers. The brilliant red petals have ruffled edges with gold undersides. Vulcan is more resistant to insects than many other hibiscus varieties.

Two new Chinese chestnuts, Crane and Orrin, are on the scene now for the first time. Both of these chestnut varieties are immune to the blight which destroyed the American chestnut a number of years ago. The new Chinese chestnuts make wonderful yard trees. They grow to 15 feet, display dark-green, shiny leaves in summer, and produce large mahogany-colored nuts in September. Plant breeders at the Department of Agriculture's Research Center at Beltsville, Maryland, where the varieties were developed, recommend planting at least two of the trees for cross-pollination.

Hollies that produce berries without benefit of pollen (no need for accompanying males as is generally the case with hollies) will be here soon. They bear massive clusters of highly decorative berries around the year without the usual drain on the mother tree. Through breeding, new hardiness will make hollies suitable for gardens everywhere.

Our increasing interest and appreciation for good food means that there will be more gardeners growing the edibles—even if this means only a tubbed dwarf fruit tree or a potted tomato plant. There will be more dual-purpose vegetables—for example the highly ornamental but edible Dark Opal basil which has made a hit with gardeners and gourmets.

A green cauliflower is in the final stages of breeding at Michigan State University and will be ready for commercial trial soon. This variety cooks green and is done in half the time it takes to cook the white cauliflower.

The new dwarf fruit trees, a nectarine and a peach, are now eagerly anticipated. Both are true genetic dwarfs from the same series that produced the Bonanza peach several years ago. Being true dwarfs, these are distinctive because they are not artificially dwarfed by using an incompatible rootstock.

The first green-seeded lima bean of the Fordhook type has been developed and released. The new variety will be available through seed houses next year. It should be great for home gardens and is particularly valued for freezing because of its green color. It's a late lima-bean variety with compact bush and is highly resistant to downy mildew.

Parker, a new Italian type of tomato that can be miniaturized in pots, has also been developed at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Research Center. If this tomato is grown in an eight-inch container, the top of the plant will be smaller than normal because of a restricted root system but will produce a normal amount of fruit. With timely fertilization, the fruit will also be normal size.

The Parker has excellent flavor as a fresh tomato, and also when cooked or processed. It is resistant to the two major soil-borne diseases of tomatoes—fusarium and verticillium wilts. Seed is being made available to commercial growers this fall, and home gardeners can look for it next spring.

Two new blueberries have been developed to join with Bluecrop, a variety already known to growers as one of the best. Morrow is an early variety, Bluecrop comes along in midseason, and Darrow matures later. All three are good producers. The berries can reach the size of a quarter with good blue color and good flavor.

Plants for gardens indoors are being hybridized now more than ever before. Working basically with lovely natural species, the hybridizers are creating plants amenable to apartment living and fluorescent-lighted gardens.

The much sought pure-yellow African violet will doubtless appear some day, either naturally or through some remarkable new technique discovered by the breeders. In the meantime, our most important flowering house plant will be seen with bigger flowers and brighter colors.

Miniature gloxinias are offering exciting promise now. These are being bred for small size to fit contemporary indoor gardens, and to be everblooming. A full range of single and double flowers in rich reds, royal purples, pure whites, will be here soon.

The great new poinsettias provide a colorful display for at least three months, and often for six. They will withstand a much broader range of temperatures, even as low as 35 degrees F. for extended periods. It is expected that florists will begin to stock the new pinks, whites, and variegated pink-and-white plants in October, with height of bloom coming for the holidays.

While color is the most talked-about aspect of new flowers, there are profoundly important changes apparent in the world of plants, gardens, and the surrounding landscape. In the near future the magic words "low maintenance" may no longer mean an all-green garden. There will be more flow-rs in our gardens because qual-y bedding plants will be avail-ble everywhere. There will be a ider selection than ever before, roduced through automated sys-ems that will bring about better rowth in less time.

Growing mediums for plants ultivated indoors are receiving lot of attention because more nd more gardeners do not have ccess to "good topsoil." Jiffy 's, a kind of compressed peat ot on the market for the first ime this year, are about the size f a vanilla wafer. Drop one into cup of water and in three or our minutes it will be seven imes the compressed height, eady for a seed in the top.

A synthetic soil block from American Can Company, called BR-8, is already in use by com-nercial growers and will be vailable in the future from gar-len centers and florists for home gardens. This unique growing nedium, made by combining vood pulp with a synthetic resin, vas developed primarily for use n commercial greenhouses. It ontains limestone, trace miner-ls, and sufficient nitrogen, phos-horous, and potassium to sus-ain growth of seedlings and cut-ings for three weeks. Basically hese mean that the gardener is ot dependent on natural topsoil for starting seeds or cuttings.

BECAUSE of the vastly improved varieties of plants for home culture, many native species cultivated now may well be found only in botanical gardens of tomorrow or special private collections. As we become more particular about the plants we grow, and often have much less space for gardening, a high degree of selectivity will be practiced. Technically, the self-maintaining garden is possible today—weedless, self-watering, self-feeding, pests systemically controlled, and plants chemically pruned or trained. With these repetitious but vital chores automated, the gardener's time can be devoted to artistic efforts. ■

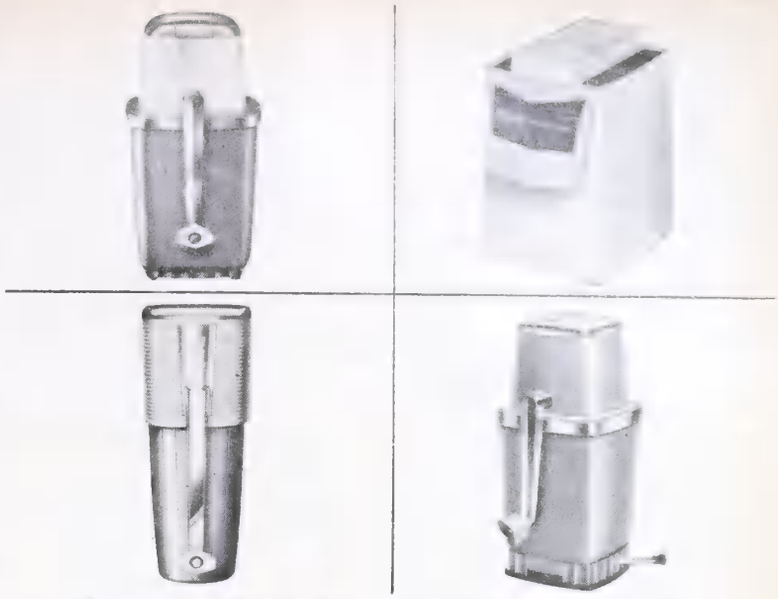
n order. The one for my room ead: "Storage wall, well venti-ated and lit; hanging space for lothes (blouses high, pants be-low; space for long dresses, etc.); portion of space with drawers; closet near bathroom."



Under "Furniture" or "Equipment" came the lists of large and small items each area was to accommodate: some decorative, as "table with mirror, bench, and chairs" in the entrance hall; some as down-to-earth as "three big bins, wooden counter, sink, shelves, pots, etc." in the potting shed. There followed a space for "Remarks"—for example, on the pages headed "Kitchen": "Good direct ventilation for equipment."

A page called "General Miscellaneous Notes" was dedicated to bits and pieces like "Use aerators on all water taps" and "Find place for wine storage."

With our lists of requirements all freshly typed, we were ready to get down to drawing floor plans. What pleased me most was that we all agreed completely on the approach. We wanted a house that would be contemporary in design in the sense that it would make use of all the amazing new materials and inventions available today. But we wanted it to be beautiful—not antiseptic.

To Dick and me, and to John, there was only one place to start: inside. We wanted to arrange the rooms so that they would work efficiently and make life as easy and comfortable and graceful as it could be. Though it baffled our friends, none of us ever asked what the outside was going to look like. We felt certain it would take its happiest form from the rooms inside. And sure enough—on my envelope backs and on John's masterful drawings, both edited with Dick's comments—the house in my head began to take a shape of its own.

being broiled by the sun or frozen by chill air from winter winds. Faults in the earliest glass structures impelled manufacturers to develop solar-heat-reducing glass and thermal insulating glass, both of which are commonplace today. Monsanto's newest addition to its headquarters in St. Louis is an example (photograph on page 168). Glazing in it cuts down 70 percent of the sun's heat and glare. The product: Reflectovue by Pittsburgh Plate Glass, mirrorlike on the outside, transparent from inside—an innovation made possible by an interlayer within the glass of Monsanto's polyvinyl butyral.

Insulating glass goes a long way toward cutting down indoor heat loss in winter, and few quality homes built today are without it. However, PPG has gone a step further. The company has produced, and is now marketing commercially, an insulating glass that is itself a source of heat. An electrically conductive film on the indoor piece of glass makes this possible.

Heating and air-conditioning equipment will move outside the house. Fedders has already experimented with installation of heating/cooling units on concrete pads outside a dozen or so custom homes. Technically, it's a simple matter. The advantages are obvious: more space indoors for living; equipment noises kept outside the house; servicing that won't disrupt the interior of your home. Makers are beginning to produce this equipment in sizes small enough for home use.

Or home comfort may take another turn, one in which the equipment is completely removed from the house. For example, Carrier believes the central heating and cooling plant, already a major factor in office building, industrial and university air conditioning, has great potential for homes of tomorrow. The central plant delivers chilled water for cooling, steam for heating. It may not be long coming, too. Plans are now under way for a central plant to deliver heating and cooling to an entire village in Reston, the "new city" in Virginia (HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, September, 1966).

Heating and air conditioning may be delivered to the rooms in your house through the ceilings—not through conventional vents in the ceiling but through the entire ceiling. A considerable number of new offices, schools and restaurants going up now have had this system installed, and it's proven remarkably effective. The secret: a dropped ceiling of acoustical panels in which hundreds of pin-hole-size openings have been made—inconspicuous from below, but through which heated or cooled air from above the panels flows easily. The area above the dropped ceiling, a foot or so deep and completely enclosed, is the means for delivering air to the room, thus eliminating the need for long runs of sheet-metal duct. The big companies in the field, Armstrong, Celotex, Owens-Corning, see this coming for homeowners but observe that the house will be built differently to accommodate the system. For one thing, ceilings will have to be higher—around nine feet.

Hydronic (water) cooling and heating systems, in commercial use for decades, may be ready soon for the transition to residential comfort. The hold up has been cooling (it's likely you've lived in a house that had hot-water heating.) The breakthrough, some manufacturers believe, will be found in a valance unit that silently drops draftless cool air into the room; delivers heat in much the same way. This is catching on in motels and hospitals. The next step could be the house.

Pre-built wall and roof panels will enclose the 1987 house. "Pre-built" means a panel produced in a factory and delivered to the building site with a finished interior and exterior surface strong enough to support the load intended for it, and pre-insulated with plastic foam. The panel is a fact of everyday construction in industry. And several thousand homes have been built with various forms of the panel—some on an experimental basis. Its big advantage: a cost saving in labor at the site, and in most cases, more efficient insulation.

Koppers, one of the leaders in this field, tried several years ago to market its styrene-foam filled Dylite panel residentially, but ran into a spider web of outdated local building codes that slowed down or prevented its use. As a result, the company switched to commercial markets, and has been quite successful, particularly in the area of cold-storage warehousing. Koppers officials feel that the time is drawing closer for Dylite's return to residential construction. For one thing, many more building codes are being modernized today.

This feeling is shared by Alcoa, maker of Alply, an aluminum sheet/polystyrene foam sandwich panel. According to Richard M. Sherwood, Alcoa's manager of commercial and monumental building product sales, "Every new concept in residential construction is based on the premise that eventually on-site labor will become so high that prefabrication will take over."

Another force is shaping the gradual change-over to prefabrication: the mobility of the modern American family. The day may come when you will order your home disassembled and put back together in a new location hundreds of miles away. Some kind of a panelized wall and roof system will make this possible.

Partitions within the house will be movable, too, just as they are now for offices, schools and other commercial structures. And movable partitions will be made possible, in turn, by long-span roof beams, joists or trusses. A clear span of 100 feet is no trick at all for present-day commercial and industrial structures. Trusses in this future home will be made of wood and plywood (they are today in house construction); of aluminum (Kaiser is very much in this business); of steel (U.S. Steel is involved now); and of combinations (a company called Trus-joist in Boise, Idaho, makes a remarkably strong joist of tubular steel webbing and lumber chords).

Your future home may be poured, not built. Liquid urethane, produced by Union Carbide among others, foams in place when a chemical catalyst is added at the building site. Extremely efficient as insulation, this foam filled the 1½′-thick cavity between the granite facing and concrete back-up in Eero Saarinen's much-heralded CBS Building in New York. It could easily fill the space between inner and outer walls in tomorrow's house, simultaneously delivering high insulation and strength to the wall. ■

The American sweet tooth will never ache again

National Biscuit leaps from crackers to cookies with a new line that includes: Nabisco Easy Bake Vanilla Sugar Cookies, Nabisco Easy Bake Oatmeal Raisin Cookies, Nabisco Easy Bake Fudge Nut Cookies and Nabisco Easy Bake Chocolate Chip Cookies. All are preformed, frozen, ready to slide into the oven. Keebler Brownies, five individually wrapped packs to a box, are available with peanut butter or vanilla icing, ready to eat. Good lunch-box item. Cresca's is importing Jacob's Pickwick Plain Chocolate Ginger Biscuits from England. Pepperidge Farm has taken a leaf from the Belgian cuisine and created Pirouettes, delicate, rich, rolled tea wafers. They, too, have new cookies: Pepperidge Farm Irish Oatmeal Cookies and Spice-Nut Cookies.

The Costa Ice Cream Co. of New Jersey has recently developed several interesting fresh ideas including: Coffee Mocha Cake Roll (filled with coffee ice cream and lemon sherbet), Spumoni Continental (individual creamy chocolate squares with pistachio ice cream and tutti-frutti centers), individual servings of Bavarian Slices (chocolate, vanilla, and coffee ice cream with lemon-lime sherbet). All are frozen.

Eskimo Pie Miniatures are new—ice cream in heart, diamond, and circle shapes, bite size, coated with chocolate. Also Eskimo Diet-Serv Ice Milk (Mediterranean Mocha, Crème de Menthe, Vogue Vanilla, Caribbean Chocolate)—75 calories per portion. Sealtest has two new prestige ice creams: Butter Crunch Fudge Royale, and Bananaberry Whirl, packed in half-gallon cartons. Borden's has a new ice cream called Choo-Chew Peanut Butter Ice Cream. "Something Diff'rent" Freezer Dessert Mix (chocolate, lemon, and pineapple) is Pillsbury's almost instant, almost "ice cream."

Burny Bros. French Cream Cheese Cake and Chocolate Whip Cream Fudge Cake (frozen, need thawing only) are new, and the same is true of Pepperidge Farm Pineapple Cheese Strudel (frozen and ready to cook). The other flavors offered are apple, cherry, peach, and blueberry. Jell-O Cheese Cake Mix is also new. Pepperidge Farm is making Frozen Layer Cakes (Devil's Food, Chocolate Fudge, Vanilla, and Chocolate)—square cakes large enough to serve ten. Howard Johnson's Fudge Cake and Coconut Cake are brand-new too. Sara Lee is introducing a four-layer whipped Cream Cake (chocolate, double chocolate, walnut, and golden)—serves ten—also, the Sara Lee Raisin Pound Cake. New, Pillsbury's All Butter Cake Mix (a yellow cake) and its two companions, Sour Cream Fudge Cake Mix and Batter Fudge Cake. In the pie department, Kraft is now making three frozen pies in popular flavors: Kraft Pink Peppermint Pie, Kraft Chocolate Velvet Nut Pie, and Kraft Mint Pie.

Bounty from Campbell, five new canned puddings are available in these flavors: French Vanilla, Butterscotch, Rice with Cinnamon, Dutch Chocolate, and Lemon. Dannon, the yogurt people, are now making Dannon Chocolate Flavored Bokoo, ready to serve, packed in individual cups. Standard Brands' Royal Shake-a-Pudd'n Dessert Mixes (vanilla, chocolate, banana, and butterscotch) come packed with shaker cups, lids and spoons, four to a box. All that's called for is water and children. Again from Pillsbury, a pair of dessert sauce mixes: Pillsbury Lemon Sauce Mix and Chocolate Fudge Sauce Mix.

Almost instant eating

Pet, Inc., recently joined hands with Romeo Salta, New York restaurateur, to present frozen Italian Style Cannelloni, Italian Style Manicotti and Italian Style Lasagna. Buitoni has just extended its fine line of Italian foods and sauces with the introduction of Buitoni Frozen Cheese Ravioli. Caruso Foods has added Caruso 10 Pak Pizza Sauces, Ricotta Filled Lasagna with Italian sauce, and Caruso Egg Plant Parmigiana with sauce. All are frozen. Just heat and serve. Franco-American, a division of Campbell Soup Company, has three new canned spaghettis: Franco-American SpaghettiOs with Meatballs in Tomato Sauce, SpaghettiOs in Tomato and Cheese Sauce, and SpaghettiOs with Sliced Franks in Tomato Sauce.

The interest in Italian dishes continues with Kraft's Cheese Pizza Grandia, Sausage Pizza Grandia, Beef Ravioli Regalo, Spaghetti with Meat Sauce Splendide, and Macaroni and Cheese Delicioso. All frozen, ready to heat. And an Irishman has just introduced Brady's Frozen Irish Pizza. Howard Johnson has three new products, Tuna Noodle Casserole, Clam Croquettes, and Seafood Croquettes. From San Antonio, Texas, Patio Foods, Inc., is helping to satisfy the growing demand for Mexican foods with its frozen Patio Beef Enchiladas in Beef Chili Gravy. Morton's Tuna Pot Pie, top crust only, is new, and Cohen's Two-Egg Rolls with Chicken, kosher and frozen, is new with them. In addition to its chicken and turkey pies, Stouffer's also makes a new Frozen Beef Pie.

Some new slants on breakfast

National Biscuit leads the cereal field with four new breakfast cereals: Gambits, a graham cereal; Rice Cream Flakes, with the flavor and crispness of ice-cream cones; New Shreddies, miniature waffles with malt flavor; and Puppets (strickly for youngsters), with wheat puffs in plastic Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck containers. Post's Honeycomb Sweet Crisp Corn Cereal is new in the sense that it's smaller and crisper than an earlier version. Cornados, tiny cornucopias, a corn-and-rice cereal, is General Mills' newest contribution.

Howard Johnson has recently introduced Corn Toastees and Orange Toastees, frozen in squares, to make breakfast brighter. England further brightens things up with a first: imported Trafalgar Genuine Frozen English Crumpets.

Less spatter bacon, lamb in a net, flavored sausages . . .

Armour has just introduced Armour Star Miracure Bacon, (easier to separate, less spatter, less shrinkage) as well as a fully cooked, boneless, smoked ham, vacuum-packed in film, called Armour Star Parti Style Ham. Swift, on the other hand, packs its fully cooked new, boneless Swift's Premium Hostess Ham in a can. Both slice beautifully. In addition, Swift's Premium Corned Beef Brisket for Oven Roasting is new, in two styles—a mild cure and a garlic-spice flavor. Swift has recently produced four brown-and-serve sausages with four distinct flavors: Bacon 'n Sausage (bacon flavor), Kountry Kitchen Links (mildly sweet), Smoked Flavor Links (hearty smoky taste), and Sausage Milano (with Italian overtones). The American Lamb Council has originated a new idea for boned lamb roasts. The roasts, leg or shoulder, are boned, the cut surfaces rubbed with powdered egg white, which acts as a binder; the meat is then rolled and encased, by machine, in a tube of elastic netting. The netting is removed after roasting.

Two new meat tenderizers: McCormick's Instant Meat Marinade Mix and Spice Island's Instant Tenderizing Marinade.

Low-calorie peanuts for nibblers

The Fisher Nut Co., Standard Brands, and Tom Houston Peanut Co. have all recently introduced low-calorie, high-protein whole peanuts by a new process developed by scientists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Fisher calls its peanuts Lite-Bite; Standard Brands, Peanut Crisps; and Tom Huston, Crisp-P-Nuts. About one-third of the peanut oil is removed, but in the process the percentage of protein is increased.

New salad dressings are pourable and mixable

The new salad dressings that pour include: Hellmann's Spin Blend Salad Dressing, running mate to their familiar mayonnaise; Pfeiffer's Parisienne French and Caesar Dressing; Milani's Green Goddess Dressing (also available in mix form) and Creamy French Dressing. Anderson, Clayton's Seven Seas Italian Bleu Cheese Dressing is homogenized to prevent separating.

Look what's on the table in the animal kingdom

French's has developed a couple of "reward" tidbits for dogs that think they're people. Doggie Do-Nuts and People Crackers. A poodle acquaintance of this writer found them excellent. Gaines, a division of General Foods, has recently introduced three new foods for dogs: Gaines Variety (chicken, liver, or beef-flavored chunks of soft-moist dog food), Top Choice (semi-moist, packed burger-style), and Gravy Train (a dry dog food). New Kraft Dog Food is a bite-size, dry pet food with bacon flavor. And up in Providence, Pet Kitchens is packing Clam Dinners for Cats.

Liquid refreshments for all ages

Shake and enjoy, says Pepsi-Cola, whether you buy their new chocolate-flavored Devil Shake in a bottle or a can. Nestlé, Standard Brands, and General Foods are all marketing new drink mixes: Nestlé's Quik Shake, available in four flavors (chocolate, chocolate malted, strawberry, and vanilla); General Foods' Great Shakes Shake Mix, available in chocolate or vanilla.

Pillsbury, with one eye on the young market, has recently introduced Moo Juice Shake Mix (chocolate and strawberry flavors), but kept its other eye on the adult market with Tart N' Tangy Drink Mixes (lemon, lime, orange).

Cresca has imported from Switzerland three new instant drinks (orange, cola, grapefruit), individual cubes that dissolve in water. Ocean Spray has combined cranberry juice with prune juice to make Cranprune, and cranberry juice with apple juice to make Cranapple. General Foods' Start is a new instant breakfast mix and, for calorie watchers, they have recently introduced Twist, an imitation grapeade mix. Borden's, also weight-aware, has developed a first in the industry, U.S. Extra Grade Non-fat Dry Milk.

Coffee, of consuming interest to most Americans, comes in many new guises: General Foods' Freeze Dried Sanka is new; so is Nestlé's Taster's Choice, freeze-dried instant coffee. Savarin is introducing El Pico, a Spanish-roast coffee, and General Foods has two new coffees specifically developed for coffeemakers—Maxwell House Electra-perk Coffee and Yuban Electra Matic Coffee.

Running the gamut from caviar to liquid-diet meals

For dieters: Pet's Sego "Very" Flavors ("very" chocolate, "very" vanilla, "very" strawberry, "very" chocolate marshmallow), low-calorie liquid meals. Continuing in the same vein, herewith: Pet 99% Fat Free Evaporated Skimmed Milk. New Perx, a non-dairy product, frozen, made with vegetable fat, is a low-calorie milk substitute. Another new one: Birds Eye Cool Whip, frozen, already whipped, non-dairy, low-calorie topping. Both Crystal Sweet (a General Foods product) and Sweetness & Light (from Abbott Laboratories) are granulated imitation sugars (about three calories per teaspoon) that can be used wherever sugar is called for. There is a formidable array of diet fruits in glass jars, packed by Christo Poulos & Company. Nature's Own California Prunes, Extra Large Turkish Figs, Bleheim Apricot Compote, and Jubo Fruit Compote.

S-Car-Go, frozen heat-and-serve snails, have a new package and are now nationally available. For those remaining in the U.S. who still like high-calorie pastries, Baker Almond Filling and Pecan Filling are just the ticket. Also is Morton's "Home-Bake" Pie Crusts, two unbaked pie shells for nine-inch pans. Betty Crocker Pie Crust Mix, with an unusually high percentage of shortening, is sufficient for two one-crust pies or one two-crust pie.

To continue in this happy high-caloric vein, Perugina of Italy is introducing Baci, meaning "kisses," chocolates with whole and chopped hazelnuts, individually wrapped, 7½-ounce and 2-ounce boxes. This same house is now making Gola Don, chewy candies in assorted fruit flavors and licorice. From France, Lou Henry of Strasbourg is sending le mirage, a cocktail purée with truffles and a Pâté de Lièvre, with Armagnac. Among other imports is Cresca's Golden Whole Grain Lumpfish Caviar. New, too, Mirvandelles Mousse de Homard, Mousse de Saumon, and Mousse de Sole. Serious cooks will welcome Dried Cèpes, also imported from France. BN Langue de Chat, the famous cat's-tongue sweet biscuits, and Tart Express Feuilletée, puff paste shells ready to serve, are included in the new French imports. Finally from England, Ratcliffe's Honey Vinegar, brand new and made entirely from pure honey.

On the local scene, the R French Company has recently introduced seasonings and herbs, in "collectors" spice jars, including Salad Lift, Rotisserie Seasoning, Spanish Saffron, Barbecue Seasoning, Celery Flakes, Dill Weed, Minced Garlic, Green Bell Peppers, and Bay Leaves (ground). Sgt. Toppit, a new Pillsbury concept, are flavor nuggets to sprinkle over frosted cakes or on top of ice cream. ■

"Forget them," says a Principessa of our acquaintance, a lady worldlywise and place-proud as only a Venetian can be. "Do not rush to them. All in good time you'll see the Venice that you want to see. Venice will come to you. Sit in the Piazza (she means, of course, the Piazza San Marco), take a cappucchino or Campari at Florian's or Quadri's. Listen to the music—it is real, alive, and the musicans play with equal joy 'Hello, Dolly' or 'Funiculi, Funicula.' Watch the crowds; hear the rhythm of their evening promenade under the colonnades—leisurely, like their window-shopping the glass and lace and leather shops that line the square. Do not rush. To a visitor in Venice, as in Rome, 24 hours, 24 days, 24 years are all the same—to know the city would take two centuries."

The Principessa is undoubtedly right. Nothing but massive mental indigestion can result from trying to gulp down in one swift draught so rich a dose of art, architecture, history, and atmosphere as Venice purveys. Most American travelers are far too restive to take the Pincipessa's advice, but at least her suggestions put them in the most convenient locus operandi for sight-seeing certain four-star "musts" of the Repùbblica Serenissima.

At short distance from those leisurely tables with the "Martini" ashtrays on them, within sound of the great clock where bronze Moors strike the hours to the stormy fluttering of the Piazza's greedy, municipally protected pigeons, our own nominated "musts" would be:

San Marco—the fabulous, gold-glowing mosaic wonder of the basilica itself. If one dared to nominate highlights, they might be the gem-encrusted gold reredos of the high altar, inlaid with enamels; the lovely Nicopeia, the jeweled and dazzling Byzantine icon of the Madonna, dominating a small altar; the Treasure of San Marco, a museum of wonder.

The Palace of the Doges—the elegantly, typically Byzantine-flavored Venetian Gothic, arcaded and stone-frosted pink marble palace of the Dukes of Venice, full of legend and greater than life-size wonders: the stairway of the Giants; a trompe l'oeil ceiling by Veronese, seemingly open to the sky. The utter phantasmagoria of art, sculpture, sumptuousness, room after room of beauty, the work of untold Venetian masters.

The Correr Museum—across the Piazetta, the handsome "front yard" of the Doges' Palace, recommended as a historical review of Venice and its people, in paintings, and such humanizing relics as clothing, jewels, armor.

Having taken in such sights, you will have seen "Everyman's Venice." But Venice, in truth, is individualist country. There's something here for connoisseurs or amateurs of every era, from the Seventh Century—when these 118 little islands were settled by mainland refugees from barbarians' invasions—to the present. Today, in August and September, Venice is world capital to the international congeries of cinematophiles who throng the Lido for the annual Film Festival at the Palazzo del Cinema, and promptly on biennial cue, the world of contemporary art arrives for the Esposizione Biennale d'Arte and all its attendant goings-on.

For the aficionado of Palladio and the 16th-century neoclassic, Venice is an excellent starting point for excursions to the Veneto villas on the Brenta, by car or, preferably, by launch. Meantime, for an immediate glimpse of his church of San Giorgio as Palladio himself might have seen it, look across the Piazetta past the column of the winged Lion of San Marco, past the striped gondola moorings of San Marco's Basin, across the water to the little island of St. George.

To lose yourself in the Venice of masquerade balls and three-cornered hats, barcarolles and lace mantillas, take the immediately available ferry to the Ca' Rezzonico, a museum recalling the frivolous, pretty Venetian doings of the 17th Century.

Torcello—that strangely melancholic, marsh-meadow island, its houses peasant-red, pistachio, and ochre flashing quick-silver puddles of reflection in its waterways—is a taste of very early times. Go, preferably by rented launch (about $5 an hour) and as early as possible in the day to avoid the touristic troops and the noisy souvenir vendors. (These sell florid hand-mirrors, reminding us that the neighboring isle of Murano was supposed to be where the glass mirror was invented. You can include Murano and the lacemaking island of Burano on this same trip, but Torcello is your important goal.) Torcello's cathedral, begun in the 7th Century, is crowned with 11th-century mosaics, all wonder-of-the-world material, moving examples of honest, artistic fervor. Follow this inspiration with the pleasantly profane pursuit of a marvelous lunch under the leafy garden trellises of the Locando Cipriani, a country-style restaurant inspired by the gifted Loredano Giannotti, owner of Harry's Bar in the Danieli Royal Excelsior Hotel and the new Cipriani Hotel on the Giudecca. Try a "mimosa" Champagne and the pink juice of Sicilian oranges – before a lunch of cannelloni and seafood (good anywhere around Venice) with one of the Veneto region's good wines.

The trip over the Lagoon to the islands underlines a curious truth about Venice: It is the rare city that can be gloriously viewed from afar, and here afar means across water. It suggests to us, because we've had the happy experience, that to make the Lido your headquarters for a Venetian trip gives you endless opportunity to observe Venice across the water in all its magnificently changing light. To stay, say, at the splendid Excelsior Palace, your balconied room facing into the Adriatic, at your feet the sunny sand, provides the best of all sybaritic worlds. You can live the golden life of a sun-bronzed resort—tennis, golf, riding, and a glittering casino at hand—and launch at will across the Lagoon to the wonders of the Rialto, viewing it in the bright jewel light of noon, the opal glow of sunset, or, in a gray chiffon light of dawn.

Lately redone, to repair the ravages of last year's "high water," the Excelsior has a newly built and furnished complex of beach cabanas, so smartly turned out that one almost mistakes them for living quarters. Internationally known, loved, and returned to, the Excelsior is operated by CIGA—the Compagnia Italiana di Grandi Alberghi—a company that is responsible for 17 of Italy's great hotels—including, in Venice, two former Doges' palaces, both maintained in the sumptuous manner they've always been accustomed to. These are the Gritti Palace, the 15th-century home of the Doge Gritti, and the Danieli Royal Excelsior, the 14th-century residence of the Doge Dardolo, one of Venice's true historymakers.

Lovely
HELLEBORUS, Niger
. . . The Christmas Rose

Imagine the joy of finding cheerful blossoms peering at you through the snow at Christmas time . . . exquisite Helleborus, Niger can give you this thrill. It actually thrives in snow and cold, blooming anywhere from early winter to early spring, depending on local conditions.

The beautiful, dogwood-like flowers, which seem to bloom endlessly, are large, white and single. Its attractive palm-like foliage is evergreen and grows about 8 inches in height.

But be sure you plant only Wayside's strain . . . It is American-grown, trouble-free and far superior. This enchanting perennial develops into large, handsome clumps, producing dozens of captivating blooms for a lifetime . . . requires no dividing or transplanting ever.

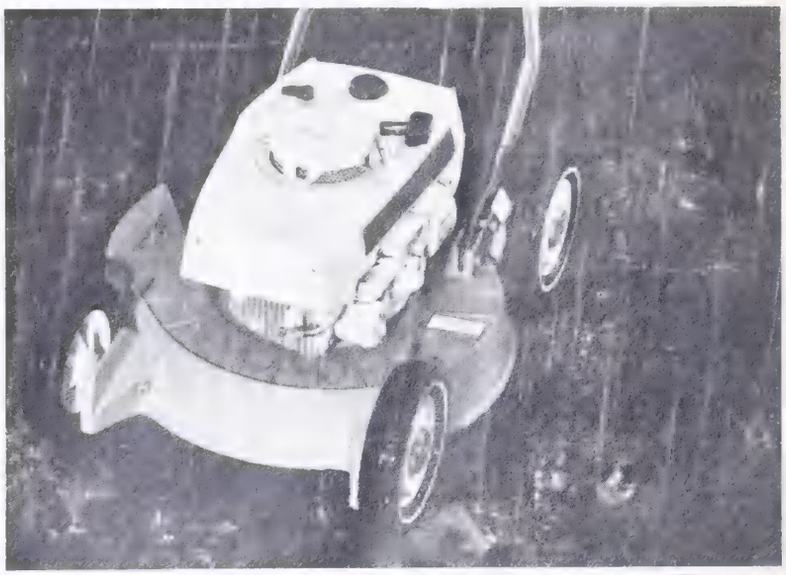
NEW for WOOD DECKING

Home in Kent Woodlands, Cal.; Cabot's Stains used; Architect: Rockrise & Watson, San Francisco, Cal.

Cabot's DECKING STAINS



Porches, sun decks, and patios are increasingly prominent in modern home design. Wood decking, popular now as never before, brings with it a need for a decking finish both durable and decorative. Cabot's Decking Stains, newly developed for this specific purpose, stand up beautifully to the particular problems of heavy foot traffic and severe weathering. The stained surface resists cracking and peeling, mellows with age, will not rub off or track off. Available in eight pleasing colors plus black.

Rust is expensive...

3-IN-ONE isn't.

Rust can ruin tools overnight . . . and it doesn't have to happen! Spray on a little 3-IN-ONE OIL regularly, and you can keep rust from getting started. Or help clean it off, if it's already there. And 3-IN-ONE cuts down wear on moving parts . . . things last longer. When you spend good money on a power drill, garden tools, sewing machine, bike, etc. . . . shouldn't you spend a few cents to protect them? Regular. Electric motor oil. Or this handy new spray can. 3-IN-ONE . . . it's wise insurance.

For information about Venice, write to the Italian State Tourist Office, 626 Fifth Avenue, New York City; the Azienda Autonoma di Soggiorno e Turismo, Venice; and CIGA, Ramo Fuseri 1812, Venice.

Everyone from Montaigne to Mary McCarthy has written about Venice, but a clear-cut, contemporary guidebook, 600 lire or 96 cents' worth of practical direction, You In Venice by Amedeo Storti, is available all over the town. The local Venice tourist office also has a free carnet, or information pamphlet, which neatly supplements the guidebook.

Those with the not uncommon urge to rent a palazzo or a flat and settle down for a while are recommended to the Contessa Caroline Robilant, San Maurizio 2716, Venice—a knowledgeable source of rental information.

As for getting there, Italy, in this affluent state of her history, is still perhaps the last bastion of service in this naughty, carry-your-own-luggage world, and so it is good to be able to report that Alitalia, Italy's own airline, lives pleasantly up to national expectations and gets you in the proper Italianate mood—New York-Milan-Venice, round-trip generally is $852 first class, $526 economy, with the usual variations in rate best quoted to you directly by your travel agent or an Alitalia representative. The career that offers women equal opportunity with men

The shortage of trained Accountants has created unusual opportunities for women who would like to enjoy a fine career in business. Regardless of age or experience, you can qualify rapidly for an interesting position – full or part time – in the rewarding and uncrowded Accounting field.

Be an Accountant

LaSalle trains you at home in your spare time. You can be in business for yourself, earn high pay, choose your own hours – and still have plenty of time left for your family.

Earn an independent income in a profession where salaries are high and promotions are frequent–and where women qualify as readily as men. Without interfering with your present job or responsibilities, you can prepare for a career in Accounting through LaSalle spare-time training.

No previous bookkeeping experience is necessary. LaSalle's distinguished faculty starts you at the beginning; explains every basic Accounting principle and method; gives you actual Accounting problems with your lessons, then corrects and grades your work. Your training is complete, practical and enjoyable. You are thoroughly prepared for every Accounting task you will handle in the business world.

For more than half a century, LaSalle has been a world leader in business training. Its students total more than 1,000,000 ambitious men and women. A LaSalle diploma in Accounting is a credential respected by America's biggest companies. Send for free illustrated booklet and sample lesson. Address: 417 S. Dearborn, Chicago, Illinois 60605.

"My salary is 305% more than when I first started to work. I am employed by the state of Alabama as an Accountant. This is a professional rating. Being a LaSalle graduate has meant so much!"–Mrs. Anne P. Cox, Elmore, Alabama.

"Thanks to my LaSalle training I have been given the opportunity to reorganize and install accounting systems and procedures. My earnings have risen from $70.00 per week to $175.00 per week with many fringe benefits."–Mary M. Nyberg, Hollydale, California.

"I have the highest regard for your training – also for the personal interest the LaSalle Instructors give each lesson."–Mac Whitledge, Memphis, Tennessee.

Chickering does everything a concert piano does only it does it at home.

Home is where Chickering is most often seen. That's because we've designed our largest grand a full 3½ feet shorter than a concert piano, so it fits perfectly in your living room.

And because home is where Chickering is most often heard, we've tuned its volume to home proportions. But the richness of tone and sensitivity of response are worthy of the Philharmonic.

Of course, Chickering doesn't make the only grands and consoles for the home. But we do make the finest, and music lovers the world over agree. As for appearance, we're highly fashion conscious. You enjoy a choice of twenty different console and grand styles and finishes.

Write for a full-color brochure or visit your local fine piano dealer.

'urniture with a Mediterranean flair from our Madeira collection has brought "that Thomasville look" to this dining room. Notice that the owner as chosen her rug and fabric colors to contrast with the Almond finish, a lovely, subtle tone.

For "that Thomasville look" throughout your home, start with Thomasville furniture in the style you like best for living room, dining room and bedroom. Thomasville designs are not passing fads. From Early American to Contemporary, from Classic to Provincial, our furniture is designed and crafted with all the skill and artistry we've learned in 63 years. We use only the finest solids and veneers – walnut, pecan, rosewood, teak and carpathian elm burl – and we finish each piece with loving care.

All this special care makes sense to us. How else could we bring you "that Thomasville look"?

that Thomasville look

Mediterranean villas inspired Madeira. See "that Thomasville look" at better stores. For color brochures on important collections, send $1 to Thomasville Furniture Industries, Inc., Dept. IJB510, Thomasville, N.C.

You can identify Thomasville originals by our name burned in the top left-hand drawers of our furniture.

Simply by adding Mohawk carpet.

Take Briar Lane, for example. One look at Briar Lane tells you that carpet is as necessary to a bedroom as a bed is.

It's soft and plushy with a luxurious pile of Creslan® acrylic with modacrylic fibers. But then, we don't expect you to know what that means until you sink your toes into it.

But we can tell you that Briar Lane is very soil resistant. And that it's ridiculously easy to care for. An occasional vacuuming does the trick. So you can forget about your pre-carpet days with buckets and mops.

The softness, the warmth, the sense of quiet privacy you get from a bedroom carpet are worth a lot to you. And yet, if you have a 12 x 10 foot bedroom, you can carpet it with Briar Lane for less than $120.00. Plus a small charge for installation and padding. (We recommend Mohawk Cushion under every carpet, so it will feel as good as it looks.)

Now for the price of a new bed, you can have a whole new bedroom.

OFFER YOUR GUESTS SHERRY INSTEAD OF A DRINK.

Some people don't really want to drink when they drink.

They'd like to sip something. Not a cocktail or highball, but not a "Shirley Temple" either.

They're looking for something light and a little dry; something sophisticated, but not ultra chi-chi; something they can handle straight, or on the rocks, just like a drink.

What they're looking for, we submit, is La Ina.

La Ina is Pedro Domecq's dry cocktail sherry, imported from Spain. It's the most popular dry sherry in the world.

He'll even drink it.

And if you find the La Ina bottle empty before the party's over, it's your own fault.

Who asked you to give people a drink they'd enjoy?

LA INA

Now . . . the famed Larousse Gastronomique – not for the $20.00 that thousands paid for the publisher's edition – but for only $1.89 with membership in THE COOK BOOK GUILD

. . . if you agree to accept only four selections or alternates over the next two years

EVER SINCE it was first published, this monumental encyclopedia has been recognized the world over as the supreme authority on food.

Compiled more than 25 years ago by the master chef and gastronome, Prosper Montagné, it was first printed in Paris by the historic publishing house of Larousse. In over a million words and 15,000 entries, it details all mankind's important knowledge about food, and its preparation and enjoyment.

Though the book was reprinted in France no less than 10 times, until recently it was available only in French. To create an English-language edition, a staff of 20 food experts and two noted editors spent four years translating this vast wealth of information.

And now—in an introductory offer unprecedented in its generosity—you can obtain this extraordinary volume through The Cook Book Guild at the special new-member's price of only $1.89.

So vast is the scope of this huge 1,100-page encyclopedia, it almost defies description. It is, in fact, several definitive books combined into a one-volume library on food. It is...

–the one master reference work that experts turn to first to check any fact, any ingredient, any secret in the whole world of cuisine. It's the book to settle every argument over culinary questions!

–a fascinating history of food through the ages, highlighted with myriad facts on the origins of foods, wines and other edibles.

–a gourmet's travel guide, with gastronomic maps and descriptions of the 25 provinces of France; recipes for regional specialties and for those of other lands.

–a manual on fine wines, providing a thorough education in their selection and serving.

–a catalog to the world's great cheeses, with 125 of them listed and described.

–a do-it-yourself handbook on everything from canning and freezing to making wine and beer.

It is, of course, a master cook book uniquely valuable alongside your other cook books and reference works. With its 8,500 priceless recipes, it brings you the culinary secrets of many of the world's best cooks.

Now, in this remarkable $1.89 offer, The Cook Book Guild invites you to discover for yourself the many adventures in food that Larousse Gastronomique can help you enjoy.

If you take special pleasure in preparing and sharing unusually good food, The Cook Book Guild will add much to your life. For here is a club devoted exclusively to seeking out the world's great cook books and making them available to you at guaranteed savings of at least 30%.

As a member, you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients ... how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll discover budget-stretching tips ... family and regional cooking secrets ... delicious ways to diet ... how to save time, effort and money.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Books News, which also includes a "recipe of the month." You may take as few as four selections or alternates within two years, or as many as you wish. With every fourth book you buy, you may choose a FREE Bonus Book from a list of books on cooking, homemaking, etc.

—a fascinating history of food through the ages, highlighted with myriad facts on the origins of foods, wines and other edibles.

—a gourmet's travel guide, with gastronomic maps and descriptions of the 25 provinces of France; recipes for regional specialties and for those of other lands.

—a manual on fine wines, providing a thorough education in their selection and serving.

—a catalog to the world's great cheeses, with 125 of them listed and described.

—a do-it-yourself handbook on everything from canning and freezing to making wine and beer.

—a sparkling omnibus of anecdotes, legends, odd facts and tales about food and famous gourmets.

It is, of course, a master cook book uniquely valuable alongside your other cook books and reference works. With its 8,500 priceless recipes, it brings you the culinary secrets of many of the world's best cooks.

Now, in this remarkable $1.89 offer, The Cook Book Guild invites you to discover for yourself the many adventures in food that Larousse Gastronomique can help you enjoy.

If you take special pleasure in preparing and sharing unusually good food, The Cook Book Guild will add much to your life. For here is a club devoted exclusively to seeking out the world's great cook books and making them available to you at guaranteed savings of at least 30%.

As a member, you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients ... how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll discover budget-stretching tips ... family and regional cooking secrets ... delicious ways to diet ... how to save time, effort and money.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Books News, which also includes a "recipe of the month." "I don't want just 'any' bathroom fixtures. I want the very same fixtures I see in the Eljer ads."

She can have them. And so can you. Just specify "Eljer" by name.

You know quality and style when you see it. So, why settle for less than the best in something as permanent as plumbingware? Especially when it costs no more.

Here, in an "English Country" setting, are Brenda lavatories, Estate toilet, Barcelona bidet and Samoa bath. All are available in decorator pastels or white.

Specify Eljer to your architect, builder or plumbing contractor. For Eljer's new design idea book, send 10¢ to Eljer Plumbingware Division, Wallace-Murray Corporation, Dept. HB, P. O. Box 836, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15230.

High Fashion Hits Home...

ENTER, the newest Lively Art! Home Decorating! It has shrugged off the pedestrian sobriety of pure style... turned on the lights of bright and youthful color... and run up the racy line and action silhouette that characterize many of our best new clothes.

To point up this gay approach, we've dressed our rooms with fashions by eight of the world's great couturiers—Pucci, Cardin, Simonetta, for example. Even the new English "mod" designers: Jean Muir and Gerald McCann.

Is this "dream stuff"? Not at all! Everything we show in the next eight pages can be found in the market place—even the dress designs, which are available in Vogue or Butterick patterns. We believe that the principles of good fashion design can do wonders for home decorating. But see for yourself...

This is the beginning of something great. Artisan* Dinnerware.

When George Briard was commissioned to design a new line of dinnerware for us, even we were astonished by the results.

Taste • Elegance • Style • High quality

These were just a few of the words people used to describe the stunning patterns.

The same words that described why it won four design awards from the National Housewares Manufacturers Association.

You can see why we call it Artisan. Because it's just that. With the look and feel of fine craftsmanship and beautiful line in every plate and bowl, cup and saucer.

That is why we've used a high fashion gown to help show off Artisan. And that's wh will too. Artisan has all the elegance an of china, but not the high price. Becau fabricated dinnerware, made with tough, melamine. Non-breakable under normal tions of usage, of course.

Begin with something great tonight. A Dinnerware.

You've scratched Beethoven's Fifth for the last time. AUDIOMATION®* is here. It puts an end to constant record handling. Gives you up to 40 hours of stereo listening.

Here's the first new way to play, store and handle records.

AUDIOMATION—a development of the Seeburg Corporation—is automation set to music. Once you place your records in the phonograph and program them, you're finished. You never have to touch them again.

You'll find AUDIOMATION only in the luxurious new Seeburg Stereo Home Music Center. And here's how it works: You place up to 50 of your favorite stereo or monaural LP albums in the exclusive Seeburg Vertical Play Changer. After that, playing or replaying them is completely automatic!

To hear any record or number of records, simply dial them. (There's a dial right on the instrument—or you can spot additional "remote control" dials in any room in the house.)

A key part of AUDIOMATION is the way the phonograph remembers up to 100 selections—both sides of 50 records—adding up to 40 hours of uninterrupted stereo listening. It plays and stores all your selections and even cleans the stylus after each playing!

AUDIOMATION is here now—in the Seeburg Stereo Home Music Center. And only Seeburg has it.

For $27.95, the Corning Ware Electromatic coffee maker does a lot more than just make 10 great cups of coffee.

It strips away the ritual and mystery about making great coffee and makes you a coffee expert. Automatically.

It does it by being the one electric coffee maker that's easiest to use, easiest to clean, and easiest to keep clean.

It's easiest to clean because every part is completely immersible, completely dishwasher-proof. Including the heater element.

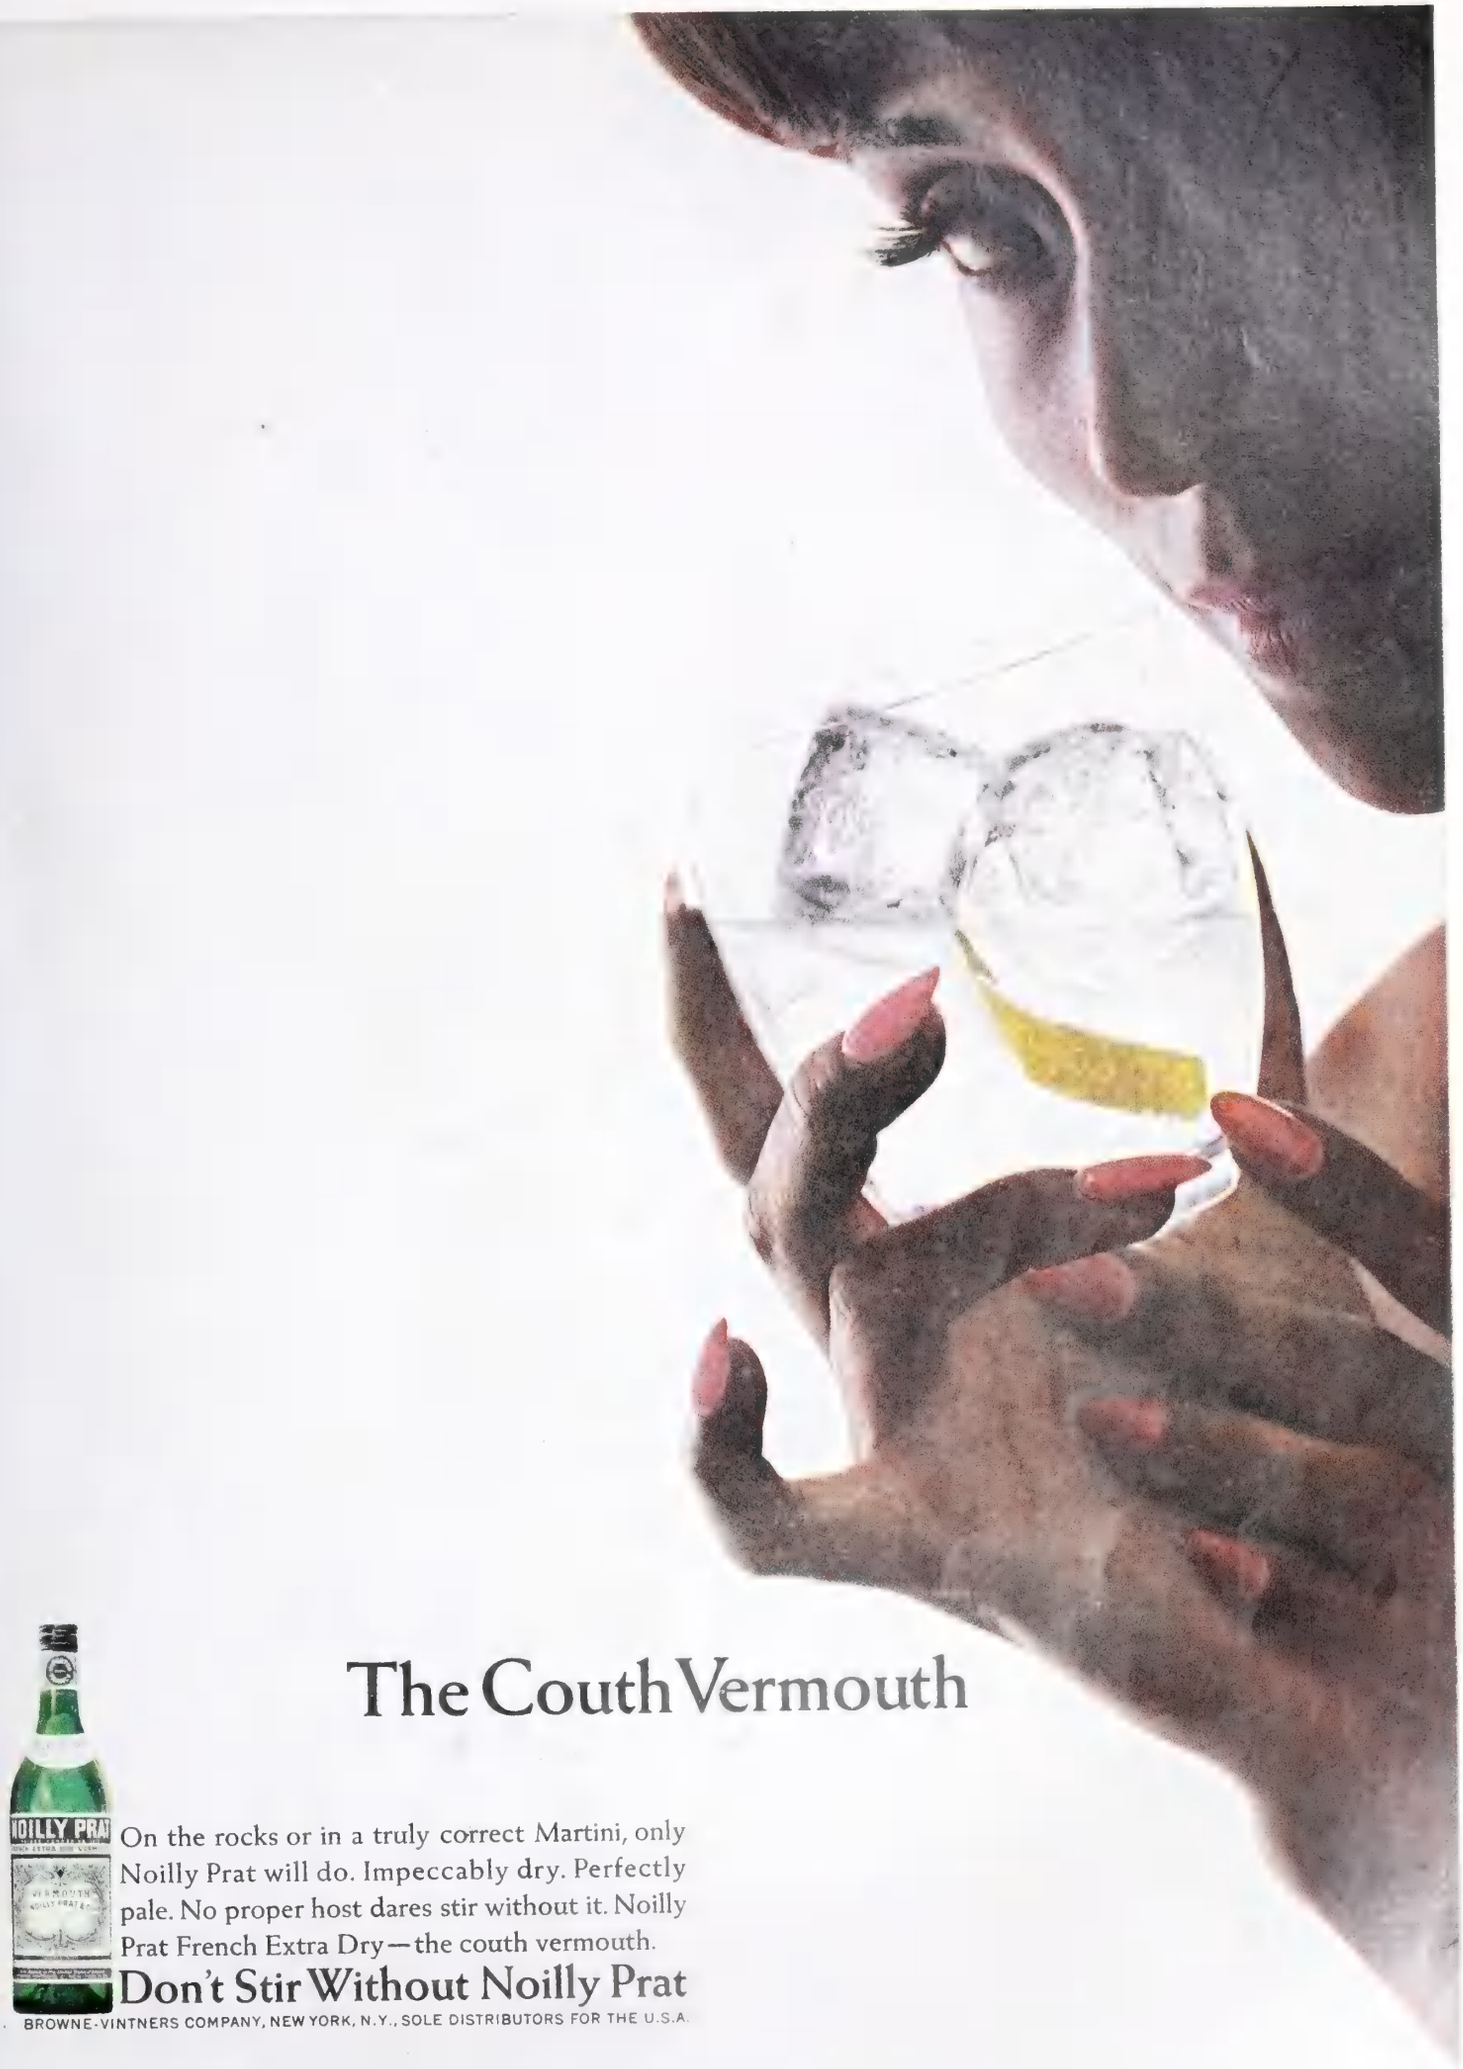
It's easiest to keep clean because it's made from Corning's unique Pyroceram® brand material. Stale coffee oils won't cling to it. So when you make today's coffee you don't wind up serving a little of yesterday's coffee.

And it couldn't be easier to use: all you do is add the coffee and water, plug it in and that's that. There aren't even any dials to fiddle with. A light tells you when the coffee is perfect. A built-in thermostat keeps it perfect.

And besides looking pretty on your table, the Corning Ware Electromatic coffee maker also helps you serve more gracefully with a handle that's easy to grasp and perfectly balanced.

There are Corning Ware Electromatic coffee makers with the familiar Cornflower symbol, in All White and, for $2 more, with a luxurious platinum filigree. In 10 cup and 6 cup models.

But no matter which one you choose, it's guaranteed to make you a coffee expert in one easy lesson.



Just remember to plug it in.

WEEKEND SHELTER YOU CAN ORDER

PLAN BY NATALIE SIEGEL

Here begins a new House Beautiful feature—a special series on the most attractive and practical homes offered by the nation's builders, plus news about products to help you build or remodel your home

By JOHN H. INGERSOLL

You're looking at a vacation house adaptable to the rocky coast of Maine, the sultry summers of New Orleans, or the wind-swept winters of Colorado. It has to be, since the house is made up of pre-built components ready for shipment anywhere in the United States. Because of the engineering that went into the floors and underpinnings, the house can jut over a sloping lot as easily as it will fit a flat piece of land. Little, if any, grading or filling is ever required. Wood's inherent strength and natural insulation value are exploited in a unique way. Walls, for example, are solid wood, made up of eight-inch-wide slabs of lumber produced by glueing together three one-inch-thick boards. The outside-facing board is rough-sawn Idaho white pine; core and interior board are cedar. Tongue-and-groove lumber, two inches thick, forms the roof: cedar shakes top it.

With a well-arranged 960 square feet, the house can be shipped to your lot, then erected and finished by a local contractor, all for around $10,000. House was designed by Serendipity Homes, Inc., 2550 Via Tejon, Palos Verdes Estates, California 90274, who will supply more information on request. Components are built by Potlatch Forests, Inc.

WHAT COVERS THE SIDE OF YOUR HOUSE?

An up-to-the-minute report on every material designed to cover the sides of your home —for new construction or remodeling

People used to live in wood, brick, or stone houses. Ordinary people lived in the wood houses; when a man became a prosperous citizen, he moved up into a big stone or brick house. But today, things aren't that simple. If metal house sidings make you think of Quonset huts, and fiber glass of boats and fishing rods, then you haven't kept up with the latest news about sidings.

Right now, for example, you could take a stucco house, sheathe it in plywood, and then have a vertical board-and-batten effect installed. The panels could be prefinished and precolored at the factory and guaranteed against repainting for 20 or 30 years. This siding could be made of aluminum, in spite of the fact that you could see the rough-cut "wood grain" on it. Or a house with wood sides could be remodeled in stone without using an ounce of real stone: molded fiber-glass panels, available in several stone face patterns, could do the job. There is even a spray for plywood that turns it—as far as the eye can tell—into a lifetime-finish, precolored stucco.

More and better

But these dramatic potentials for change do not really tell the most important thing about today's sidings: The key words are really "more" and "better." Sidings now are made in more materials than ever before, and they come in more colors, more textures, and more styles. At the same time, they are tougher, last longer, provide better insulation, and require less maintenance than their predecessors.

Metals and plastics are partly responsible for the news. Aluminum products have been on the market for about 20 years, but they are better than ever now that they can be prefinished with plastics. They come guaranteed against splitting, peeling, flaking, blistering, or chipping for up to 35 years. Steel is a relative newcomer; it too comes with a no-maintenance plastic finis And the plastics—alkyds, acry ics, vinyls, plastisols—are n only used in the finishes that co wood, metal, and hardboard si ings; one is also used in its sol state. Called PVC, this sol vinyl siding is proving durabl dent-resistant, and colorfast. F ber glass, too, is increasing popular as a way of getting sto and brick patterns without th weight and cost of the real sto and masonry products.

New surfaces

While the list of materia grows, so does the variety of fi ished patterns. Most of the me al, plastic, and mineral-fib products are now made to look though they are wood, and both the wood siding and i copies, there are both vertical an horizontal styles to choose fro Clapboards are made in wide narrow colonial widths. An there are shingles, shakes, fl panels, board-and-batten style and several kinds of grooved pa els. There are smooth surface rough-cuts, basket weaves, circ lar-sawn, striated, and fine-lin patterns.

Real bricks now come in a ho of colors, textures, and glaze (see HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, Septem ber, 1967). You can also g molded bricks in several pattern of brickwork and several color

The range of possibilities immense, but there are man factors to help you make you choice. One is obviously the ma ter of design: Wide redwoo panels set in diagonally on contemporary house overhangin a cliff, and neat little four-inc aluminum clapboards on a tra ditional two-story New Englan house are both sidings, but hardl interchangeable.

Cost is another variable: Alu minum, steel, and plastics ar several times as expensive a some of the mineral- and wood fiber products, but they ar tougher and so last longer. An because these new sidings are prefinished for low maintenance, they may also represent a considerable saving in the long run. With painting costs averaging about $750 for a three-bedroom, two-bath house, the initial outlay for siding is not the only thing to consider. Sidings that are only preprimed from the factory should be repainted every four or five years. With the prefinished plastics, steels, and aluminums, however, you should be able to go from 15 to 35 years without painting—unless you decide to change the color.

Whether you are building a new house or re-siding also makes a difference in the choice of material. Brick or stone could be used for re-siding, but they are generally thought too costly: the materials are expensive, and so heavy they require considerable new work on the foundation of the house. As a result, they are used largely in new houses, or in small doses—around a foundation or in a single wall—for contrast with another siding material.

Wood is generally used on new houses, although in this case probably for no better reason than tradition. Aluminum, steel, and vinyl have their biggest use in the re-siding market.

Five groups

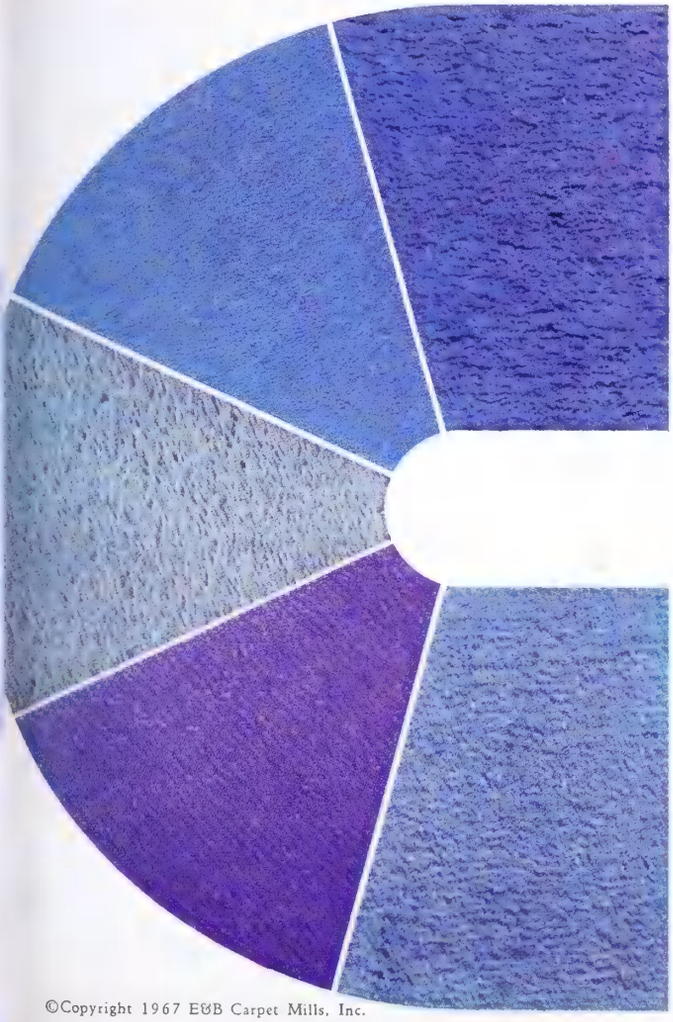
Not every color, style, or texture comes in every material, of course, but as a basic guide to choose from, siding materials fall into five groups: wood—which includes sidings cut directly from lumber such as clapboards or shingles—and wood products—plywood, and reconstituted fiberboards, and hardboards. In the masonry group are cut stone, brick, stucco, and molded, reconstituted stone products. A portland-cement and mineral-fiber combination is a group by itself. The metal group now comprises steel and aluminum. In a final group we have the newcomer plastics.

To give you a more detailed idea of what is available, here is a rundown of the different materials. Costs are indicated in relative terms only: prices are hard to pin down because charges vary considerably across the country, and the type of house you have also influences the price. A siding job costs more per square foot on a Victorian house with corners, gables, and windows than it does on a less ornate contemporary house. Extra cutting and fitting around corners and windows not only sends labor costs up but creates more scrap.

Prices of siding are computed on a base unit of 100 square feet, which is referred to as a "square." A one-story house of seven rooms would take between 15 and 19 siding squares.

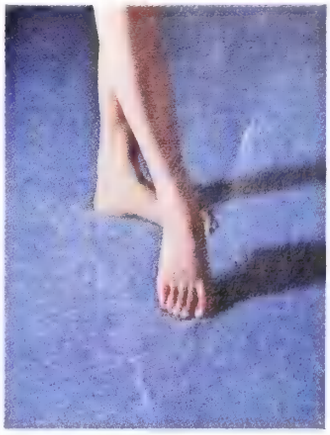
Many manufacturers are now giving out guarantees for the surfaces of their sidings. Generally this means that within the stated period the color surface of the siding is guaranteed not to split, peel, flake, chip, or blister away from the underneath material. But, strictly speaking, the guarantee does not guard against "repainting." No manufacturer can make a paint that will not fade slightly as the years go by. Such possible fading on low-maintenance siding is even, however, and hardly noticeable.

Aluminum



First introduced about 20 years ago, aluminum is now one of the giants of the siding industry. The alkyd paints that were first used have been much improved, and acrylic, vinyl, and plastisol finishes now permit aluminum manufacturers to give guarantees of up to 30 years. One maker with an improved PVC finish even offers a lifetime guarantee.

Aluminum has long been available in horizontal lap siding of several widths. Now vertical panels with either grooves or battens are made, as is a shake pattern. And most manufacturers offer both textured and smooth surfaces in some if not all styles. The colors available vary with the style and the manufacturer. Some have as few as four—whites, greens, yellows, and beiges, generally—and others have up to a dozen. Actually, however, more than 85 percent of the sales are in white. As to style, in spite of the plethora of offerings, the traditional smooth-surfaced clapboard continues to be the most popular.



The other piece of news in aluminum, besides the low-maintenance paint surfaces and the fertile imaginations of the designers, is in the insulation. Metal is known for its property as a re-

The new Harvard Bed Frame is guaranteed for 36,500 kerplunks* or 10 years.

(whichever comes first.)

With every kerplunk, your bed frame takes a beating. So we designed the new Harvard Frame to take a minimum of 36,500 kerplunks. Or 10 full years of support for bedding and people without flinching. That's our guarantee to you, in writing. • Won't any of the second best frames do as well? After all, some look similar and cost a little less. The answer is obvious — frail frames simply aren't kerplunkproof. If someone tries to sell you a bargain frame, see if it's guaranteed for 36,500 kerplunks. Ours is.

flective insulator (this holds for the steel sidings, too), but now you can also have thermally insulated aluminum. Many manufacturers offer siding with a built-in backer of insulation board or foam. This adds ten percent to the price, which means the insulated product might run from $80 to $115 per square. Aluminum, which is a medium- to high-priced material among sidings, would cost about $70 to $100, uninsulated.

Brick

Weighing about 4,000 pounds per square, real brick is almost never used for re-siding, but it is still used in one out of every four new houses. Along with natural stone, it is the highest priced of any siding, but it requires almost no maintenance an occasional repointing of the mortar joints, perhaps and has an almost unlimited life expectancy. Manufacturers have produced enough different colors, textures, and glazes to make plain old red brick more the exception than the rule, and they have also begun to produce new "antique" brick to meet a growing demand.

There are ways to get the look of brick without paying for the foundation work, however. Several companies have developed a cement product that is really a form of stucco. This is troweled on in layers, and then scored on the house when it is still wet, forming a brick pattern. Color is mixed into the top layer the material comes in 12 to 15 hues and carries a ten-year guarantee. The price for this material is comparable to that of plastic-finished aluminum.

Another possibility for re-siding to get the appearance of brick is the preformed masonry panel. One such product comes from the factory in 16′ by 52″ panels, each with 36 "bricks." The panels, $\frac{3}{8}$″ thick, are bonded to a half-inch insulating board and then nailed in place on the wall. Another company offers a one-inch-thick facing material made of real brick. The bricks, available in three colors, are nailed on individually through factory-made holes and then grouted when in place.

Fiberboard

This is a wood product made of laminated wood fibers. Until now, fiberboard was largely a durable, low-cost siding that came factory-primed, but the painting (and repainting) was left to the owner. Available in flat panels, 9″ and 12″ laps, and vertical board-and-batten styles, it was largely used for new houses. Now one maker has introduced a ten-year-guaranteed fiberboard with a new vinyl-bond finish that is factory-applied and comes in four colors.

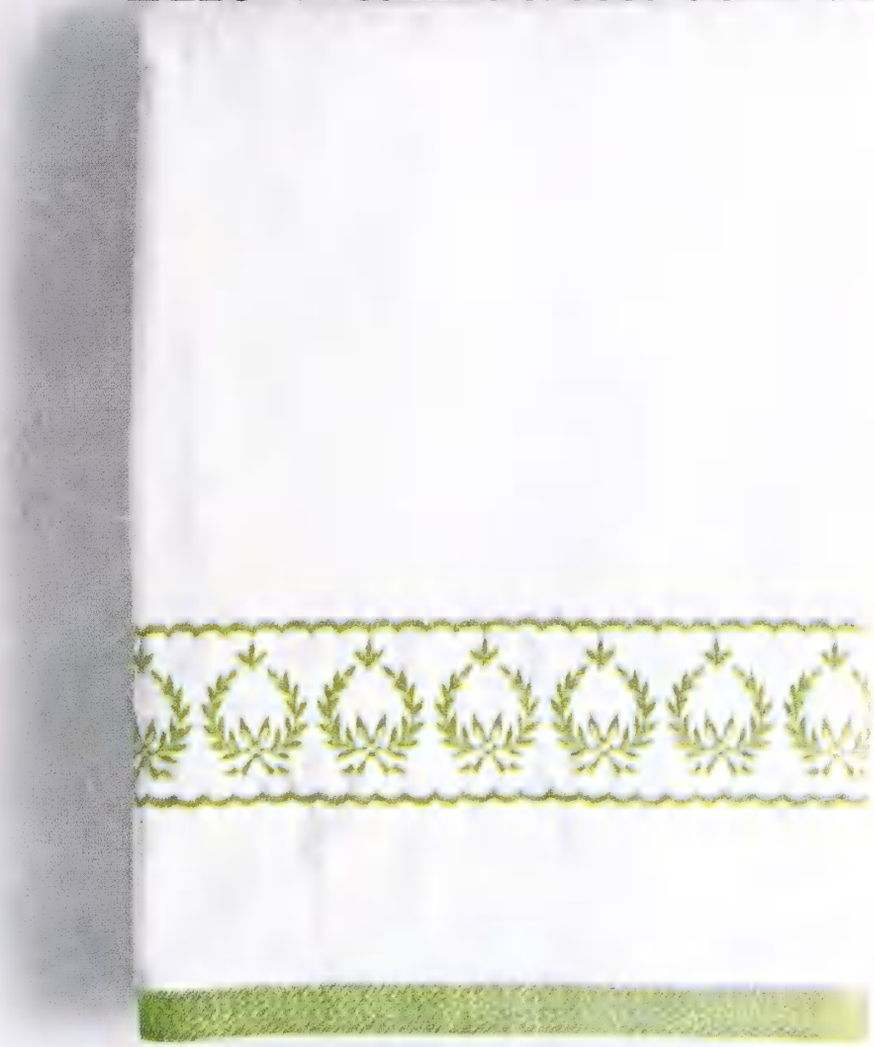
Fiber glass

Fiber glass is another of the new entries, and still near the top of the price list. Some varieties, molded to look like stone panels, would run to twice the cost of aluminum; other stone and brick patterns in fiber glass are a bit higher than aluminum.

Light and tough, fiber glass is especially suitable for making sidings with the appearance of brick or stone. One maker puts out three stone and three brick patterns (as well as one that looks like the wood siding of an old New England barn); all but one of these come in two or three colors. The material has an uneven color and texture, like the genuine article. It has been on the market for about seven years, and so far there has been no complaint of color-fade. If necessary, however, the material could be repainted with an ordinary latex paint.

Hardboard

Another wood product, hardboard is made by exploding wood chips, cleaning and refining them, and putting them back together under great heat and pressure. The resulting material is stronger than natural wood, and free from knots and surface irregularities. Available factory-primed, hardboard comes in laps and panels that can be grooved or battened, and can have either a smooth or a rough-sawn finish.



One manufacturer has also added a prefinished product that comes with a ten-year guarantee on color and 25 years on the actual hardboard itself. This prefinished line is available in white, beige, gray, and green. It comes in a lap siding and also a board-and-batten pattern—with snap-in battens to avoid exterior nailing.

Hardboard is largely used for new houses now, but could be

The Wamsutta towel.

There's more to this match than looks. There's something called "luxury"—the kind that made Wamsutta sheets a tradition. The kind that goes into Wamsutta towels. This is why our towels are so soft and absorbent. Why they add a touch of luxury to even the most "hurry up" bath. The Wamsutta towel: in styles that coordinate with Wamsutta sheets. used equally for re-siding. Preprimed hardboard is a medium-price siding; using the prefinished variety increases the cost by about 50 percent.

Mineral fiberboard

This is a revitalized version of the traditional blend of portland cement and asbestos fiber. The older product had a tendency to become brittle and fade over the years, but the new material, with a baked plastic finish, is hardly the same thing. Mineral fiberboard is available in a factory-primed version—either panels, or two sizes of laps—and is used for both new houses and re-siding. In re-siding, the product can go right on top of most other sidings. Installed, it costs $15 to $25 per square, and can be repainted with any latex or oil-based paint.

Manufacturers have also introduced a new prepainted mineral-fiber siding. This is available in about a dozen colors, and comes with a color guarantee of up to 20 years. The material is guaranteed for the life of the house.

Plywood

This material is available for exterior use factory prepainted in eleven different colors. Its manufacturer gives the color surface a 15-year guarantee which, with the life-of-the-building guarantee of the wood product, gives plywood a strong maintenance-free appeal. This product, surfaced with a Dupont polyvinyl fluoride film, is available in two lap widths, and both flat and batten paneling. Panels come in four sizes.

Prefinished plywood is not presently offered with a textured surface. Textured planking, panels, and laps are available, however, in a factory-primed condition. These are ready for—and require—either paint or stain. Among the choices for texture: rough-sawn, circular-sawn, striated, fine line, and brushed (a very pronounced grain). There is also the plywood panel mentioned before, with factory applied, spray-on stucco finish.

Plywood is in the medium-price range. The plastic-coated variety is, of course, more expensive; it would be an upper-medium-price siding, while the preprimed is low-medium. Plywood is used almost entirely on new construction, like the rest of the wood family. There is, however, no structural reason not to use it for re-siding.

Steel

Along with vinyl, steel is a newcomer to the siding market. The early steel sidings were coated with alkyd paints, but they have been much improved, and the present vinyl-, acrylic-, and plastisol-coated steels come with a surface guarantee of 20 years. One manufacturer offers a clapboard version in white and five other colors. Should you change your mind about the color, the siding can be repainted with a roller. Some textured surfaces are also available.

Most steel sidings being made are used for re-siding work, although steel goes on some new houses in the western part of the country. Steel siding prices compare to aluminum's.

(If you are worried about steel or aluminum as conductors of electricity, you needn't be. Many producers of nonmetal products make it a positive virtue that their materials are nonconductors. But, say the metal men, when a house is grounded with water pipes, electrical wiring, and the foundation itself, the siding material is irrelevant. With metal or wood, the chances of lightning striking are about the same.)

Stone

Real cut stone is too heavy for re-siding, costs even more than brick. New houses are sometimes done in stone, but most of the re-siding work is in reconstituted or simulated stone products. Fiber-glass "stone" panels, for example, are less expensive and lighter than stone, and can be applied over other sidings and cut with ordinary tools. The same advantages hold for the molded stone, except that, as of now, they are not as good an imitation as the fiber glass. Molded stone, made of crushed stone and a binding material, is usually nailed to the wall surface through either preformed loops or holes in the stone itself. It is often used for a less-than-total re-siding job—on a single wall, or in interior spots for a fireplace, planter, or contrasting wall. Molded stone is in the same price range with the fiber-glass simulated stone panels, which makes it medium-to-high-priced.

Stucco

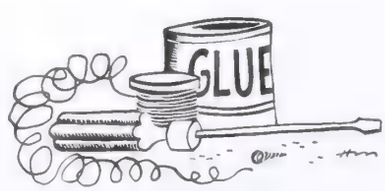
Stucco, the age-old sand-and-concrete mixture, still has a steady appeal in spite of competition from newer and more glamorous products. Low in cost, especially in the South, where its application is more common, stucco has the durability and maintenance-free characteristics of concrete. Its iron-oxide colors are mixed into the final layer of concrete material, when it is still in a liquid state, so the colors, unlimited in range, are an integral part of the material. The brick-face pattern mentioned before has outstripped the traditional rough-textured stucco in popularity. For both surfaces, whites, reds, and pinks are most commonly used.

Stucco is most often used for new houses; it tends to be quite expensive for re-siding, although some Northeastern builders claim it constitutes as much as 80 percent of their re-siding business. For re-siding, stucco trowled onto the house costs about as much as aluminum. In the South and the West, on new houses, or where it is pneumatically applied rather than trowled on, the cost comes down considerably.

Vinyl

The vinyl sidings are truly a product of the plastics age. On the market for less than five years, vinyl is the only solid plastic siding available. Technically known as a polyvinyl chloride, the vinyl siding is solid color, so there is no layer of applied color to peel off, flake, or chip. Vinyl is tough and dent-resistant, can be washed with the garden hose, and does not split or crack when subjected to normal temperature extremes. It carries a 20-year guarantee on color and surface and is probably good for nearer to 35 years. It is available in ivory, gray, green, and white; white is by far the most popular. It comes in two widths of lap and in vertical panels.

The bottleneck in vinyl siding is that there are only three firms that make it, and they sell all they can make. When they catch up with themselves, there may be more experimentation in color and in other products. Right now, vinyls are available with or without insulated backer panels and tend to cost slightly more than aluminum. No textured surfaces are available or are currently planned.



Wood

Faced with stiff competition from metal, fiber, and plastic products that imitate wood, the original material is hardly obsolete. For its workability and natural texture, wood is still used for both new houses and re-siding all across the country. Redwood sidings, for example, are available in laps, channel grooves, flush panels, and a board-and-batten effect. They can be stained, bleached, painted, or left unfinished to weather. Wooden shakes and shingles in cedar and other woods are increasingly popular. One company has produced shakes that come in panels for easy application—eleven panels cover 100 square feet, as opposed to about 250 individual shakes.

Many wood products are preprimed at the factory and ready for you to finish as you wish. Some also come with a water-repellent finish, which increases their durability and makes them a better surface to paint or stain. The preprimed woods are in the medium-to-low price range.

While the unfinished or "natural" finish is popular today, the lumber industry has also taken advantage of the new low-maintenance plastic finishes. Two companies now make wood products with a prepainted seven-year surface, and more work in this field is going on all the time.

How to get big effects with

INSTANT NEEDLEPOINT

These big, bold embroideries are worked on rug canvas with rug yarn. See actual size in color detail on page 216. Some stitches are worked on even larger canvas. Many are borrowed from needlepoint, but others have been adapted from those usually worked on closely woven fabric, such as linen.

Several stitches build up to considerable depth, giving a definite three-dimensional texture. Other flatter ones rely solely on the variation in color and spacing to give them pattern and design. These big stitches lend themselves best to producing a great variety of geometric designs made up of solid areas, diagonals, stripes, and zigzags.

You might want to do a sketch first on graph paper to decide what you'd like to do. Or do a trial run of various stitches on canvas (and then undo it, if you need your canvas) to see how suitable the designs are.

Canvas, yarn, and needles

The "Pat" rug yarn used in making all the pieces comes in a range of 216 colors, so you can work out almost any color scheme you wish. (See sample offer at end of article.) However, any big yarn that covers the canvas will do equally well. Not knowing the size of the project or which stitch you may choose (some use up wool faster than others), we cannot give you exact amounts of yarn. In any case, as it comes in ¼-pound skeins, you will have a fairly generous amount of each color to start with. A good rule of thumb is that ¼ pound of yarn will usually cover at least a half square foot of canvas. Chances are that once you have done this kind of embroidery, you will go on with other color-coordinated pieces, so your initial investment in yarn will be put to good use.

Some stitches cover the canvas better than others, so in addition to the five-mesh-to-an-inch canvas you see in the color detail, certain stitches are worked on an even larger 3½-mesh-to-an-inch canvas. In the individual directions, the canvas most suitable for that particular stitch is specified. The two threads closest together compose one bar, the larger space between is the hole for the needle.

The needles used are Boye #13 Tapestry and Yarn Neeedles, which come two to a package. We suggest that you buy four needles, as in several of the designs you will be alternating colors frequently, and to save both time and yarn it is economical to keep one needle threaded in each color.

General working methods

The canvas count is only approximate and varies very slightly in the two directions. Therefore, in planning a piece that must measure an exact size, it is best to measure with a ruler to the nearest mesh and mark an outline with magic marker, indelible ink, or basting thread; then place the design within that area. Except on rug borders, allow at least a two-inch margin of canvas outside the design on all sides. The stitches we show can be worked either across the canvas from selvage to selvage, or lengthwise, depending on which way is the most economical when laying out your particular design on the canvas. Both canvases are 40" wide and can be bought by the running yard. Canvas should be taped or bound on all edges to keep it from fraying. This can be done with masking tape or sewn-on cotton tape, or by sewing around the edge with a zigzag sewing machine, or even by painting about ⅛" of the edge with white glue.

In order to keep your design properly oriented to the canvas, it is wise to place a safety pin or other marker on the edge you consider the top of the design. Because this is a heavier yarn and larger canvas than you have perhaps worked with before, it may seem slightly strange to you.

Avoid any urge to pull the stitches tight. They should be pulled only tight enough to take up all the slack but still allow the yarn to look puffy. Try to develop an even rhythm so that stitches appear uniform.

Never make a knot in the end of your yarn. Anchor the strand by weaving an inch or so into the canvas under the stitches to be worked. Finish a strand by weaving it under the area just finished. This is to avoid unsightly bumps along the edge.

All stitch diagrams are numbered to show movements of needle in sequence, coming up from underneath the canvas on odd numbers and down into it on even numbers. As the canvas is stiff and rather large, it is easiest, once a strand has been anchored and brought through the canvas at the starting point, numbered 1, to combine a passage down and up again in a single movement.

If any stitches must be taken out, always unthread the needle and pull them out with eye end of the needle. Never try to work back with the needle; you will inevitably go through a strand of a previous stitch and lock it so that it cannot be pulled out.

Yarn sometimes tends to become twisted, tightly or loosely, according to the way you work. If this is so, learn to compensate by rolling the needle slightly between your fingers in the opposite direction every stitch or two, so that the yarn retains its normal twist at all times.

If you have worked in a proper tension, none of these stitches should distort the canvas, and it should not need to be blocked or even pressed.

Rice stitch: This stitch is done on 3½-mesh-to-an-inch canvas. It consists of a cross-stitch worked over two bars and an additional short stitch worked over each leg. It seems economical of yarn to complete each unit before proceeding to the next. Always make the original cross in the same direction. Work one row across the canvas for the desired length; then turn the canvas around and work the next row back. The rows tend to have a slightly paired look. In order to keep this consistent, it is best to interrupt work with a row unfinished to avoid starting a new row in the wrong direction.

French knot: The pattern of French knots was worked over the centers of the rice stitches with yarn doubled. To make a French knot, hold the point of the needle near the surface of the work, pass yarn around the point of the needle, and push the needle through loop and canvas, drawing the yarn completely through.

Valance and headboard (page 216)

The valance and headboard were worked in French stitch, using four colors plus white to form irregular zigzags.

French stitch: This stitch lends itself particularly well to a zigzag pattern, as it always progresses from unit to unit in a diagonal fashion. It is worked on a 3½-mesh-to-an-inch canvas. Notice stitches 1-2 and 5-6 are worked into the same holes. The dotted stitches show where the second unit starts, depending on which diagonal direction the pattern you wish to make calls for.

Gold, beige, and white pillow against boister (page 216)

This pillow was worked in rows of six-trip herringbone stitch.

Six-trip herringbone stitch: This stitch is worked on five-to-an-inch canvas. (See full-size detail on page 216.) In order to give the greatest feeling of depth to the stitch, trips one and two are worked with the darkest color of yarn, three and four with the medium-dark color, and five and six with the lightest. Laying out the first trip—shown on the diagram with the solid numbered line—is the most difficult. Check to see that you have five bars between stitches at both top and bottom of this trip to allow space for the five remaining trips. After this trip has been worked, the other trips, shown in dotted lines, follow in succession without the need of counting. (Begin the fifth and sixth trips upward.)

To keep a straight edge, notice where each trip starts and in what direction it goes on the diagram, completing trips ending design in straight line, as in the beginning. Succeeding rows are worked exactly like the first row, with no thread of canvas showing between.

Pillow and bench pad (page 217)

Pillow in orange and white, and bench pad in orange, white, and two shades of magenta are both worked in variations of fly stitch.

Fly stitch: This is a stitch adapted from fabric embroidery and is relatively flat, relying on variations in color, size, and alternation of rows to give it character. It is worked on five-mesh-to-an-inch canvas in vertical rows. Diagram 6 (diagram of a single stitch) shows how a stitch is Poor Harry. He tries so hard to be helpful.

But the inevitable always seems to happen. All over the Four Seasons carpeting.

Harry's wife doesn't worry, though. Four Seasons by General Felt Industries was meant to take abuse.

After all, it's indoor-outdoor carpeting made with face of 100% Marvess® olefin, a Phillips 66 fiber.

Four Seasons is practically impossible to stain. Spots and spills wipe right off. It resists rot, mildew, stretching, shrinking and fading, too. All of which makes it ideal for basements, family rooms, kitchens, poolsides, patios—any number of areas you never dared carpet before.

Whether there's a Harry in your house or not, you'll appreciate Four Seasons carpeting. Look for it in handsome colors at your floor covering dealer worked. Diagram 7 (diagram of several vertical rows) shows some of the ways size and color can be varied. There are, of course, many more possibilities.

Please notice how, in this case, the orange stitches, shown by dotted lines, were carried continuously across each row, even though all other colors vary. Of course, this could be done with any dominant color and is a good basic rule for making a design hold together well. Before changing color, pull previous color to the front in the hole you will next be using it in, and leave threaded needle hanging.

The orange-and-white pillow is made entirely in rows of the fly stitch worked over four bars, contrasted to the varying wi and narrow rows of the ben pad, where some rows are work over two bars. In our pillow, so rows of orange are alternat with rows consisting of thi stitches of orange, then six white, three of orange, etc. T general principle lends itself many further variations.

Rug border in zigzag chain stitch (page 217)

In planning a border such as this which is to be attached to a center of broadloom carpet, it is wise to purchase the carpet center first, so that the yarn colors of the border can be properly keyed to it and the size fitted to it exactly. Karastan, and probably other fine carpets, comes in three-, six-, and nine-foot widths as well as the more standard 27" and twelve-foot widths. Having decided the rug size and border you wish to make, have the broadloom cut to exactly the right size.

This border is worked on a $3\frac{1}{2}$-mesh-to-an-inch canvas. Strips of canvas to compose the border should measure the finished width of border desired plus three meshes (about one inch), to be turned in as an outside hem, plus at least three meshes to allow for joining to the carpet center. O border measures $8\frac{1}{4}$" wide a is composed of 27 stripes of col (requiring 28 meshes of canv because of the zigzag). Adding this the three meshes for hem a three meshes for joining to t carpet makes 34 meshes mi mum for the width of each strip

As an afterthought on our pa by making this border just o stripe narrower, all four stri could have been cut from one 4 width of canvas, a great saving canvas. (The selvage, except f two inner threads, should be c away.) As we are not giving rections for specific sizes of ru or borders, you will need to ma your own layout, similar to di gram 8. Add the margin and he to decide how much canvas buy and how to cut it.

THE $60 DIFFERENCE

e Heritage craftsman guides the dowels into place, extends the curve of the arm to the back and sets the ic design. When a chair, or any piece of furniture, takes its shape from its frame and not just the bulge of padding, only more money can buy it.

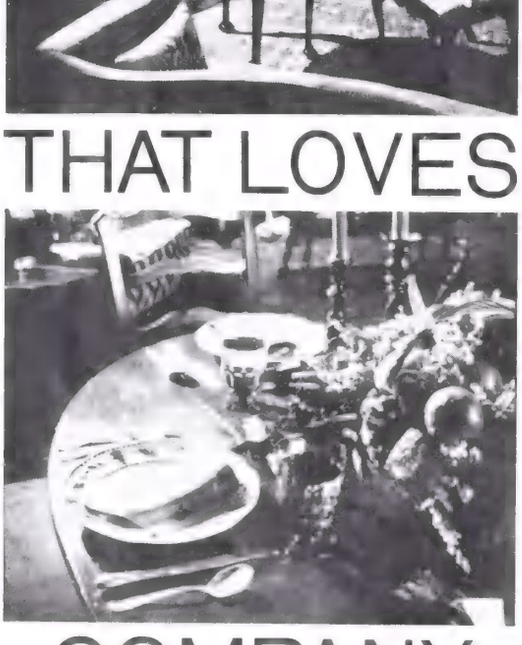
You might be able to buy a chair that looks like one from this pair for about $260. But you won't be buying the same chair or one that's even close. As time will tell when the springs go their own way, the fabric pulls away from a welt and your chair loses the comfort and the looks you bought in the showroom.

Upholstered in this elegant cut velvet, one of these Heritage swivel base lounge chairs will cost you about $320. Or $60 more than its look-alike.

Cut to form the basic design of this chair alone, the parts of the frame were carved or cut and locked into one solid unit. The springs it supported were tied to the frame and to one another. Then the Heritage upholsterer stretched, shaped and stitched layer on layer of batting over the lines set down by the frame. By the time the fabric was fitted, the contours of the chair were true to the frame, the final repeat of the basic design.

The higher price on this chair, or any other piece of furniture we make, buys something that only more money can buy. Whether it's our concern for the support that holds the lines and ensures the look of a chair. Or the way we'll take the time to bring a wood to its fullest beauty by hand... because no machine or shortcut method can match it.

When you see work like this, you'll find the Heritage name. Stitched on the platform under the cushions of this pair of Heritage chairs. Burned inside the drawers of a mahogany Heritage lowboy. Stitched under the cushions and swinging on a hangtag from a crushed velvet Heritage sofa.



If you would like to know more about Heritage and see how it could fit into your home, send two dollars for a Heritage catalog collection and room planning kit to Dept. HB-10-67, Heritage Furniture Company, High Point, North Carolina.

For rug border, do not bind edges of canvas but fix them on all sides with white glue so that they do not unravel. Suspend the strips so that they do not stick to anything while drying.

Beginning with the first strip on the outside edge (see arrow on diagram 8), turn in three meshes for a hem—turning e actly on the bar so that holes incide—and work directly throu it in zigzag stitch (diagram 9).

Beginning a few inches fr the corner of the first side, wo all the strips of color until y are approaching the joining the second side. Notice that never start new lengths of yarn exactly the same place, in orc to avoid a lumpy line.

9. Zigzag Chain Stitch

DRAWINGS BY ALICE UCHIYAMA

Joining: Lap three meshes of the first side over the second side and join in zigzag backstitch with carpet-sewing thread used double. Miter embroidery as shown in diagram, and embroider strip to next corner. (At corner and joinings, there will be four layers of canvas in the hem.) However, by working the needle straight up, then straight down again in separate movements, it is possible to keep the four layers in line.

At the second corner, carefully adjust the joining to fit the carpet center exactly with the proper allowance for joining. In working this corner and remaining corners, start the miter of the embroidery with the row nearest the carpet, and work toward the outer edge in succeeding rows.

Finishing outer edge: After border joinings are completed, finish outside edge with wrap-around binding stitch.

Wraparound binding stitch: Anchor yarn and come through the first hole on edge from back to front. Skip the second and third hole along edge and, carrying yarn back over the edge of the canvas, come through the fourth hole, from back to front. Carry yarn back over edge of canvas and go back to the second hole, again coming through from back to front. Go forward to the fifth hole, then back to the third.

Notice that you are progressing one hole each time by always going forward four holes a back only three, and that you a always coming through the ca vas from back to front. To tu the corner, simply work sufficie stitches over and over in the c ner hole to cover the canvas co pletely; than proceed with t binding stitch. After you ha gone completely around the r to the starting point, join invi bly by sliding the needle und the first two stitches when co ing through the required holes.

Joining border to carpet: Cl inner corners of the canvas that the three-mesh allowance c be temporarily turned back. Wi safety pins, "baste" carpet place at corners and at sever intervals in between.

Working from the back, wh edges of carpet and border toget er using carpet-sewing thread a a sailmaker's needle. Use a whi ping-over stitch, going about ⅛ into the carpet and over the b and well into the wool of t border. This seam is easier to if a round object such as a broo stick is put under the line you a sewing, parallel to the seam.

After the border has been co pletely sewed to the carpet, tu the canvas allowance back und it and cement it in place wi latex rug cement.

WHAT YOU CAN LEARN FROM "FRÈRE JACQUES"

A few not-so-idle thoughts on what the simplest melody can tell us about the listening experience

By ALAN RICH

All too often, we are made to imagine that listening to music is a kind of occult practice. We pick up a book on music appreciation or read the notes on a record jacket and are confronted with a jungle of new and unfamiliar words. The author uses the words to help the listener along the path toward greater enjoyment, and often they do. But it can also happen that the very words designed to help some listeners can throw others off. The readers may justifiably ask, "What do all these strange words mean? What are we, who only want enjoyment, to do with such things as harmony, counterpoint, phrase, and tonality? Why can't you just let us alone to bask in the pretty sounds, while we turn off the thought processes and relax?"

There is a valid point in asking such questions. Music is, or ought to be, a source of pleasurable entertainment. Very often this very quality is killed, or at least undermined, by dry analytical description. The basic power of music or any art, for that matter, is something beyond the reach of words; therein lies the very mystery that is at the heart of the artistic experience.

Nevertheless, certain of the elements in the musical language can be named and identified. And when we recognize these elements, that recognition can serve to enhance our listening. A name or a label cannot stand in for an object, but once we know that name or label, we can often come closer to the object itself. It becomes an attention-getter.

We do not have to venture into the realm of abstruse or complex music to uncover the basic vocabulary. The things that hold true for the most complicated piece of music also hold true for the most elementary.

Take, for example, a tune we have all known since childhood, the French folk song "Frère Jacques." Nothing could be simpler, yet the tune contains a complete musical lesson in itself.

Sing the tune, and at the same time try beating time to it, by tapping your foot on the floor or your finger on a table. You will notice that some notes seem stronger than others: "FRÈ-re JAC-ques FRÈ-re JAC-ques . . ." Every other note receives a stress. If you keep that beat going, you will also notice that toward the end there are faster-moving notes, so that there are more weak beats between the strong ones: "SON-nez les ma-TI-nes, SON-nez les ma-TI-nes."

From this observation, you have uncovered the quality in music known as rhythm, the means of organizing the forward motion of a composition into units of time, notes of greater or less duration relative to each other. You have also noticed the natural tendency of these rhythmic units to group themselves into larger units: a strong beat followed by a weak beat. Each of these strong-plus-weak groups is a measure of music. In this case a measure consists of one strong beat plus one weak beat, for a total of two; in other pieces, a strong beat might be followed by two weak beats for a total of three per measure. "The Star-Spangled Banner" is a familiar example of a piece organized in threes.

Sound simple? Let's move on to something a little more subtle. If you sing the whole tune through, you will probably feel it is divided into four large sections, each consisting of four of these two-beat measures: (1) "Frère Jacques, Frère Jacques," (2) "Dormez-vous, dormez-vous?" (3) "Sonnez les matines, sonnez les matines," and (4) "Ding dang dong, ding dang dong." We call each of these units a phrase, so that we can say that our melody consists of four phrases, which in this particular case are of equal length.

But, although these phrases are of equal length, they are not the same in other respects. Notice how, as we pass from the first phrase to the second, the pitch of the notes moves up the scale, while in the third phrase we move even higher and then come down, and in the last phrase we end on the same note on which we began. In other words, even within this simple four-phrase melody our composer (who is unknown, since this is a very old folk tune) has created a kind of artistic shape that moves upward to a climax (on the word "sonnez") and then comes back down again.

Here, in the very briefest sense, we have a fine example of musical form. The problem of organizing a piece so that it moves along to some sort of climax and then resolves itself is the principal task facing any composer. What was true in the few seconds of "Frère Jacques" is equally true in the 45 minutes of Beethoven's Eroica symphony, and it is also true in all other artistic media.

Our little folk melody teaches us other things as well. As we noted, it begins and ends on the same note. This means that there is one note that seems to the composer to be more important than the others, something which serves as a point of departure and an ultimate goal. The tendency of a piece of music to drive toward a certain note is what we call tonality or key, and that crucial note is called the tonic note or keynote.

Also, the melody itself is set in the major mode. There are two modes, major and minor. The difference between them is one of the many things about music that are hard to put into words, but in the case of "Frère Jacques" we have a very handy way to tell the difference. The Austrian composer Gustav Mahler used this tune at the beginning of the third movement of his First Symphony, but transformed it into the minor mode. If you compare the tune as we have been singing it with the way it appears in the Mahler work, you should recognize the difference between the two modes. (In school you may have been told that "major is happy and minor is sad," but that's a dangerous generality. There is plenty of sad music in the major mode, and as much joyous as sad music in the minor.)

We have already covered a sizable musical vocabulary, but we haven't yet exhausted the richness of "Frère Jacques." You may remember that to perform this song properly you need four singers. One begins it; then, when he reaches the second phrase, the second singer begins; the third comes in when the first singer reaches the third phrase, and so on. When the tune is going full blast, the four are each singing their own lines, so that at any given moment four different things are going on.

A musical texture in which several lines of music (or the same line of music at different time intervals) occur simultaneously is called counterpoint. The ear takes in all this interweaving among the various lines and thus grasps a total fabric. But at any point the ear also hears the blend that occurs from the four different notes. This is called harmony. A good analogy is this: Counterpoint is the horizontal interaction of musical lines, proceeding forward in time, while harmony is the vertical interaction, the cross section downward through the action.

The song was written to be performed by singers, but there is nothing to stop us from playing it on the piano or the organ, or from arranging it for a brass band or symphony orchestra. In each guise we are presented with a different tone color or timbre. We can also, if we wish, perform it quickly or slowly, thus varying the tempo.

Perhaps we have now approached the point where "Frère Jacques" has been wrung dry of its secrets. We have extracted a good dozen of the basic musical terms from its simple structure, terms no less basic to the consideration of any musical composition the ages have produced.

Have we, in the process, harmed or enhanced the song itself? Probably neither, because the lasting popularity of this little folk melody cannot be expressed in any of the dozen labels we have extracted. These labels give us something to point at the next time we hear it performed and will prove equally handy for any other piece that comes our way. But the important thing to remember is that you cannot affect the work itself with its names. ■

BORDER PLANTS WITH BLUE FOLIAGE

By ELSIE LOUISE SCULTHORP

Plants with colored foliage have one great advantage—they stay on the job for a longer part of the year than flowers do, often lasting well into the winter. Foliage of many colors can be used to advantage as accents or to complete a color scheme, but blue foliage is probably the quietest and most restful color for a border. It gives an indistinct and charming effect—a good contrast for the gay colors of the flowers, and if planted in the shade, it makes the shadowy places even softer and mistier.

There are numerous variations in blue coloring. Some plants have foliage of a striking steel-blue; some have leaves of varying shades of blue-green; some have whitish, grayish, frosty, or silvery blue; some have opalescent blue. The stronger the shade, the more care should be exercised in its use.

One of the best and most useful of the plants with blue-gray leaves is the plantain lily (Hosta sieboldiana). This is a stately border plant; handsome, too, in shady places. A hot, dry situation seems to produce better color in the foliage. The plant makes a large, compact mound of beautiful, large, blue-gray leaves and produces short spires of lavender bells. It is more useful for its leaves than for its flowers, but it has a fine ef wherever planted and is an cellent accent.

We often see the tall, bear iris with blue-green-gray folia and recognize the relative of old-fashioned sweet iris (pallida). But when not in flow the clumps of softly colored liage are striking in the bor and the foliage remains g looking well into autumn.

Lovage (Levisticum off nale), a perennial herb plan and loved since the beginning gardens, is well worth a place the border. It has many divi leaves of dark, shining bl green, making clumps ab three feet tall, and it bears c ters of green-yellow carrot fl ers. Once in a while a product comes along that is simply good for people.

Such a product is Vent-Away*

It is a unique part of several American-Standard toilet models. Its function is to automatically expel unpleasant odors which may occur during toilet use. The principle is simple. Any offensiveness is drawn away by a vacuum Vent-Away creates. Down the drain it goes. Never into the room.

Interestingly, Vent-Away operates by water pressure alone. It's built in at the factory, has no moving parts, nothing to cause a service problem. You lift the handle to start Vent-Away—press down to flush and stop action.

Our Compact/Vent-Away model is modestly priced and is an easy replacement. It can probably be installed in about an hour. The installed cost will most likely be less than $150 (colors slightly higher).

A small cost, indeed, for a most considerate product.

Another American-Standard product that is good for people is Stan-Sure*, the new, built-in slip-resistant surface for better bathtubs. The tasteful "Polka Dot" design provides a surefootedness never before possible. (Four times safer than ordinary bathtubs.) Yet the tub bottom isn't rough while standing or sitting. Cleans easily, too. Need we say more.

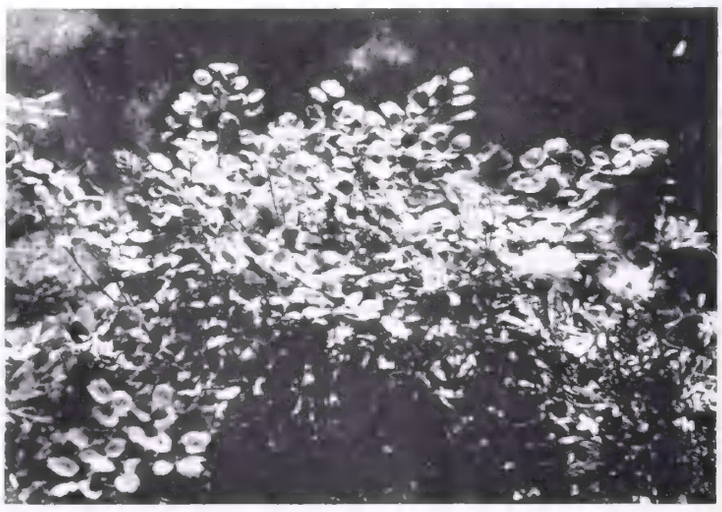
lightfully perfumed flowers. It is frequently used as an edging, and the lower kinds could be used as a ground cover in a sunny spot. There are hundreds of species, with much variation in the heights and growth habits from tiny, low mounds to some that grow about a foot high. The foliage of all species, in both texture and color, is indispensable in the garden.

Herb of grace (Ruta graveolens) is an interesting member of the rue family, which includes citrus fruits, gasplant, and many fragrant trees and shrubs. It has been grown since ancient times, and was a necessary flavoring for meats in the days when there was no ice to keep food fresh in summer. It is a beautiful plant, easily grown but seldom seen; a very satisfactory perennial, long-lived, in a permanent cloak of foliage about two feet high. The strongly scented opalescent-blue leaves are divided, with rounded leaflets. The plant bears flat clusters of small, bright-yellow flowers of not much value. It is one of the best of the fragrant plants for bluish foliage, useful near the front of the border.

Sea holly (Eryngium maritimum), with its hollylike leaves and its spiny, metallic-blue thistlelike flower heads, is an attention-getter in the border, decidedly attractive, and also useful for cutting. Amethyst eryngium is a beautiful plant that develops into a fine clump of decorative blue-gray foliage, with many amethyst-blue flower heads, creating a stunning effect. It needs sandy loam and a good, sunny spot.



For a fragrant plant with silvery-bluish foliage, you can't do better than the charming, aromatic old favorite, lavender. There are different kinds, with flowers varying in color from lavender to a deep purple-blue; the commonest kind has the bluest foliage. They attain a height of one or two feet, and, where hardy, make an admirable appearance.

The horn poppy or seed poppy (Glaucium flavum) has toothed leaves of bluish white, and bears large poppylike yellow or orange flowers, interesting and showy. It is a biennial, but seeds itself freely and is easily cultivated. It likes plenty of sun.

One of the most delightful of all the blue-tinted foliage plants is the stonecrop (Sedum). It's an appealing, small plant with rounded, fleshy, blue leaves, and little clusters of deep-pink flowers at the ends of trailing stems. Flourishes in September and into October. This is a popular plant for a hanging basket.

Here are some other suggestions for blue-leaved plants: A small edition of sweet woodruff (Asperula odorata), which has narrow, very blue-green foliage and tiny, white, misty flower clusters. Creeping baby's breath (Gypsophila repens), with its small blue-green leaves, is wonderful for small stone walls. Blue fescue (Festuca glauca), a lovely small grass with blue leaves, grows in small tufts, rather like small dianthus. It has little pale-yellow flower plumes about a foot high. Excellent for an edging; it does not spread.

Visit a good nursery and search for plants with blue leaves. You'll find surprising treasures that will be delightful in your garden. ■

SET THE STAGE FOR SPRING

Bulbs to plant now

The golden-yellow of winter aconite (Eranthis hyema'is) sometimes appears with the white of a late snow. It's a refreshing preview of spring, and the foliage is attractive after the flowers have gone.

Puschkinia (P. scilloides) has charming informal flowers of ruffled white —with a soft blue cast. It's a fine companion for major bulbs that bloom in late March or at the beginning of April.

MALAK

The range of clear, soft colors—in white, pink, yellow, and rose—makes the trout lily (Erythronium) one of the most delightful early bulbs. Notice the interesting shadings of color on the foliage. ■

Pianola is the player-piano for music lovers. You can run through your entire romantic repertoire and never lift a finger to the keyboard. Or plug in Pianola and sit together on the sofa while it plays your song.

Or dial the right key for close harmony. Just put your best feet forward. You'll make beautiful music with Pianola expression controls. If there's a piano player in the house, he too, can make beautiful music with Pianola.®

What more can we say, young lovers?

When panels are closed, Pianola looks like a regular piano, plays like one. In fact, it is. Pianola starts at $985.

A letter or postcard will get you all there is to know about Pianola free: full color, full-of-fashion booklet and the words of "Morton Gould on The Player-Piano" and how it helps piano students learn more, faster. Write: PIANOLA, Dept. HBL, 33 West 57th Street, New York, N. Y. 10019

Can your child read these words?

napkin	fuzzy	liquid	punch	camel
misty	chicken	velvet	whisper	zigzag

Your child will learn how to read these and more than 300 other words after working with the very first record of The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

Try out this Phonics Course FREE FOR TWO WEEKS with your child in your own home—without risking a penny. Mail the coupon below.

If your child is a poor reader, if he has not been able to keep up with his class in school—here is a way that you can help him. Many parents have seen their poor readers gain up to a full year's grade in reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

Tested and Proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

Help Your Child Now

So don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Try it free for two weeks. You send no money—just mail coupon.

USED BY 80,000 PARENTS who send many letters like these:

Advanced two grades—"Larry was having a really hard time in second grade until he took your phonics course. Then, in two months, his grades went from D's and F's to A's and B's. I cannot give your course enough praise."
Mrs. Muriel Rich, Fairfax, Va.

Better marks—"At the end of his first semester in fourth grade, Gerald's highest mark was a D-minus. After working 6 weeks with the records his lowest mark was C."
Mrs. William Leger, Buffalo, S. Dak.

Four sons—"In twelve weeks, two of our boys brought up their reading grades from D to B. And our other two came up from D to C. I'll never get more for my money than I already have with your course."
Mr. John Gehde, Jr., Cassville, Wis.

IN 11,000 SCHOOLS
Teachers are highly enthusiastic

Recommends to parents—"We are using your course for remedial work in reading and phonics instruction. The children have been greatly helped. I recommend it to parents as a home-tutoring course for poor readers."
R. E. Pinson, Principal, Augusta, Ga.

A pleasure to hear my class read—"I am just delighted. In the last twelve weeks 22 of my 29 fourth grade pupils brought up their scores in silent reading. Their oral reading is so improved it's a pleasure to hear them now."
Mary L. Henderson, Crowley, La.

"EVERY PAINTING A MASTERPIECE"

● Magnificently painted on canvas from old or new photos, by outstanding European and American artists. A superb living likeness in full color is executed in rich oils.

● 12 portrait painters to choose from Van Dyke Oil Portraits from photographs, are indistinguishable from those done from life. It is of special advantage to those who are not available for personal sittings. All that our artists require (besides the photograph), to create a superb living likeness is a description of the color of the subject's hair, eyes, complexion.

No longer need you envy those fortunate enough to own a family portrait . . . you, too, can now own one. Like them you can see immortalized, for all time, the loved and never ageing personality of your wife, husband, children, parents, grandma or grandad, each faithfully captured at a particular moment of their lives.

Van Dyke Oil Portraits are TRUE WORKS OF ART, painted from your photograph and not on top of an enlargement of your photo as is the method of other commercial portrait services. The latter commercial method has a life span of about two years, while our genuine PORTRAITS IN OIL will last for many centuries.

● UNBELIEVABLE WORKS OF ART AT UNBELIEVABLE LOW PRICES

12" x 16" Canvas Size TO 30" x 40" Canvas Size

$49.50 TO $695.00

Does Barwick carpeting of Fortrel keep its beauty too long?

It's possible. You can get so tired of a carpet you'd like to take an axe to it. And it is hard to retire a carpet to another room if it still looks lush and thick and beautiful. But wouldn't you like to have that problem? Take this glorious textured shag from Barwick, for example. It's made of 100% Fortrel polyester. The shag stays resilient. The color stays alive. It's moth-proof, non-allergenic, and cleans like a dream. And of course the Around Town styling is purely and elegantly Barwick. So rush to your nearest dealer and go mad trying to choose from 26 passionate colors, including tweeds. The cost is less than you're guessing right now.

Remodeling with Marlite is so simple, you'll wonder why you lived with the old room so long. This easy-to-handle paneling goes up fast with ordinary carpenter tools. You can go from "before" to "after" in just one weekend.

Once up, Marlite stays fresh as new in spite of dirt, smoke, stains or rough-and-tumble kids. Its rugged wash-and-wear finish is soilproof—wipes clean as easily as the surface of your refrigerator.

In fact, the only hard part is picking out the Marlite paneling you like best. Choose from textures you can actually feel, bold or subtle colors, distinctive patterns and designs. Your building materials dealer will help you get started. Send us a snapshot of your "after."

Royal® Birch Cabinets with Medallion* Trim

We went back to the 18th Century for inspiration in creating Medallion Trim for Scheirich Cabinets—similar designs from ancient Greece and Rome were brought to England and used by the Adam brothers and Hepplewhite in their magnificent architectural and furniture creations. Sophisticated manufacturing techniques now make it possible for us to bring you this type of ornamentation on Scheirich Cabinets.

Superb materials, fine workmanship and durability of finish—all are yours whether you have a magnificent "dream" kitchen or a space-saving efficiency arrangement. But best of all, your kitchen is beautiful to live in and work in. See your builder or kitchen dealer today and learn why Scheirich is known for making "the most beautiful kitchens of them all."

Scheirich Cabinets in Medallion Trim come in both Royal® Birch and Bronzeglow® Birch. Both finishes are also available in French Provincial and Standard styling. And all styles are available in a wide assortment of cabinet sizes.

RESTORATION OF SHAKERTOWN AT PLEASANT HILL IN KENTUCKY (near Lexington) is progressing rapidly, and has attracted visitors from every state. The simple life of the devout souls who made up the Shaker community of the 19th Century apparently has special meaning for those living in the more complex world of the 20th Century. Due to our interest in historic antecedents of the modern kitchen, we are assisting in restoration of the kitchen exhibit at Center Family House in Shakertown.

Meet Antron*. The new carpet fiber for enduring elegance.

Consider the elegance of a luxurious carpet. Consider that you're going to walk all over it.
Then consider "Antron".
"Antron" is a nylon carpet fiber. It's beautiful, luxurious and durable.
So durable it's known as the carpet fiber that keeps its new look longer. The secret?
"Antron" hides soil. (Its fibers have been chemically modified by Du Pont.)
"Antron" nylon is now being used by leading carpet makers. For underfoot luxury that lasts.
So go on, pamper yourself. Right now. October is Carpet-Your-Bedroom Month, you know.

*Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. for Du Pont nylon fiber. Du Pont makes fibers, not carpets.

This year, give a gift of California Sunshine

The richest, tastiest Fruit Cake ever made!

80% whole California fruits and nuts, just 20% heavenly light batter! That's a Mission Pak fruit cake. A taste delight without equal. Anywhere. Hundreds of thousands of people have tried it and reordered. We're not surprised, because it took seven long years to perfect this glorious recipe. Blending loads of luscious whole California fruits—big red cherries, hearty chunks of moist pineapple, tender seedless white figs—all glacéd as only Mission Pak does it (with pure orange blossom honey). Adding plenty of crunchy, new-crop pecans and walnuts. And suspending it all in a golden light batter. Truly delicious! A holiday gift you can give proudly (all year 'round). And great to have on hand to treat your own guests. Packed in its own tin to keep firm and fresh for months. But only a limited number available, so order early.

Sad and hungry, Lin San asked our CCF worker: "Please, help me find my mother."

"Please, help me find my mother"

Little Lin San has been wandering all day through the streets of Taipei, Formosa, looking for her mother.

Now it is almost dark and she is cold, hungry and frightened.

Our CCF staff worker found her here, leaning against this rough wall. Lin San looked up and asked, "Please, help me find my mother."

But Lin San didn't know her family name or where she lived. So we took her into one of our Homes, and for months advertised in the paper, checked daily with the police—yet never found her mother.

Was Lin San abandoned? Lost? Are her parents even still alive? We will probably never know.

All we can do now is appeal to Americans to help us care for her in a Home where another "mother" will lovingly tuck her into bed every night.

And she is only one of thousands —children who look to us for love and care. Since 1938, Americans have been sponsoring such children, sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

For only $12 a month, you too can help a child like Lin San. You will receive a photograph, personal history and the opportunity to write letters.

Your child will know who you are, and will answer your correspondence. You can send a special gift at Christmas or for a birthday.

You will find that helping a needy child this way is an intimate, person-to-person experience. CCF programs overseas are approved as having met the conditions of registration with the United States AID's Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid.

Little Lin San and children like her need your love. So won't you help? Today? Thank you.

Sponsors urgently needed this month for children in Korea, Taiwan, India, Brazil. (Or let us select a child for you from our emergency list.)
